Leaders Ask Recesses, Adjournment June 16; To Honor Byrns Today

Hope to Leave Tax Bill to Conferees During Cleveland Parley.

Death of Speaker Ends Rush to Quit

Survey Indicates Defeat of Black-LaFollette Corporate Levies.

The stampede to adjourn Congress before the Republican National Convention was suddenly quieted yesterday, as all legislation temporarily was laid aside while both Houses recessed in tribute to the late Speaker, Joseph W. Byrns.

"Sine die" adjournment automatically was postponed at least a week. Hurriedly revising their parliamentary program, leaders set June 15 or 16 as the new tentative date for winding up the business of the session.

The new strategy calls for passage of the controverted tax bill in the Senate today or tomorrow, appointment of conferees by House and Senate, and a continuous tax session by the conference committee during the period of the Republican convention. When Congress returns, June 15, leaders hope all legislation will be in shape for final passage.

Three-Day Recess.

This program calls for a series of three-day recesses, beginning tomorrow night. While the convention is in progress, no formal sessions of either House will be held, but perfunctorily every three days, both chambers will be called to order only to recess again. Only presiding officers and one majority member need be in attendance for that purpose.

Paving the way for the recesses, the House yesterday adopted the necessary resolution.

The Senate will resume early today its consideration of the tax bill, and, unless the Administration fight to stiffen corporate tax rates presents a greater challenge than is now anticipated, the bill can be passed before nightfall.

The first test vote on the bill will come on an amendment put forward by Senators Hugo L. Black (Democrat), of Alabama, and Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who seek to step-up surtaxes on undivided corporate profits as high as 30 per cent, when more than 40 per cent of corporate earnings are withheld from stockholders.

Follows Roosevelt Wish.

The Black-La Follette amendment seeks to bring the Senate bill more nearly in line with President Roosevelt's recommendation that dividends be forced into circulation by high taxation of withheld earnings.

An informal poll of Senate Democrats yesterday indicated it is doomed to defeat, and the possibility arose that Black may ask that it be withdrawn when the Senate meets today. Some Senators who favor the Administration plan point out that defeat of the proposal by a record Senate vote would endanger chances of raising corporate tax rates when the bill goes to conference.

Out of 49 Democratic Senators informally polled yesterday, 38 indicated they would vote for the more moderate rates recommended by the Senate Finance Committee, and only 11 said they favored the Black-La Follette plan.

The committee bill increases the corporation income tax from 12½ to 15 per cent, to 15½ to 18 per cent, but imposes an additional surtax on undivided profits of only 7 per cent.

Already there is talk of compromise on these rates when the bill finally goes to conference. Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee publicly say they will accept nothing less than the steep House scale, which runs up to a maximum of 42½ per cent on retained earnings, while Senate conservatives say 7 per cent is their limit.

In the end, both houses will have to yield somewhat if a bill is to be enacted this session. One set of compromise rates being discussed in the lobbies yesterday was graduated from 4 to 10 per cent.

Although the tax bill remained the one vital keystone to final adjournment, there are a number of other measures in conference snarls that will have to be worked out before House and Senate gavels can be tapped "sine die." They include the pivotal work-relief appropriation, drastic chain store regulation, new liquor taxes, Federal highway aid to the States, and others.

Leaders bluntly predicted the Guffey coal control bill, the Wagner

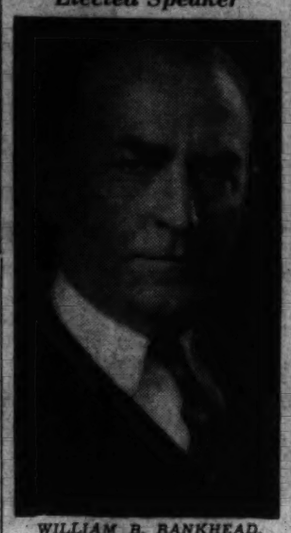
U.S. Sailors Held, Freed; Tokyo Protest Studied

Tientsin (Friday), June 5 (U.P.).—The United States Embassy was reported today to be preparing a protest against forcible detention of two sailors of the U. S. S. Blackhawk by Japanese military authorities at Shanhaikuan in a photography episode. When the Blackhawk was at Chinwangtao, the two sailors took snapshots of a Chinese train carrying trench mortars southward. Patrols seized the camera, tore up the film and detained the two sailors, later releasing them.

Elected Speaker



WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD.

Rep. Bankhead Follows Byrns In Speakership

1935 Rival for Post Given Unanimous Approval by Subdued House.

By Robert C. Albright.

In an atmosphere of awed solemnity, William Brockman Bankhead, of Alabama, suave, pleasant but firm, yesterday received from the House of Representatives the Speakership gavel which had fallen from the still hands of Joseph Wellington Byrns.

The Alabaman was unanimously elected by heavy-hearted men, whose quiet efficiency yesterday belied the usual tempest of House hurly-burly.

Immediate selection of a Speaker, Representative John J. O'Connor explained to a hushed chamber, was "necessary in order that the House may function and that the machinery of Government may not stop."

The office of Democratic leader, left vacant by the elevation of Bankhead, remained unfilled. Probably no attempt will be made to fill it this session. In the interim O'Connor, as chairman of the Rules Committee, will function as leader.

Bankhead, son of a former Senator, brother of a Senator and father of the glamorous Tallulah of theatrical fame, received a light brush of applause as he moved down the aisle to accept what Vice President Garner calls the second most powerful office in the Nation. But the clapping was stilled as suddenly as it was begun.

It was an office that Bankhead had sought unsuccessfully as a rival to Byrns in the Speakership contest of 1935, when half a dozen candidates fell before the popularity of the Tennessean. It was a strenuous, man-killing office, that had seen three of the last four Speakers die while they held it.

Called to order at 11 a. m. by its clerk, South Trimble, the House proceeded immediately to its sorrowful business. Members stood silently, heads bowed, as Trimble announced the Speaker's death. Then O'Connor presented the resolution which was to place Bankhead on the rostrum.

It read:

"Resolved, That Hon. William B. Bankhead, a Representative from the State of Alabama, be and he is hereby elected Speaker of the House of Representatives.

"Resolved, That the President and the Senate be notified by the clerk of the election of Hon. William B. Bankhead as Speaker of the House of Representatives."

The resolution was adopted without a dissenting voice. Representative Adolph J. Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, dean of the House and one of Byrns' managers in his campaign for the Speakership, adminis-

Body of Late Speaker to Lie in State Before House Rostrum.

Burial Tomorrow At Nashville Home

By Felix Bruner.

The body of Speaker Joseph W. Byrns will rest for a brief time today in the House of Representatives, where for 28 years he served his country.

Joining in a last tribute to the Speaker will be the President of the United States, members of the Cabinet, the Senate and the Supreme Court, and his colleagues and co-workers.

During the services, which will be started at noon, the casket, surrounded by flowers, will rest before the Speaker's rostrum, from which he presided during one of the most trying periods of American history, and from which he left his indelible mark on the affairs of the Nation.

Family to Be Present.

Seated before the casket will be members of the late Speaker's family. Behind them will be the heads of the Government and members of the House and Senate. On the rostrum will be the newly elected Speaker Bankhead, Vice President Garner and the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House. It was Mr. Byrns' wish that the Rev. Mr. Montgomery conduct his funeral service.

Following the services the body will be taken to Nashville, Tenn., where it will be laid to rest not far from where the Speaker began his career as a boy in the tobacco fields. President Roosevelt will accompany the body of his "steadfast friend of many years." Burial will take place tomorrow.

Affairs of the Government virtually ceased with the announcement of the Speaker's sudden death early yesterday. President Roosevelt called off his weekly Cabinet meeting and canceled other engagements, remaining away from the Executive office. He ordered flags on all Government buildings lowered to half-staff.

The President will return to Washington from Nashville, reaching here about noon Sunday. Almost immediately afterward he will leave for a speaking tour, which will take him to Arkansas, Texas, and back to Indiana.

Speaker Byrns died of heart disease and a cerebral hemorrhage at 12:15 a. m. yesterday. He was stricken at 5:30 p. m. and died in his room at the Mayflower Hotel. With him were Mrs. Byrns, two brothers, M. J. Byrns, of Washington, and John Byrns, of Cincinnati, and their wives, with Representative McReynolds, of Tennessee, the Speaker's friend of many years.

The Speaker's last official act was to appoint a committee to attend the funeral of Representative Piatt Andrew, of Massachusetts, who died Tuesday night.

Tennyson Poem Read.

Following the preliminaries of electing a new Speaker, the House listened to brief tributes to its departed leader. Every member who could be present was in his seat. The galleries were crowded. There was deep silence as Mr. Montgomery began reading the lines of Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar:"

Some of the members were weeping as the minister prayed:

"Gracious Father of all men, let Thy gracious comfort come to us as we are subdued by the thoughts and feelings that come from the sudden death of our beloved Speaker. Bend Thine ear to the silent tributes of love and friendship. Increase our courage and faith to do the unfinished tasks of our day."

The silence which followed was broken by a request for recognition by Representative McReynolds. He was noticeably affected deeply.

"I am about to offer," he said in a choked voice, "what to me is the

Obliging Bandit Serves Patrons, But Gives Victims Cold Shoulder

The hoodlum who last night robbed the market of Jacob Smith, 400 W street northwest, got a fundamental lesson in the grocery business as well as between $8 and $10 in cash.

"Step into the icebox, ladies," he ordered Mrs. Anna Smith, wife of the proprietor, and her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Burke, as he menaced them with what appeared to be a pistol, held inside his coat pocket.

The refrigerator door went "click" on its feminine prisoners and the thief scooped the money from the drawer. He heard a voice in the public telephone booth, and discovered a woman, oblivious to what was going on, making a call.

"That's all right, sister," he said, poking his head inside, "go right ahead. Don't mind me."

Then, as he was about to leave, two unsuspecting customers walked suddenly into the store.

As the robber bowed politely, they gave their orders. He stepped to the shelves hesitatingly and filled them. Then he pocketed the change they gave him for the groceries and stepped out to the curb, where an automobile was waiting.

After the robber had gone the customers, about to depart also, heard screams coming from the icebox. They opened the door, freed the women, heard their story and called the police.

Women Hear Wallace Back Farm Relief

Secretary Defends Aid to Agriculture, Citing World Trends.

1,500 Attend Banquet of A. C. C. W.; Mrs. Catt Pleads for Peace.

Farm women, 1,500 of them, from all sections of the United States, last night heard the Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace, link the Administration's policy of direct governmental aid and intervention in agricultural affairs with similar programs in virtually all the countries in the world.

"Since 1921," said Wallace, "nearly every nation in the world has been seriously concerned with the situation of its farmers and, particularly since 1930, this concern has taken the form of direct governmental aid and intervention.

The rural homemakers, gathered in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel for the banquet of the Associated Country Women of the World, were addressed by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, a pioneer in the woman's suffrage movement.

Pleads for World Peace.

She spoke last night on another of her favorite subjects, world peace, and pleaded with the farm women to use their education and votes to the end that war may be abolished.

Sitting on Mrs. Catt's right as she spoke was the German Ambassador, Dr. Hans Luther. Other distinguished guests at the speakers' table were Senator Arthur E. Capper, of Kansas; Mrs. Charles L. McNary, wife of the Senate minority leader, from Oregon; Mrs. Henry Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Henry C. Wallace, his mother; Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Home Economics, and Dr. C. W. Warburton, chief of the extension service.

Wallace, in indicating that the United States farm program is only falling in line with world-wide trends, described conditions found in Europe by Chester Davis, AAA administrator, who recently spent two months studying farm programs on the continent.

Try Price-Supporting.

"He found a great diversity of farm relief schemes in operation but all of them had certain basic features in common," said the Secretary of Agriculture. "They all viewed the farm problem as a national problem; they all were experimenting with price-supporting schemes, and most of them set up special production and marketing control agencies."

"So far as the United States is concerned," he continued, "we are keenly aware that good weather might bring down on us again in serious form the problem of overproduction. We hope—and of course it is a hope rather than a flat prediction—that the pick-up in business and international trade will take care of any increased farm production and that the individual States, co-operating with the Federal Government as provided in the soil conservation and domestic allotment act, will be able to shoulder the burden of direct action on production control after January 1, 1938."

Mrs. Catt Deplores War.

Among Wallace's 1,500 listeners were delegates from 15 foreign countries to the A. C. W. W. conference.

Mrs. Catt, in her impassioned outburst again war, told the farm women of the United States that their nation "spends too much money for guns, airplanes and poison gas and too little for farm welfare."

"It is not necessary," she said, "for you American women to flounder through the intricacies of neutrality, the political confusion of joining the League of Nations, or the more complicated so-called economic causes of war, in order to understand war. Such talk merely wastes time and postpones the day

Million Out, Strike Spread Stirs Europe

Blum Becomes Premier, Acts to End Walkout of 500,000.

The European Situation.

Almost 1,000,000 workers were idle in three European nations yesterday as labor unrest assumed proportions of a minor social revolution.

Socialist Leon Blum became premier of France and acted swiftly to avert industrial paralysis of the nation. Blum will appeal personally today to the 500,000 striking industrial workers to return to their jobs.

Confusion ruled in foreign exchange markets in New York and abroad as the French crisis threatened the franc.

A French plan to improve relations with the United States by a "symbolic settlement" of the war debt was revealed, along with a Franco-British agreement to lift war sanctions against Italy in order to remove one of the sore spots in the troubled European situation.

In Spain 250,000 workers were on strike. The movement swept the industrial belt in Catalonia and was practically nation-wide.

Dock workers at Antwerp, Belgium, continued on strike through the second day, tying up all shipping.

Blum Takes Reins.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 4.—Socialist Leon Blum, immediately after taking over the guidance of troubled France, ordered two of his ministers tonight to act at once to avert a complete industrial paralysis of the nation.

Without waiting for formalities, the new premier obtained the immediate transfer of powers to his minister of the interior, Roger Salengro and Labor Minister J. B. Lebas.

Blum himself decided to appeal to the 500,000 strikers tomorrow in a radio address, his first public speech as premier.

These half million workers occupied factories, and strikes were spreading as President Albert Lebrun officially handed the government reins to the 64-year-old well-tailored Socialist shortly after 9 p. m.

The strikes grew as Blum and his cabinet of 35 ministers took over the government from the outgoing Premier Albert Sarraut.

The strikers hoped to profit by the situation. The new government was being put to a rigid test even before its formal assumption of its duties tomorrow.

Twenty of the new ministers whom Blum named are Socialists who never before were in the government, and the remainder were Radical Socialists. There are three women—the first ever to be included in a French cabinet.

Meanwhile Jean Chiappe, president of the municipal council, called a meeting of city officials tomorrow to consider asking Paris police to see that the capital is kept supplied with food, and to prevent any hindrance of public services.

Employers told Premier Sarraut the strikers were "revolutionary." The outgoing group deposited an unenviable situation in the new government's lap.

The occupation strikes closed big chain grocery stores, two sugar factories and a big brewery. Afternoon newspapers failed to appear. These were the latest critical developments.

The price of wheat rose, and garbage collectors threatened to strike. Department stores were expected to close tomorrow.

The "Popular Front" premier was called to power two hours after Sarraut and his coalition cabinet had resigned. Blum went to the

6,000 Jews Flee to Warsaw As Peasants Riot at Funeral

Anti-Semitic Crowds of 35,000 Burn Buildings in Polish Town; Victims Barricade Selves in Homes, Suffering From Lack of Food.

By the United Press.

Warsaw, Poland, June 4.—Six thousand Jews, all but 1,000 of the total population of Minsk, sought refuge here tonight from anti-Semitic riots in which four persons were killed and 40 wounded. Homes of the victims were set on fire.

More than 35,000 persons, mostly peasants from around Minsk, attended the funeral here today of several soldiers slain in line of duty. Their feelings inflamed, the peasants began to set fire to houses in the Jewish section.

Fire engines and police reinforcements were rushed from Warsaw, 28 kilometers distant.

The few Jews remaining in Minsk locked themselves in their houses. They already were suffering from hunger, since the rioting peasants will not permit provisions to enter the town.

Jews Reassured.

Warsaw, June 4 (A.P.).—Gen. Felicyan Skladkowski reassured Jews of their safety in Poland today in a comparatively short speech delivered before the Sejm (Parliament). The Polish premier said:

"I will never permit harm being done them (the Jews) just because they are Jews."

He warned the Socialists and also the Nationalists, and said the government would take a middle course between extremes.

"The Nationalists may combat the Jews economically," he said, "but I will never permit harm being done them just because they are Jews.

"The government will not cooperate with the Socialists who are now coming to terms with Communists, nor with the Nationalists, who are beating the Jews."

He said the communistic infiltration of Poland would be counteracted by providing work for the unemployed. This, he said, he con-

Borah Followers Call Gov. Landon Indorser Of New Deal Policies

Italy's Troops Hinted Back Of Hapsburgs

Schuschnigg, Mussolini to Discuss Restoration Today, Paris Hears.

By the United Press.

Paris, June 4 (U.P.).—The Hapsburgs will be restored to the throne of Austria under the armed protection of Italy, reports reaching the new French government said tonight.

From sources abroad, Premier Leon Blum heard that the following political developments may occur simultaneously within the next few days:

1. Restoration of Archduke Otto coincident with a declaration by Premier Mussolini that Italy will defend the movement.

2. Italian mobilization along the Austrian frontiers if the Little Entente or other nations seek to prevent the restoration.

3. Denunciation of the military clauses of the Trianon World War treaty by Hungary under the same Italian guarantees as will be afforded Austria.

Schuschnigg in Rome.

Government officials said the source of their information indicated that preparations for such sensational developments are being completed during Austrian Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's current visit to Italy.

The plans allegedly were laid during the Italo-Austro-Hungarian conference at Rome several months ago, attended by Mussolini, Schuschnigg and Hungarian Premier Julius Goemboes.

The little entente has warned repeatedly that restoration of the Hapsburgs will mean war. Schuschnigg is understood to be favorably disposed toward re-establishing the Austrian imperial house.

Archduke Otto, chief pretender to the throne of Austria, is in exile at Steenockerzeel Castle, Belgium, with his mother, the Empress Zita.

Basis for Truce.

Observers, commenting on the reports, said his restoration might provide the best basis for a truce between Schuschnigg and Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, whom Schuschnigg recently ousted as co-dictator.

On the occasion of Archduke Otto's twenty-third birthday last November, Starhemberg emerged publicly in favor of restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy. Starhemberg is commander of 120,000 Heimwehr troops, most of whom are legitimists and favor restoration.

The threat of civil war between the Heimwehr and federal forces since Starhemberg was ousted has grown daily in Austria, observers pointed out, and thus Otto's restoration might represent a happy compromise.

Rome, June 4 (U.P.).—Premier Benito Mussolini and Austrian Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg will confer tomorrow, it was learned tonight.

Il Duce probably will receive Schuschnigg at Rocca Delle Caminate, his favorite retreat.

Fumes Rout Diners From Restaurant

Seven patrons were driven into the street early last night when a gasket on the motor of a large refrigerator blew off in a restaurant in the 400 block of Ninth street northwest, releasing clouds of ammonia fumes.

The customers abandoned dishes and beverages on their tables when the fumes spread through the restaurant.

Responding to an alarm, the Fire Rescue Squad shut off the ice machine. The cafe is operated by Alfred Gagnon and John Heder.

U. S. Will Stay Aloof in Revolt Of Nicaraguans

Secretary Hull Denies Any Intent to Intervene in Civil Warfare.

By Sidney Olson.

The United States will not interfere in the Nicaraguan civil war, Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced last night.

The statement at once put at rest widespread Latin-American and South American fears that this Government would move to straighten out the internal affairs of strife-torn Nicaragua.

The State Department announcement was followed by a dispatch from Managua, saying that President Juan B. Sacasa, virtually a prisoner of rebellious troops, had stated he would resign and hand over the government to Julian Irias, minister of war. The President told La Prensa, conservative Nicaraguan paper, according to the United Press, that "to continue under present conditions would be undignified."

The Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, and the Chilean Ambassador, Don Manuel Trucco, had called on the State Department here for an expression of American policy.

Both apparently were under the impression that the United States had been asked by the Nicaragua government to intervene in Managua, capital of Nicaragua, where a rebellious national guard has upset the regime of President Sacasa.

Hull Calls It Erroneous.

Secretary Hull vigorously corrected this impression after declaring it erroneous. He said:

"No suggestion has been received from any source that the Government of the United States intervene in Nicaragua, and in accordance with its established policy as well as in accordance with the provisions of the convention on rights and duties of states entered into at the seventh inter-American conference at Montevideo, this Government will not intervene directly or indirectly in the domestic concerns of any American republic."

Secretary Hull, in effect, said that the "good neighbor" policy of this Administration means exactly what it says.

Summer Welles, Assistant Secretary of State, in charge of Latin-American affairs, informed both the Peruvian and Chilean Ambassadors of the American attitude.

Rather sharply, Welles answered the oral statement of the Peruvian government, which contained a "friendly warning" to this country not to interfere in Nicaragua, by saying that Peru's evident misunderstanding of the American posi-

First 'Chute Leap of Girl, 15, Lands Her and Father in Jail

By the Associated Press.

Mineola, N. Y., June 4.—Pretty Winifred Ruth Bayer, 15, made her first parachute jump today and landed in Children's Detention Home after a 2,000-foot leap over an abandoned airport.

The jump also took her father to jail on a charge of causing a minor to risk life and limb in a commercial pursuit.

Winnie Ruth, won't be 16 until late in July, the father, Emil Bayer, admitted to District Attorney Martin Littleton, of Nassau County.

Her first attempt, a month ago, was a leap of a few inches. Her pilot pulled her back into the plane when they discovered her parachute opened prematurely.

She and her family made several attempts since then to complete a leap, but each time police at airports foiled them.

Today she got away from Floyd Bennett Field with Sam Held, a pilot, and they proceeded over an airport on Long Island which has been abandoned for some time.

Her father, her mother, her sister, two patrol wagons, two radio cars, 11 policemen and two captains of police were among the crowd gathered to watch the descent.

She rolled over, dirtied her face and her white coveralls, and then began folding up her parachute.

Her family and all the police paraphernalia pulled up.

The police took her and the family away to Littleton's office.

There charges were filed against the father, an unemployed WPA client, and against Winnie Ruth for violating a section of the penal code forbidding minors from risking their lives in commercial pursuits.

Shift of Idahoan's Attack on Kansan Is Greeted With Amusement.

Ohioans Boom Taft For Vice President

Prairie State Governor Cannot Be Stopped, Most Foes Concede.

By Franklyn Waltman,
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 4.—In an eleventh-hour effort to stop the rising tide of support for Gov. Alf Landon for the Republican Presidential nomination, the Borah headquarters here tonight followed up the Senator's charges in Washington regarding the improper use of money against him in the recent Ohio primary with an accusation that the Kansan on occasion indorsed New Deal actions.

This latter attack on Gov. Landon was made by Carl G. Bachmann, Borah campaign manager, as the Idahoan's charges in Washington that $20,000 raised by the Republican National Committee had been used in Ohio on behalf of the State's favorite son, Robert A. Taft, and against Senator Borah, caused a mild stir among delegates and local politicians.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the national committee, immediately called a special press conference to deny any knowledge of the use of national committee funds in this State's primary fight and to assert emphatically that he had not taken part in any primary contest since becoming national chairman.

Brown Denies Charges.

Walter F. Brown, Ohio's national committeeman, who was named in the Borah charges, asserted he had no knowledge of the use of national committee money here. He said the only money he spent during the primary was $105 for traveling expenses.

The situation seemed to be that if the national committee sent any funds into this State it was by an agreement between the national finance committee and the State Republican committee that a proportion of any funds raised in Ohio should be returned here. Such arrangements constitute a long-standing practice, Fletcher said, but he did not know whether there was such an arrangement in the case of Ohio.

Among Ohioans here it was said that a Cincinnati man, a close friend of Taft, sometime ago made a $20,000 contribution to the national committee, but specifically provided that it was to be earmarked for expenditure by the State committee here. If that is the money Senator Borah is talking about, it was explained, his complaint of impropriety has no validity.

At all events, most of those here tonight regarded the Borah "bombshell" as a dud. But it was quickly followed by the Bachmann statement, given out at the headquarters here at first only to three press associations, but subsequently to all correspondents who asked for it.

Charge Stirs Amusement.

This statement created some amusement, since it indicated that the Borah managers had completely shifted their attacks on Gov. Landon. Several weeks ago, they privately—and in vague terms publicly—denounced Gov. Landon as a Wall Streeter, a tool of the oil interests and the Republican Old Guard. Now they charge he is a New Dealer—and this charge comes from the manager of the Republican candidate who has voted for more New Deal measures than any other aspirant for the nomination.

The Borah managers rapidly are becoming the bitter-end opponents of Gov. Landon here. The Knox camp, for instance, has been quiet, except for daily predictions by former Senator George H. Moses, to which little attention is paid because they are so obviously exaggerations. But for the most part, other Landon foes here privately concede that he cannot be stopped and the heat of rivalry is now developing in the Vice Presidential race.

Vandenberg Best Bet.

Ohioans today launched a boom for Robert A. Taft as the movement favoring Representative James W. Wadsworth, of New York, for the second place, slowed down considerably. Senator Arthur H. Van-

Richberg Asks Condemnation Of High Court

Ex-NRA Chief Asks Both Parties for Opposition to Tribunal's Power.

By the Associated Press.

Donald R. Richberg, former NRA chief, yesterday called on both political parties to condemn what he termed the Supreme Court's "unconstitutional exercise of judicial power."

Richberg asserted "the American people are being rapidly forced to answer the question as to whether they can preserve self-government in the face of an unprecedented exercise of power by the Supreme Court."

Long insistent that the Constitution, properly interpreted, will permit "necessary" legislation without amendment, Richberg reiterated this view, holding that a constitutional amendment "is no answer to the abuse of power by the court."

The lawyer's attack followed only a few days after President Roosevelt had said the court's decision holding New York's minimum wage law invalid, together with the Guffey coal and NRA decisions, had created a legal no man's land where neither State nor Federal Government could function.

Richberg stressed, however, that he had not discussed his statement with the President, whom he still sees from time to time.

"The Supreme Court was not established as a hierachy to lay down laws by which a subservient people should interpret their Gospel," he stated.

"The Supreme Court cannot exercise any of the constructive powers of government. It can only established as a hierarchy to lay a government of paralysis.

"When justices of the Supreme Court substitute their political and economic opinions for the opinions of the elected law-makers, and deny, first to the Federal Government and, then, to the States an adequate power of self-government, they go far beyond the constitutional limits of judicial authority.

"Most well-informed people will agree that the judicial power to enforce the Constitution as the supreme law must be preserved. Constitutional protection of States rights and individual freedom must be preserved.

"But these constitutional requirements must not be made the basis of denying the right of the States and the Nation, each within its own jurisdiction, to enact laws necessary to promote and protect the general welfare.

"At this time on the eve of the national conventions of the two major parties, there is no political partisanship in urging that both parties should stand for maintaining the power of self-government in the States and in the Nation, and that both should stand in opposition to a creeping paralysis of the legislative power by the unconstitutional exercise of judicial power.

"The platforms of the political parties and the assertions of their candidates will be meaningless if the public policies of the Nation are to be finally determined by a majority of the Supreme Court."

Diplomatic Corps Officers Shifted

Transfers of several members of the United States diplomatic service, who are well known in the Capital, were announced yesterday.

Raymond E. Cox, of New York, first secretary of the embassy in Buenos Aires, has been assigned as consul general at Prague.

Joseph P. Ragland, of Washington, consul at Halifax, Nova Scotia, will leave for Sydney, Australia.

Francis L. Spalding, of Brookline, Mass. vice consul at Zurich, Switzerland, will leave for Stuttgart, Germany, where he will be vice consul. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Spalding, the former Miss Loranda Prochnik, daughter of the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, and their two young children.

Gifts to Child Enraged Mob, Says Haines' Pal

Los Angeles, June 4 (AP).—Jimmie Shields, friend of William Haines, told officials today he gave a dime, a bottle of pop and a hamburger to a 6-year-old boy, precipitating mob action in which he and the former movie actor were beaten.

Haines and Shields, who is a movie extra player, were questioned at the district attorney's office about their attack at the hands of an angry crowd which chased them out of El Porto, beach community, last Sunday night. The story of the child that he had been mistreated in the Haines' beach cottage kindled the mob spirit. Shields denied the boy's charges, and both he and Haines were released.

Quadruplets Observe 'Marriageable' Birthday

Hollis, Okla., June 4 (AP).—The four quadruplet sisters Mona, Mary, Roberta and Leota Key—celebrated their "marriageable" birthday today, the twenty-first.

"Thoughts of marriage are still pretty far away," Roberta said. But Mona had an added thought:

"You never can tell."

Leota predicted "more than likely" they would cast their first votes as Democrats. But Mary believed:

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

CLEVELAND, June 4.—Some of the thinkers among the Republicans who have arrived here believe that the Supreme Court last Monday in the New York minimum wage case handed their party an opportunity which the convention should not let escape.

WALTMAN

This line of reasoning is a little startling when it is first projected, because the viewpoint has been general that the Supreme Court's latest decision was a distinct political break for President Roosevelt and a setback for the Republican cause.

But when one hears all of the argument that the Supreme Court decision was in reality a blessing for the Republicans, it appears not only logical but practicable. Whether the Republican chieftains gathering here will get the point of the argument—or getting it, are willing to go along with it—is a matter yet to be developed by events. But the argument is being projected by some prominent Republican figures.

The argument is that the Supreme Court by declaring the inability of the State governments to deal in a reasonable way with pressing economic problems has given the Republicans a chance to take an affirmative position on the question of constitutionalism and State rights, instead of the negative position the party has hithertofore espoused.

In other words, it is argued that the Supreme Court decision has given the Republican Party a chance affirmatively and vigorously to champion a constitutional amendment to clothe the State governments with the power to deal with economic problems within their boundaries as the people of the respective States think best.

Expressed more simply, the idea is this: When the Supreme Court was rendering decisions declaring unconstitutional legislative efforts of the Roosevelt Administration to subject the national economic structure to the regulation of the Federal Government, the Republicans could only applaud the Supreme Court, contend that such action was proper and that the New Deal program was repugnant to the American tradition.

In taking this attitude, the Republicans were open to charges that they were reactionary and did not want vicious practices in business and industry restrained, but, on the other hand, favored laissez faire and the jungle law. Of course, most Republicans denied these accusations, asserting they favored State control of such matters. In that argument, it is held, the New Deal had the best of it, because few voters understand the fine points of constitutional law and most people understand what cries of "reaction" and "Toryism" mean.

Until last Monday there was no necessity for the National Republican Party to promise to do anything to make State rights effective—it was assumed the States had the rights to do the things which the Supreme Court held the Federal Government lacked the power to do. But the New York minimum wage law decision changed that—and for the day it looked like the Republicans were left without an argument.

Considerable thought has been given to that decision by certain Republican leaders and they have come to the conclusion that the way out is for the party to seize tightly on the issue of State rights—to insist that there be returned to the State governments whatever power is necessary for them to function effectively in dealing with economic problems, as their people want to deal with them.

If the Republican convention adopted a plank advocating such a stand it would create an unusual situation in American politics. It would force the Democrats at Philadelphia to make a choice, from which some of them shrink: Whether to favor strong State governments, as advocated by Thomas Jefferson, the founder of their party, or, to turn their back on this tradition and advocate a strong centralized government.

Should the Democrats take the latter course, which is the course that President Roosevelt has pursued, then the traditional positions of the two political parties would be completely reversed. Each would have declared for greater governmental responsibility in dealing with economic evils, but each would take a different road.

The thinking on this subject has been done by Republicans who usually do not figure largely in the formation of platforms or the selection of candidates. But they have been busy for several days expounding their idea to the more political-minded Republicans.

Incidentally, the arguments being projected are along the line of the statement issued earlier this week by William Allen White, the Emporia editor. He is expected to be the Landon representative on the resolutions committee. Whether he favors a constitutional amendment to make his idea effective is not known here.

Some of the practical politicians here, however, are inclined to disapprove of the party urging an amendment to the Constitution. They think it would be confusing to the voters to have the Republicans make such a proposal while denouncing New Deal proposals for constitutional amendments. They do not think the voters would appreciate the differences of viewpoint involved. The same objective could be achieved, they think, by a strongly worded plank applauding State rights. The decision when made probably will be the most important, from a historic viewpoint, made here.

Kansas Shifts to G. O. P. Ranks In Latest Presidential Poll

Special to The Post.

New York, June 4.—The most spectacular shift of voters away from Roosevelt in a single State this year has occurred in Kansas, according to an announcement made here today by the Institute of Public Opinion. The Institute, which has conducted Nation-wide polls on Roosevelt's standing and on major issues for more than two years, reported that Kansas has shifted from a Democratic State last December to a Republican State today.

The shift is illustrated in the following seven-month record of the Institute poll in Kansas:

	Percentage For Roosevelt
December	53
January	52
February	51
March	50
April	49
May	48
June	47

The total drop in Democratic strength was six points.

The June figure for the Roosevelt vote in Kansas was released in advance of the figures for the rest of the poll, which will be reported in AMERICA SPEAKS in this Sunday's Washington Post. A total of 204,451 ballots was sent out to a scientifically selected cross-section of voters in all States of the Union.

Becker Reveals A.T.&T. Set-Up Of Propaganda

FCC Counsel Seeks to Show How Goodwill Was Built Up by Industry.

By the Associated Press.

With inter-company letters as exhibits, counsel for the Federal Communication Commission's investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., sought yesterday to show that publicity and politics were enlisted in efforts to promote goodwill for the utility.

Samuel Becker, counsel, called E. S. Wilson, A. T. & T. vice president, to the stand, and then put into the record evidence he said was intended to show that:

The Washington publicity firm of Thomas R. Shipp received $225,000 from the A. T. & T. and the Pennsylvania Bell Co., between 1920 and 1931. Besides general publicity activities in Pennsylvania, Shipp was employed to make a 5-year study of the "telephone situation in Indiana."

Talked With Newsmen.

Shipp conferred with newspapermen, the Indiana Utilities Commission, heads of the Democratic and Republican committees and other officials, and informed the A. T. & T. of State political developments.

The A. T. & T. attempted to array bankers and investors behind its moves for higher rates.

A suggestion that businessmen might "put pressure" on the Michigan commission for higher telephone rates was made by Wilson in 1920.

The A. T. & T. spent $257,000 between 1926 and 1935 making 56 "institutional" motion pictures, some of which were described as "powerful and subtle propaganda."

Subscribers Footed Bill.

At one point, Paul A. Walker, directing the investigation, stopped testimony to ask:

"All this campaign of education—sometimes referred to as propaganda—is paid for by the telephone subscribers, isn't it?"

Wilson replied affirmatively.

Centering his examination on the employment of Shipp in 1920 to study problems of the Indiana company, Becker asked Wilson why he was hired.

"The Indiana company was losing $1,000,000 a year," Wilson answered. "I employed him in order to get information on our situation there, which was desperate because of the rate situation."

His Letter Quoted.

Asserting that Shipp "knew the politicians" in Indiana, Becker introduced a letter from the publicity man to Wilson, dated November, 1920, which said:

"I can say to you that the developments to which I refer rather mysteriously are political ones."

Wilson said he did not know to what Shipp was referring, but described Indiana as "the most political State in the United States."

"Do you believe in using political influence to procure higher rates?" Becker asked.

"I don't think we should ever use political influence as such," Wilson responded.

250 Democrats Hear Demands For D. C. Ballot

Leaders Among Guests of District League at Dinner-Dance.

Two hundred and fifty Democrats, including many high in the councils of the party, attended a dinner-dance given at the Congressional Country Club last night by the Democratic League of the District of Columbia.

The dinner-dance was in honor of District officials, Senators and Representatives handling District affairs on Capitol Hill, and members of the local Democratic organization.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Democratic national committeewoman for the District, told the gathering she was strongly in favor of giving District residents representation in Congress and a chance to vote for President and Vice President.

To Push Vote for District.

Commissioner George E. Allen, who will be a District delegate to the Philadelphia convention, has been designated to appear before the resolutions committee and argue for a plank advocating National representation for the District.

Malcolm McConihe, elected to succeed John F. Costello as Democratic national committeeman, was cheered when introduced.

United States Marshal John B. Colpoys, chairman of the Democratic central committee, praised the delegation going to Philadelphia, describing it as thoroughly representative of the city.

Also for Representation.

Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, said he favored national representation for the District. Commissioner Melvin Hazen told of the work accomplished by his departments, and emphasized the necessity for the Federal Government bearing its fair share of the costs of running the city.

Arthur Clarendon Smith, who presided, read messages from Postmaster General James A. Farley, Senator William King, of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee; Representative Mary Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, and others.

The guests observed a minute of silence in tribute to the late Speaker Joseph W. Byrns.

Borah Charges Party Misused Money in Ohio

Delving Into Possibility of 'Fraud;' Fletcher Replies in Capital.

By the Associated Press.

Senator William E. Borah, candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, last night charged Republican National Committee funds had been "misused" against him in the Ohio primary campaign by the State Republican organization, and said he was investigating whether "embezzlement" was involved.

Borah said a report in the Ohio secretary of State's office showed $20,000 raised by the national committee was used in the primary by the organization committee which opposed him.

"What I am seeking to ascertain," he said, "is whether this was with the consent of the national committee or an act of embezzlement by the favorite son committee."

Fletcher Gives Reply.

National Chairman Henry P. Fletcher replied that arrangements for division of national committee funds in Ohio were made by the finance sub-committee headed by William Bell, of New York.

The division, the party's national chairman added, apparently was based on an agreement by which funds raised in Ohio and other States were divided automatically in pre-arranged proportions. This agreement, Fletcher said, was drawn up by the State and national finance committees.

"It has not been my intention at any time to interfere in any State primary," he said.

"One thing is certain from this report," Borah added, "and that is there was a misuse of funds."

Borah charged the funds had been misused by Walter Brown, Republican national committeeman from Ohio, and Ed Schorr, chairman of the Republican State central committee.

Borah's statement follows:

"It is true that I am having investigated the legal phase with reference to the misuse of funds in the campaign in Ohio by Schorr and Brown.

"According to the report in the secretary of state's office, some $20,000 of money raised for the national campaign by the Republican National Committee was used in the primary campaign.

"What I am seeking to ascertain is whether this was with the consent of the national committee or an act of embezzlement by the favorite-son committee.

He Alleges Diverson.

"One thing is certain from this report, and that is there was a misuse of funds. This money which was used in the primary campaign had been solicited by the national committee to be used in the national campaign, but when they got their hands on it they diverted it to a wholly different use, which is quite characteristic."

Borah ran in the Ohio primary against Robert A. Taft, favorite-son candidate backed by the Republican organization. The Idaho Senator got five of the district delegates to the convention, but was beaten in the State-wide contest.

Roosevelt District Club Is Formed

A new Democratic club was formed yesterday in the office of District Commissioner George E. Allen. It is called the Roosevelt Nominators Club, and its chairman is Joseph E. Davies, wealthy Democrat and former chairman of the Federal Trade Commission.

Political rallies will be staged by the club, Davies said, and members who are not in Philadelphia on the night of June 27 will gather around a radio here to listen in while President Roosevelt accepts the nomination for a second term.

Roosevelt Nominators Clubs will be formed in other cities, Davies explained, and he hailed them as an indication of the "spontaneous and enthusiastic desire of the rank and file to participate in this historic occasion upon which their great President is being renominated to serve our country for the next four years."

Those who attended the meeting yesterday, besides Davies and Commissioner Allen, were Warren Lee Pierson, Clifford Woodward, Governor W. I. Meyers, of the Farm Credit Administration; Oliver P. Newmann, former District Commissioner; Henry A. Guthrie, Joseph M. Upchurch, Oliver J. Graimes, Perry R. Taylor, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Democratic National Committeewoman for the District; Stuart McDonald and Earl Godwin.

Suitor, Spurned, Kills Dancer, Self

Phoenix, Ariz., June 4 (AP).—A frantic pursuit of pretty Donna Mary Park, 26, night club dancer, by Irving La Zarr ended in death for both here today after apparent entreaties for marriage failed.

The double tragedy occurred while the two sat quietly conversing on the front porch of a rooming house shortly before dawn.

Nat T. McKee, justice of the peace, said La Zarr sent a bullet into Miss Park's head at close range and then shot himself in the temple.

"My daughter told me she couldn't go on with the show business," Mrs. Elizabeth Park said in Los Angeles, "and when La Zarr insisted on remaining in it my daughter thought the engagement ended."

Letters written by Miss Park to La Zarr last November, while she was at Jeffersonville, Ind., and he was traveling with Sally Rand's company at Montreal, indicated they had been sweethearts, officers said.

"The few weeks in Chicago with you certainly outweigh these weeks of worry," she wrote in one letter.

Wirephoto: 'Landon or Bust' Delegates Arrive

Cleveland

denburg, of Michigan, however, remains the best bet for the Vice Presidency.

Delegations have started rolling into Cleveland. A "Kansas Special" arrived tonight, bringing a large part of that State's delegation, including William Allen White and other Landon boosters. Others will follow in the morning. But the national committee still dominates the scene with its hearings on delegate contests.

The arrival tonight of White, a delegate from Kansas, stirred interest in the Republican platform. He has been discussing plans for this platform for several weeks with Republican leaders and is known to have Gov. Landon's views.

For these reasons it has been generally assumed that White, a member of the liberal wing of the party, would be the Kansas member of the resolutions committee.

White tonight said he preferred not to go on the resolutions committee because of his newspaper duties, but he indicated that if the Landon managers insisted, he would serve. Reports of a coolness developing between White and the Landon camp could not be confirmed. These rumors referred to White's statements this week suggesting a constitutional amendment to strengthen State rights and ridiculing a suggestion for a coalition ticket as the basis for coolness.

If he does not sit, it is not known who the Kansas representative will be. Former Governor and Senator Henry J. Allen has been suggested. So has Senator Arthur Capper.

Kansans Meet Today.

The Kansas delegation will meet tomorrow to organize and decide which of its members will sit with the committees on resolutions, credentials, temporary and permanent organization, and rules. The Kansans are "breathing confidence and optimism," as one of their group expressed it, and sunflowers—the symbol of a Landon supporter—are now seen on coat lapels everywhere.

Irrespective of who represents Kansas on the resolutions committee, the platform is certain to reflect the views of Gov. Landon. For this reason the Republican leaders have been slow to commit themselves as to what the document should contain.

There are, however, certain principles on which there is general agreement. One is that the party will condemn New Deal spending and promise a balanced budget. Another is that the party will declare in favor of international currency stabilization, but will shun both a managed currency and proposals to return to the old gold standard. The plank probably will promise a currency anchored to gold.

There are some differences of opinion over the tariff plank. There is widespread sentiment here for indorsing the Hull reciprocal trade idea but with modifications. It goes without saying, however, that the party will declare in favor of protecting the home market for America's farmers.

On the farm plank there are various ideas, but the leaders generally are waiting to see a draft of this plank by former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois. Harrison Spangler, in charge of the Western Republican headquarters, said Lowden had telephoned him today and had said he was airmailing to Cleveland a copy of his proposal.

There seems a rather general agreement that the platform should oppose all efforts at production control. Establishment of machinery to aid the export of farm products is another suggestion, while virtually all ideas for farm relief expressed informally here revolve around a soil conservation program, under State jurisdiction with the Federal Government contributing financial aid.

Eyes on Borah Forces.

But attention this evening for the most part was centered on the effort Borah forces were making to "stop Landon." Bachmann justified his statement on the ground that if some Republican did not tell "the truth" about Landon's political views in time, "the Democrats would do so fatally later on."

He contended that "the New Deal is on the way out" and held it to be "very probable that the platform of the Republican Party will be basically anti-New Deal." He asserted that the platform necessarily would come to grips with "the fantastic experiments of the present Administration which have involved the suspension of the anti-trust law, huge waste and extravagance and dire political corruption."

"In my opinion," he said, "the Republican Party must not nominate any candidate who is not in a position to wage a vigorous campaign against the fundamental principles of the New Deal."

He pointed out that from citations, which he subsequently quoted, "it is apparent that up to a few months ago, Gov. Landon supported the New Deal, orally and in writing; praised and complimented President Roosevelt on its constructive character, and, in the name of Kansas expressed deep thankfulness for the abundance of money that flowed into the coffers of that State from the Federal Government."

Bachmann quoted statements, mildly complimentary of New Deal measures, which he attributed to Gov. Landon. All but one were dated in 1934 and that one was in November of last year, in which Gov. Landon was quoted as saying to an unemployed group:

"I am confident the President and the WPA are doing all in their power to get people to work."

The other quotations also dealt with New Deal relief efforts; none were overly enthusiastic.

He Decries "Ballyhoo."

"The foreging excerpts may explain the significant silence on the part of Gov. Landon as to his views and policies," asserted Bachmann. "But it seems inconceivable for the Republican Party to write a platform suitable to Republicans and Jeffersonian Democrats and then nominate an avowed friend of the New Deal to run on it.

"Our convention must be ruled not by ballyhoo and steam-roller tactics but by the logic of the situation, and a realization of the imminent danger to our American institutions. The foremost question confronting the Republican Party today is, not who can be nominated, but who can be elected."

The John E. Jackson (New Orleans) Louisiana delegation of 12 won over a delegation whose spokesman was Dr. R. M. Baranco, of Baton Rouge.

Perry W. Howard's Mississippi delegation of 11 outtalked a delegation headed by Ernest McCall Hawkins.

J. C. Hambright's 10 South Carolina delegates defeated the 10 headed by Joseph W. (Tieless Joe) Tolbert.

Remaining contests, to be decided tomorrow, are from Oklahoma's Fifth District, Tennessee's Ninth, Alaska and the District of Columbia.

In the District contest each side will be given 40 minutes to present its case. The losing group is expected to carry the contest to the convention floor.

Two More Favor Landon.

Jefferson City, Mo., June 4 (AP).—Two of Missouri's four uninstructed delegates to the Republican National Convention in Cleveland said today they would vote for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the Presidential nomination on the first ballot.

This would give the Kansan at least 28 of the State's 30 votes, as 26 of the delegates, including the four named at large, either have been instructed to support Landon or were selected from districts which indorsed him.

New York's Strategy.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 4 (AP).—Edwin F. Jaeckle, Erie County Republican chairman, today said "approximately half" of the New York delegation of 90 to the National Convention are prepared to "vote on the first ballot for the nomination of Gov. Alf M. Landon," of Kansas.

Jaeckle, who has been trying to force National Committeeman Charles D. Hilles to quit, said in a statement continuing his attacks on the Old Guard leadership represented by Hilles and State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton:

"For the first time in a generation Mr. Hilles will sit in a national convention with nothing of value to trade. Despite the frantic efforts of Mr. Hilles and his political lackey, State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton, to rope and tie the New York delegation for trading purposes, approximately half of the delegates are already prepared to assert their independence and vote on the first ballot for the nomination of Gov. Alf M. Landon."

Aimee McPherson Plot Is Revealed

San Diego, Calif., June 4 (AP).—A Federal complaint was issued here today accusing Valentine Philip McAuliffe, 42, of using the mails in an attempt to extort $10,000 from Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist.

McAuliffe, toothless and crippled as a result of a recent automobile accident, sent Mrs. McPherson notes threatening to publicize "quite a few photos of a friend and yourself in the nude," he told authorities yesterday.

Identifying himself as an ex-convict, McAuliffe said a man named Harry Reamus told him he had the photographs, but that Reamus had fled to Mexico.

Mrs. McPherson in Los Angeles said McAuliffe "must be a crank."

"Certainly no pictures of me exist that I wouldn't be perfectly willing to have published," she added.

Cause of G. O. P. Now Hopeless, Farley Asserts

Tells Bay State Committee Roosevelt Will Win by Wide Margin.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Mass., June 4.—Terming the Republican campaign "hopeless," Postmaster General James A. Farley tonight declared that "success and business recovery" have accompanied the present Administration and predicted the re-election of President Roosevelt by an impressive majority.

Current criticisms of the Roosevelt regime were summarized by Farley as "part of the campaign wildness of a party that is devoid of a legitimate issue, and must beat the bushes for a candidate while it resorts to generalities and fables for arguments."

The Postmaster General, addressing the Massachusets Democratic State committee's pre-primary convention, cited statistics, quoted newspaper articles, and reviewed what he called the accomplishments of the last four years in answer to arguments raised by critics of the Administration.

Almost at the outset of his address, which was broadcast nationally, Farley said:

"President Roosevelt will be reelected by a majority so impressive that nobody in this country can have any doubt as to the faith of our people in the sincerity and ability of the Democratic Administration to direct our affairs so that the old Democratic ideal of the greatest good for the greatest number shall be realized."

Says Conditions Better.

Farley, who also is chairman of the Democratic National Committee, described present conditions as "immeasurably better" than they were four years ago.

"They are not perfect, by any means," he said, "but industrial and commercial enterprises, great and small, are making money, and the total of popular well-doing is constantly improving. • • •

"We would be much farther on our way if it had not been for the incessant clamor of our political foes, who have fought every step of our progress. Their constant effort is to replace the impulse of faith and hope, engendered by the revival of business activity, with the philosophy of fear."

"That," he added, "is what has delayed complete recovery." Continuing, he said:

"We have laws that make it a crime to circulate reports that a bank is unsound. How much greater a crime is it to give currency to reports that a government is unsound? What about fabrications such as that your President is aiming to make himself a dictator and is moving toward destroying the American system and substituting Socialism, Communism, and wants to sink the Constitution, abandon the principles of Jefferson and sail under the grisly flag of Karl Marx?"

Airs Waste Charges.

Without alluding to him by name, Farley discussed the charges of governmental waste and extravagance that have been voiced by Col. Frank Knox, a candidate for the Repubican Presidential nomination, as well as by other critics.

"A little while ago," he said "the Colonel was calling the President a Socialist. More recently he described him as a Tory, but I suppose it would be too much to expect consistency in a Republican candidate."

At another point, Farley said:

"If we could compare what is being spent to keep destitute Americans from starvaton, and to uphold our business structure, with the waste involved in the suspension of thousands of banks and tens of thousands of other commercial failures during a dozen years of Republican rule, the amount possibly misspent under the present Administration would seem like chicken feed."

Kidnap Arrest Fails To Disturb Parker

Mount Holly, N. J., June 4 (AP).—Ellis Parker, sr., chief of Burlington County detectives, planned to "talk with my wife and kids" tonight and then stroll over to the Elks Club for his usual evening chat with friends.

He said he was still undisturbed by the charge that he kidnaped and assaulted Paul H. Wendel, disbarred Trenton attorney, in an attempt to connect him with the Lindbergh kidnaping, and declined to discuss his arrest on that charge last night by New York authorities.

Parker went about his office work in the courthouse as usual today, while in Trenton it was announced there would be a delay of at least ten days in extradition proceedings to take him to Brooklyn, where a grand jury indicted him, his son, Ellis, jr., and three other men last night.

Parker said tonight he planned no special activity.

His only comment today on his arrest was:

Labor Adviser Urges Full Hour for Lunch

Geneva, June 4 (AP).—If you have that morbid feeling, try taking a full hour for lunch instead of a half. That is, if you can.

That is one conclusion of a long-awaited report on "workers' nutrition and social policy" which has been prepared by the economic adviser of the International Labor Bureau, and which will be submitted to the international labor conference opening here Saturday.

A half-hour's pause for lunch reacts against the worker's capacity to produce, the report finds. It causes bad digestion, exposes workers to nervous fatigue and increased morbidity.

Also stressed in the report is the need of better nourishment for world peoples, and a discussion of the means for reviving world workers who are now inadequately nourished.

Party to Back States' Rights, Landon Asserts

Codes of Monopoly Made Legal Under New Deal, Candidate Writes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—Gov. Landon of Kansas, in the Redbook Magazine for July, says the Republican Party enters the 1936 campaign "definitely in defense of the rightful powers of the States."

"The policies enunciated by Abraham Lincoln and by Theodore Roosevelt are not mere memories," says the article, made public today. "They are inspirations, and they are more. They are definite signposts to a never-ending progress.

"One reason for this quality of theirs—and the main reason—is that they do not point to extremes. They point to courses of steady common sense and to a poised balance; for instance, between the powers of the Federal Government and the powers of the States.

Champion of States.

"The Republican Party enters the campaign of 1936 definitely in defense of the rightful powers of the States. Its inheritance . . . is of scrupulous deference to those rights within all the amplitude provided by the Constitution."

Discussing Theodore Roosevelt's opposition to "malefactors of great wealth," the article said:

"Theodore Roosevelt called them 'malefactors' because through monopolistic practices they produced restraints of trade which burdened the consumers with oppressive prices and which stifled individual new effort and new accomplishment for the common good.

"Monopoly Legalized."

"What Theodore Roosevelt denounced as a crime, we have recently seen elevated by the National Recovery Administration into a virtue. We have seen individual effort and accomplishment decried and discouraged, and codes of monopoly not only condoned but legalized."

The article is headed "By Gov. Alfred M. Landon as Told to William Hard." A note explains it was written after talks with the Governor at Topeka.

Woman Pilot Will Run For Seat in Congress

Parker, Ariz., June 4 (AP).—Mrs. Nellie T. Bush, who claims to be the only licensed woman river pilot in the Nation, announced today she would be a candidate for Congress to succeed Arizona's woman Representative, Isabella Greenway.

Mrs. Bush, like Mrs. Greenway, is a Democrat. Mrs. Greenway will not seek re-election.

A practicing attorney, Mrs. Bush is one of Arizona's most widely known women. A member of the State Legislature for 12 years, she has operated a ferry in recent years and flies her own airplane.

Lowden-Baker Ticket Is Urged By Dr. Butler

Educator Backs Coalition as Way to Scuttle New Deal.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

New York, June 4.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, a power in the Republican Party for two generations, tonight passed over the entire field of active Republican candidates and picked former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, as his choice for the nomination.

For Vice President, Butler, who has participated in more national conventions than any living Republican, chose Newton D. Baker, Ohio conservative Democrat, indorsing whole-heartedly a Republican-Democratic coalition at Cleveland as the best means of scuttling the New Deal.

His second choices were Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, for President, and Lewis Douglas, Arizona Democrat and former New Deal director of the budget, for Vice President.

Butler, 70-year-old president of Columbia University, warned his party that it faced a fight for its very existence in November.

"The Republican Party has been on the wrong side of every important public question since 1919 and its organization and official representatives have entirely failed to grasp the revolution brought into our lives by the great war and by the United States becoming the world's greatest creditor Nation," he said.

"If we can grasp this problem, I think there is another period of public service before us. If we can not, another 1860 will come—a smash and reorganization."

Lowden "Not Interested."

Chicago, June 4 (U.P.).—Former Gov. Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, tonight refused to discuss a proposal by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, that the Republican Party nominate him for the Presidency on a bipartisan ticket with a conservative Democrat.

"I am not interested," Lowden said when informed of Butler's statement.

Fire Group Head Seeks Pensions

Curtis E. McGhee last night asked his fellow firemen to help him work for full half-pay pensions for members of the fire department.

His request came during his inauguration speech as new president of the City Firefighters Association at the Hamilton Hotel.

He also called for a set schedule for civil service examinations, a 25-year optional and 30-year compulsory retirement law, and plans so that the firemen can make use of their newly acquired 26-day annual leave.

McGhee succeeds Jesse M. Jamieson in office. P. C. Graves was inducted as vice president. The meeting was the last until fall.

Tribute Is Paid Speaker Byrns By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt joined with members of Congress and with the Nation yesterday in mourning the death of Joseph W. Byrns, Speaker of the House.

"Speaker Byrns belonged to that school of statesmen which is the hope and justification of our democracy," the President said.

"By a happy coincidence he represented for more than a quarter of a century the Hermitage district of Tennessee, a district of sentimental significance because it holds the sacred dust of Andrew Jackson; and there was about Speaker Byrns a simplicity and rugged honesty which we have come to associate with the name of Jackson.

"Fearless, incorruptible, unselfish, with a high sense of justice, wise in counsel, broad of vision, calm in adversity and modest in victory, honor and great usefulness.

"I personally mourn the passing of a steadfast friend of many years."

Vice President Garner said "the passing of Speaker Byrns was a great shock to me. We served as legislators for many years, and I had the greatest admiration for him. His passing was a distinct loss to the Congress as well as the country."

Called Great Speaker.

Scores of leaders in Congress and in the Government expressed their sorrow. Some of the comments follow:

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader. — He was a great Speaker. He had the respect, confidence and admiration of the members of both bodies.

Representative Bertrand H. Snell, House minority leader—It is a terrible thing. It is an irreparable loss.

Representative McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee—He was the best friend I had.

Senator Albin W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky — Speaker Byrns' long experience in public life, together with his earnest devotion to the public welfare, makes his death a grievous loss to the people in these times of stress.

Secretary Cordell Hull, a former Senator from Tennessee—In common with the people of the Nation, and particularly with every citizen of the State of Tennessee, I am distressed and grieved beyond measure to learn this morning of the death of Speaker Byrns. Joe Byrns and I were intimate personal friends during a period of more than 40 years. He will take his place in history with the very ablest Speakers of the House of Representatives, with the ablest parliamentary leaders and with the ablest statesmen of the country. The Nation, as well as the State of Tennessee, truly suffers a great loss.

Will Be Missed.

Secreary Wallace—I am very sorry indeed to hear of his death. He was a hard-working and conscientious public servant. The country will miss his very real ability.

Secretary Ickes—A very capable and patriotic statesman whose loss will be very much felt.

Attorney General Cummings—The death of Speaker Byrns is a source of deep sorrow to me, as he had been my close friend for many years. He was a man of vision and broad human sympathies, representing true American ideals. In his passing the Nation lost an outstanding statesman and a true patriot.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia—I think it's a great misfortune to the country.

Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska—Coming at this particular time, think the country is going to suffer more than it ordinarily would have.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan — He was one of the ablest, most devoted public servants.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York—Speaker Byrns' death represents his great sacrifice to the duties of his office.

Senator Key Pittman Democrat), Nevada, President Pro Tempore of the Senate—Speaker Byrns was a high example of that form of democratic statesman who so unassumingly through patience, love and admiration of his followers accomplished great leadership.

Senator Bachman (Democrat), Tennessee—Joe Byrns always has been a bulwark of strength in governmental affairs and his place will be difficult to fill.

Outstanding Statesman.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah—He was one of the outstanding statesmen of his day and one of the ablest Speakers the House ever had.

Senator Gerry (Democrat), Rhode Island—Everybody respected his fairness, ability and fine character.

Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California—Joseph W. Byrns was a man of unassailable integrity, genuine sincerity and undisputed powers of leadership.

Representative Boland (Democrat) Pennsylvania, majority whip —The country has suffered an irreparable loss and the Democratic party a great leader.

Senator Dennis Chavez (Democrat) New Mexico—He was a real patriot and a real American with the greatest of American characteristics, the spirit of fair play.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the Ways and Means Commitee, who had served a quarter of a century with Byrns—The death of Speaker Byrns is a national calamity. He was one of the ablest and most useful men ever in public life. It comes as a particular shock to me because of our long personal friendship. There were only three men in the House who had been here longer than I, Byrns, Representative Sabath (Democrat), Illinois, and Representative Taylor (Democrat), Colorado.

Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania—The country has lost a faithful public servant.

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama—The Democratic Party and the country have sustained a very great loss.

Shock to Taylor.

Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts—A really great, modest, retiring American. His wife mourns the passing of a fine husband; the Nation mourns the passing of a conscientious and able legislator; I mourn the passing of a true friend."

Representative Taylor (Republican), Tennessee—The announcement of the death of Speaker Byrns was indeed a great shock to me. I not only had a very high regard for him as the presiding officer of the House, but I entertained a genuine affection for him as a personal friend. While we held divergent views on political matters, such never interfered with out personal relations, which have been most cordial through a score of years. No man who has held the exalted office of Speaker of the House has been more popular with its membership than Joe Byrns. He was uniformly fair and courteous to members on both sides of the chamber, and they respected, honored and loved him.

"While the untimely passing of Speaker Byrns is a distinct loss to the Nation, it is an irreparable loss to Tennessee."

Senator Charles L. McNary, the minority leader—"It was most unfortunate and tragic and removed from public life a most unusual character."

Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin—"I was greatly shocked by his untimely death. The Nation has suffered a severe loss."

Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts—"A kindly man, a genial friend, an impartial Speaker and a brilliant legislator has passed to the great beyond in the person of Speaker Byrns."

Former Vice President Charles G. Dawes—"The sudden death of Speaker Byrns was a loss to the Nation.

"The long career of Speaker Byrns in the House of Representatives has been one of consistent industry and ability."

Bankhead Named Speaker

tered the oath. Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, Representative Edward T. Taylor, of Colorado, former acting leader; Representative O'Connor and Sergeant at Arms Kenneth Romney escorted Bankhead to the chair.

The House had chosen a strong successor to Byrns, and one who, despite a recent serious illness, had labored shoulder to shoulder with the late Speaker to wind up the arduous last-minute business of the session.

Bankhead is regarded as one of the ablest parliamentarians since James Mann, and a competent legislator. Where Byrns' strength lay in his persuasive qualities and personal likeableness, which effected many a compromise, Bankhead seldom yields but usually gains his point. The Alabaman has been called a conciliator rather than a compromiser.

Striding quickly down the main aisle, when House tempers were at white heat, Bankhead often has saved the day for the Democrats by his ability, as he calls it, to "examine the situation." Striking at the heart of a tangle, he has a faculty for presenting a ready solution. When he is in oratorical form, even Senator Borah does not surpass him in eloquence. And yet, the Alabaman seldom makes a speech.

Born on a farm near Moscow, Ala., April 12, 1874, second son of John Hollis Bankhead, United States Senator, Bankhead has just turned 62. He was educated in the public schools of Jasper and Fayette, and later went to the University of Alabama, where he played fullback on the varsity team and won a medal for oratory.

While his father was in Congress, young Bankhead joined him on Capitol Hill in 1893 as clerk of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. He studied law in spare moments at Georgetown University, and was graduated with the degree of LL. D. in 1895.

It is not known generally that Bankhead afterward went to New York for two years, as a law clerk, and was an active member of Tammany Hall.

Sitting at his desk in his office just off the House floor yesterday, Bankhead smiled over the incident.

"I couldn't stick it out," he said. "I got homesick. New York is too big for a country boy."

So he returned to Huntsville to practice law. But Tammany had given him a flare for politics, and the next few years found him a member of the Alabama legislature, city attorney of Huntsville and a circuit solicitor. He was elected to the Sixty-fifth Congress, and has been re-elected for 10 successive terms.

In Congress he became chairman of the potent Rules Committee, and after his unsuccessful bid for the Speakership last year, accepted the office of Majority Leader. He was ill when elected, and for nearly a year, Representative Taylor, of Colorado, functioned in his stead.

Like his daughter, Tallulah, the footlights had an attraction for Bankhead at an early age and he had at least one ligitimate offer. He put aside his dramatic yearnings, however, when his mother disapproved, but made up his mind that his own children would not be deprived of a similar opportunity.

housing measure, and controversial ship subsidy legislation will die with the session, shortly after the close of the Republican convention, killing hopes of their sponsors that adjournment delay would revive chances for passage.

Drive Found Useless.

Prior to the death of Speaker Byrns, legislative plans called for holding both houses in session through Monday in a frenzied effort to complete action on all loose legislative ends. Yesterday leaders recognized the futility of such a drive, and made arrangements to recess tomorrow regardless of the legislative status.

Senate Majority Leader Robinson, however, believes both houses will have ample time to appoint conferees if the Senate passes the tax bill today, and conference tax differences can be adjusted during the convention period. At most he thinks it will take Congress only one or two days to complete its business, once the convention is over.

Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee, now acting Democratic leader, said the House will take no further legislative action before June 15, but his statement was not believed to preclude the appointment of tax conferees by the House.

His daughter, Tallulah, received her first recognition as an actress in London, returning to this country to blaze her dramatic career from Broadway to Hollywood. Bankhead's other daughter, Eugenia, has been married several times, three times to the same man, Morton Hoyt, a Washington millionaire.

Speaker Bankhead will call the House to order today at 11 a. m. to make final arrangements for the funeral of the late Speaker, then recess the House until noon.

No caucus action by House Democrats to fill the majority leadership office vacated by Bankhead is expected this session. The Alabaman said yesterday he "assumed" Representative O'Connor would act as leader for the few days remaining. A pitched contest for the office is anticipated when the next Congress convenes. Besides O'Connor, Representatives Sam Rayburn, of Texas; Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia; John Rankin, of Mississippi, and Taylor, of Colorado, have been mentioned as possible contenders.

Meyers, G.P.O. Worker, Takes Spelling Title

John Meyers, Government Printing Office apprentice and student at the McKinley Night High School, was crowned spelling champion of the night high schools of Washington last night, as a result of The Washington Post spelling match.

The match was broadcast over WMAL. After spelling words like mnesic, miniaceous and disestablishmentarianism, Meyers spelled correctly cantaloupe, after George Ellis, the runner-up, had misspelled it cant-E-loupe.

Roosevelt Approves Record Naval Budget

The biggest peace-time defense budget in the country's history was provided for yesterday when President Roosevelt signed the $526,546,532 naval appropriation bill.

The measure authorizes construction of two new battleships if other treaty signatories start capital ship construction, and strengthens the naval establishment in both air and water departments. Previously, the President had signed a $572,446,844 War Department supply bill, carrying $388,104,859 for purely military purposes in the 1937 fiscal year.

Byrns' Death Makes 12th House Vacancy

By the Associated Press.

The death of Speaker Joseph W. Byrns raised the total vacancies in the House to 12.

Byrns was the seventh House member to die since Congress convened last January. The others were Representatives Lloyd (Democrat), Washington; Rudd, (Democrat), New York; Buckbee (Republican), Illinois; Thomas (Republican), New York; Perkins (Republican), New Jersey, and Andrews (Republican), Massachusetts.

The regular total House membership is 435. The membership now stands at 423. Other deaths prior to the opening of this session and resignations contributed to the vacancies.

Mrs. Byrns Is Third Widowed By Sudden Death of Speakers

Wife of House Leader, One of Capital Society's Most Striking Figures, Deluged With Condolences From Friends.

By the Associated Press.

Julia Woodward Byrns, third woman to be widowed in six years by the death of a Speaker of the House, has held a bright spot in Capital society.

Sudden death yesterday cut short her role as Speaker's hostess.

Death following the briefest of illnesses brought widowhood to Ella McBride Rainey on August 19, 1934; to Alice Roosevelt Longworth on April 9, 1931.

White-haired and handsome, fond of bright colors and able to wear them strikingly, Mrs. Byrns has been an easy-to-spot figure at social events of this Administration.

Friendship piled up in 27 years in Washington—Joe Byrns stood second in length of service in the House—poured back on Mrs. Byrns yesterday. Sympathetic callers came in scores. There was a deluge of cards, phone calls and telegrams.

When her husband became Speaker, Mrs. Byrns said:

"Whenever I get my driver's license I'm always listed as a housewife. I'm old-fashioned, I guess."

They were married 38 years ago at her native city of Nashville, Tenn., where her husband was then a young lawyer.

A member of 14 organizations, including the D. A. R. and United Daughters of the Confederacy, Mrs. Byrns has cared more for the traditional official social pattern than any of her immediate social predecessors—Mrs. Longworth, who took her "Princess Alice" prerogative not to hold "at homes;" Mrs. John Garner, who was too busy as her husband's secretary, and Mrs. Rainey, who also served in a secretarial capacity.

House Honors Byrns Today

saddest resolution it has been my duty to offer on the floor of the House. It relates to the death of our very much beloved Speaker, Mr. Byrns.

"I have been with him in every fight for years. I was by his side when he passed away, but my service could be of no assistance.

"Joe Byrns was true and loyal to his friends. He loved the members of this House and they loved him. He always tried to be fair to both political parties and to all individuals. He was just in his rulings.

"The influence he exercised in this House was demonstrated many times. He went through one of the most trying times any Speaker of the House has had to face, and, in my opinion, when history is written he will go down as one of the great Speakers of this assembly.

"In the passing of Joe Byrns we not only lose him as a friend and as the Speaker, but it has left a vacancy in his district which can not be filled. Not only will his constituents miss him, but the Nation will miss his influence and wise advice.

"He was one of the leading sons of Tennessee, and the only one who has graced the Speaker's chair for 100 years. The people of his State will mourn his loss. I can not say more at this time. I trust I may have an opportunity later of speaking in reference to the life, character and public service of Joe Byrns."

McReynolds' resolution provided arrangements for the funeral and adjournment of the House until today. Speaker Bankhead appointed Representatives O'Connor, McReynolds, Taylor and Snell as a committee on arrangements.

Tennessee Mourns.

Nashville, Tenn., June 4 (AP).—Tennessee was bowed with grief today for its "Uncle Joe" Byrns, who financed his way through college with earnings as a farm hand, and rose to Speaker of the National House of Representatives, but always remained "folksy."

The Speaker's body is due back at 12:30 p. m. Saturday, accompanied by President Roosevelt, who came to Nashville in the autumn of 1934 for a pilgrimage to the tomb of Andrew Jackson.

Mr. Byrns represented the same district in Congress that Jackson served and the district is named for Old Hickory's home, "The Hermitage."

Mr. Byrns' body will be taken immediately to the War Memorial Building, annex of the Capitol, for funeral services at 1 p. m., conducted by Dr. W. F. Powell, pastor of the First Baptist Church. After the services, the body will be taken to Mount Olivet Cemetery and placed in a vault.

Opening of the speaking campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Tennessee was postponed in respect to the dead leader.

When the Democratic State convention was held last month, the House Speaker was one of those named as delegates-at-large to the National Convention in Philadelphia.

Mr. Byrns' death occurred just three days before the time expires for Congressional candidates to qualify to run in the primary, hence quick action is necessary for those seeking the Democratic nomination to succeed him. Qualifying petitions must be filed by Saturday midnight.

Among those whose names have been mentioned by their friends as possible candidates are: J. Carlton Loser, district attorney general; County Judge Litton Hickman, Circuit Judge J. Frank Langford, State Senator Elmer Davies, Joseph W. Byrns, jr., and Col. Henry Dickinson, who opposed Byrns several years ago, all of Nashville, and Mayor W. D. Hudson, of Clarksville.

Committee of 60 Named.

Measure Recognizes Work of Haym Salomon in Revolutionary War.

By the Associated Press.

A resolution to honor a little-sung patriot of the American Revolution last night awaited President Roosevelt's signature.

Congress completed its action Wednesday on the measure authorizing the erection in the National Capital of a memorial to Haym Salomon, Polish Jew broker, who gave his fortune to the new-born United States of America.

At the White House it was said the President undoubtedly would sign the resolution.

If he does, the Washington Fine Arts Commission will be directed to select a site on which, under its supervision, will be erected a $80,000 monument from funds provided by a group of Jewish-Polish citizens.

Salomon was born in Lissa, Poland, in 1740, and came to the American colonies four years before the outbreak of the Revolutionary War. As an expert at commercial accounting and the master of ten languages, he made a fortune in financing the maritime adventures of colonial exporters.

He was reputed, however, to have loaned so much money to the newly formed United States, however, that he died penniless, with the United States owing him $640,000.

National Search Asked For Missing Girl, 15

Edmee Stephens, blonde and blue-eyed 15-year-old daughter of Winston B. Stephens, personnel director of the Resettlement Administration, was reported missing from her Chevy Chase, Md., home last night.

In asking the police to institute a nation-wide search for his daughter, her father said she had left Wednesday and had no extra clothes.

KANN'S brings to Washington
THE ACTUAL INCUBATOR that saved the lives of the five famous babies on display in Kann's Infants' Dept.

When Dr. Dafoe sent his urgent appeal for a device of the old-fashioned, water-heated style that could be used in the rural farmhouse where the "quints" were born, a frantic search began with the result that this 33-year-old incubator was located. Since its service with the babies, it was displayed in Canada and then appeared at Carnegie Hall in New York City. See it exhibited all this week, June 5 to 11 . . . there is no charge.

Low in Grades, Athlete Kills Teacher, Self

Lehigh Senior Runs Amok After He Demands Re-Examination.

By the Associated Press.

Bethlehem, Pa., June 4.—A Lehigh University senior and athlete, envisioning failure on the eve of graduation, shot and killed one of his teachers today, then committed suicide.

Two bullets in the chest, one near his heart, killed Charles Wesley Phy, 27, an instructor in the English department. Wesley L. Clow, 23, of Pine Castle, Fla., the student, shot himself in the head.

Clow, rated just below a passing grade, demanded a re-examination of the young instructor. Harry Snavely, of Lancaster, Pa., another student and the only other person in the recitation room, said the instructor told Clow he needed written approval from the dean.

Several Shots Heard.

"Well," muttered Clow.

Phy, apparently sighting a pistol, shouted, "Oh, don't," Snavely related.

Several shots rang out. Phy, wounded, ran from the room, collapsed in a downstairs corridor. He died in a hospital. Clow stepped outside the room and shot himself. He died about a half hour after the instructor.

Phy, crying "I'm shot," collapsed at the feet of Dr. R. C. Bull, director of student welfare, in Christmas-Saucon Hall.

Expressions on the campus indicated that Clow, although often graded low, was a diligent student and was unnerved by hard pre-examination work and the failure to pass. There was no evidence of a feud between the two.

Varsity Wrestler.

Clow was a varsity wrestler in the 118-pound class and made the swimming teams in his second and third years. He was a graduate of Asbury Park, N. J., High School and was a student in the mining engineering department.

Phy was graduated at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn. He received his master's degree at Lehigh and was striving for a doctor of philosophy degree. His father, Wesley S. Phy, a conductor on a Philadelphia suburban train, was on duty when he heard his son was slain. Unable to get a substitute immediately, he finished the run.

Committee Favors Nine District Bills

Nine minor District bills were reported favorably to the Senate by the District Committee yesterday after Senator King, the chairman, had polled the committee.

One of the measures would legalize the appointment of Isaac Gans as a member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, made last February by the District Commissioners. The legislation is needed, it is said, because Gans has passed the statutory retirement age of 70.

Four of the bills provide the customary authorizations for the Commissioners and the National Park Service to prepare for the Presidential inaugural ceremonies on January 20, 1937.

The other bills amend the charter of the National Union Insurance Co., permit the laying of a pipe line, declare December 26, next, a legal holiday, and authorize the issuance of a healing arts license.

U. S. S. Bushnell Opened to Public

The U. S. S. Bushnell, flagship of the submarine force, now in the Washington Navy Yard, will be open to the public for visits beginning this afternoon from 1 to 4 o'clock daily, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

The Bushnell will remain at the yard until June 15. On Thursday Rear Admiral Joseph R. Defrees, commandant of the Navy Yard, will relieve Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole as commander of the submarine force. The change of command will take place aboard the Bushnell.

Rear Admiral George T. Pettengill, now commander of the Battleship Division Two of the battle force, will replace Admiral Defrees at the Navy Yard.

O'Donnell Goes on Trial As Bogus Bill Passer

Charged with passing counterfeit $20 bills, James S. O'Donnell went on trial in the District Supreme Court yesterday before Justice Peyton Gordon. Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray declared he would try to link O'Donnell with the passing of about $800 in spurious $20 bills.

The notes allegedly were obtained in New York, where counterfeiters sold them for 30 cents on the dollar. Two others, indicted with O'Donnell, pleaded guilty. They were Audrey W. Jones and Joseph Furr. Attorney James A. O'Shea, defending O'Donnell, asserted he would show his client had no knowledge the bills were not genuine.

U. S. Increases Tariffs Against Reich Exports

Treasury Charges Nazis Subsidize Trade in Ten Commodities.

A new high tariff wall was yesterday flung up against Nazi Germany when a Treasury decision imposed increased duties on ten vital German exports to this country.

The ten imports last year were valued at more than $11,000,000.

Trade with Germany, already at a historical low ebb, will be further restricted by the decision, which slapped additional rates, ranging from 22½ to 56 per cent, under the tariff act of 1930, on the ten imports to the United States.

The increased imposts will become effective about July 11, 30 days after expected publication of the decision in the printed Treasury Decisions volume.

Gets No Reduction.

Even now Germany is the only country whose products are denied any tariff reductions granted in the 14 reciprocal trade agreements negotiated under the Administration's trade program.

The new duties are known as countervailing duties, a term given them in the 1930 tariff act, which was intended to offset export advantages given products by indirect or direct subsidy by foreign governments.

Attorney General Homer Cummings had given the Treasury his opinion that the duties were applicable to the imports from Germany since evidence showed that the Nazi government was subsidizing these products in an effort to build up foreign trade.

Other German products are already assessed higher duties under the anti-dumping laws, designed to check imports by this country of products which are sold here for less than they are sold at home or less than the cost of production.

Increases Listed.

The increases outlined by Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau, jr., were:

Cameras, 45 per cent; china table ware, 22½ per cent; toys, dolls and toy figures, 45 per cent; cotton and rayon gloves, 39 per cent; leather gloves, 47 per cent; surgical instruments, 56 per cent; calf and kid leather, 25 per cent; glass Christmas tree ornaments, 52 per cent; metal covered paper, 48 per cent; and thumb tacks, 31 per cent.

The Treasury Secretary held that the Nazi government was stimulating production of these products for export by granting cash subsidies through industrial associations, by currency manipulations, and by script and bond bonuses, all combining to allow the German exporters to sell for low prices here.

Cameras	$1,252,000
China table ware	562,000
Leather gloves	1,011,000
Surgical instruments	139,295
Calf and kid leather	875,000
Glass tree ornaments	911,648
Metal covered paper	329,519
Toys, dolls, toy figures	488,000
Gloves, cotton and fiber	5,427,226
Rayon gloves	152,895

Zioncheck Report Due in Few Days

A medical verdict on the condition of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, who is under mental observation at Gallinger Hospital, may be expected within a few days, it was learned yesterday.

"Mr. Zioncheck spent a very pleasant day," said Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock. "He is receiving a very thorough examination, physical as well as psychiatric."

The youthful Mrs. Zioncheck, his bride of little over a month ago, visited her husband again yesterday afternoon. She remained 10 minutes.

Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital and a famous psychiatrist, has not yet examined Zioncheck, but may do so today.

Driver Is Accused.

Staunton, Va., June 4 (AP).—W. H. Small, 20, who told State Office R. A. Lynn he drank three pints of gin before he went on a driving spee here Monday, was placed in jail yesterday to wait hearing on charges of misusing two automobiles; wrecking three others and driving while intoxicated.

Canoe Overturns, Two Swim Ashore

Two youths, sons of Army officers stationed at Bolling Field, swam ashore late yesterday when their canoe overturned in the Eastern Branch near the Naval Air Station.

They were Bradley Lundberg, 17, son of Maj. George G. Lundberg, and Theodore Baumeister, 16, son of Capt. Theodore A. Baumeister.

After their canoe turned over, the youths struck out for the Naval Air Station and made it without assistance. The Harbor Police retrieved their canoe.

Rites Held in Chicago For Cyrus McCormick

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Cyrus Hall McCormick, millionaire industrialist, was buried today in Graceland Cemetery, following funeral services in the Fourth Presbyterian Church and private services in the cemetery chapel.

Leaders of industry, government and finance attended the rites.

Madeira School Gives Diplomas To Class of 45

Several Capital Girls Are Among Graduates of the Institution.

Forty-five girls in white lace dresses and carrying bouquets of red roses were graduated from Madeira School, Greenway, Va., yesterday afternoon in the school's outdoor theater while nearly 500 people looked on and heard Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar College, warn the young graduates against "the evils of taking careless advice."

The afternoon was warm and clear and the outdoor amphitheater was almost filled. Some of the spectators sat on the grass under shade trees to listen to the ceremonies.

The girls, whose homes represented nearly every State in the Union, marched in single file down a path from the campus to the theater, while an orchestra played a march.

Undergraduates marched in first. They were followed by candidates for diplomas who took their places on the stage of the amphitheater.

Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Church, delivered the invocation.

Dr. MacCracken spoke for half an hour. He took a page from Shakespeare to illustrate his speech. He drew a vivid picture of Ophelia—tragic character in Hamlet—and told his audience trials and tribulations were the result of "too much advice of the wrong kind."

Mixing humor with the seriousness of his topic, he said:

"Ophelia was spoiled when she was 3 years old. She was the victim of a bad nursery school."

He said Ophelia's parents—their advice—misled the famous character in Hamlet. He then pointed out other women in Shakespeare's plays as antithesis of Ophelia's type—strong-willed women who were not, and would under no circumstances, be influenced by trivial advice.

"Chatter and advice portray a shallow mind," he said. He referred to Juliet and other women in Shakespeare's plays as women "who have lived not by advice but by strength of their own convictions — convictions they gained either by intuition or experience."

"There is such a thing as good advice, however," he told the girls. "But as for conventional advice—platitudes—I cannot warn you too strongly against it."

Mrs. David L. Wing, school head, awarded the diplomas. She told of the school's advantages and of its 30 years' history. The school for 25 years was located in the District. Five years ago it was moved to the spacious grounds it now occupies in Fairfax County.

Dr. Hart pronounced the benediction.

Commencement week began Saturday with a horse show. Sunday a senior vesper service was held.

Cathedral Gets $26,592; Drive Nearing Close

Association Enrolls 750 as New Members; 1,000 Fixed as Goal.

The intensive period of the Washington Cathedral membership campaign for 1936 was concluded yesterday with an enrollment of 750 new members of the National Cathedral Association and total subscriptions of $26,592.

A final report, including these figures, was submitted yesterday at a luncheon meeting at the Carlton Hotel, with Lloyd B. Wilson, chairman of the Laymen's Committee, announcing that although the minimum financial goal of $25,000 had been exceeded, the effort will be continued until the quota of 1,000 new maintenance subscribers is also attained.

Still to be called upon by the more than 100 workers who volunteered their services in the campaign are several hundred potential members.

The women's unit, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Charles Warren, has obtained 234 memberships, for a total of $3,232.

Both these groups exceeded their quotas. The men's unit, under H. L. Rust, jr., member of the Cathedral Council, reported 247 memberships, with a total of $3,155, and an additional list of 92 subscriptions for a total of $607 has been received through the mail.

During the luncheon Wilson announced that the executive committee will meet in the near future to draft a report to the Cathedral Chapter embodying suggestions on how the maintenance membership effort may be continued throughout 1936.

Big Increase in Dead Letters Laid to '35 Chain-Letter Craze

Rise of $39,504.73 in Amount Taken From Lost Missives Credited in Part to Fad; U. S. to Complete Clean-up Job Next Month.

By the Associated Press.

Postal workers have begun the clean-up job on the chain-letter craze of last year.

Dimes, quarters and half-dollars which roll out of dead letters as they are discarded at the end of one year's wait in the dead-letter office here are being sent to the Treasury to swell the Nation's income.

How much the Government will make on the mushroom get-rich-quick scheme, which postal officials branded "a fraud and a lottery," cannot be estimated, however, until the job is completed next month.

Officials know, however, that the sum of money found in dead letters, which goes into Uncle Sam's pockets, increased $39,504.73 last year over the $109,101.02 taken from lost letters in 1904.

The chain-letter craze was held largely responsible for an increase of 1,100,508 in the number of dead letters last year over the 12,567,103 total for 1934.

"It was bound to happen," a postal worker commented. "People copying off the lists of beneficiaries were always getting the right street address opposite the wrong name. Every time that happened we got a dead letter.

"Then, too, most of the people who indulged in the craze were not blessed with too much intelligence. They wrote illegibly, many of them in pencil. And by the time a list of names was copied off, in turn, by a whole series of people, 25 or 50 per cent of the letters would be misdirected."

Postal workers said a few chain letters keep trickling in, but John J. Gregory, lottery expert of the department, said he "hasn't seen anything of that craze in some months."

Gregory said chain letters were still being sent for social purposes or for organizing opinion on some subject.

The department has no objection to chains of this type.

Suit Charges Fame Made New Vallee

New York, June 4 (AP).—A complaint that rich rewards of the radio and the movies turned Rudy Vallee against his former "father, employer and partner," was voiced by Charles Bellak today in a $470,000 damage suit charging the bandmaster with contract breaking.

An autographed photograph of Vallee was shown the court to support a contention Bellak was all those things to Vallee in the days when he "didn't have a dime." On it was written the "father, employer, partner" sentiment.

After Vallee signed a contract with the National Broadcasting Co., Bellak said an N. B. C. official told him he was wasting his time trying to retain Vallee's services as "anybody would be afraid to buck N. B. C."

As president of the Ruvall Orchestra Corporation, Bellak seeks $170,000 damages from Vallee and $300,000 from N. B. C.

Samuel Gottlieb, Vallee's counsel, denied the charges and described Bellak as "the most ungrateful individual that ever stepped into court."

Army Reserve Commissions 57 at Maryland

Maj. Clark Gives Oath of Allegiance to Graduates; Kemp, Byrd Speak.

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., June 4.—Fifty-seven members of the University of Maryland graduating class were given commissions as second lieutenants in the Infantry Reserve Corps today.

The new officers were members of the Reserve Officers Training Corps during their university life. The oath of allegiance was given them by Maj. Howard Clark 2d, stationed at the school.

Arnon L. Mehring, of Hyattsville, was presented with a gold bullet for being named on the all-American rifle team. He was the first Maryland student ever chosen for the ten-man team.

The new officers who live in Washington were given a year's membership in the Reserve Officers Association. This gift was tendered them by Maj. Ray E. Hughes, incoming president of the District of Columbia association, and Maj. John Coswell, jr., past president.

The Rev. Ronalds Taylor, of College Park, opened the outdoor presentation exercises with an invocation. Prof. William B. Kemp, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture, and H. C. Byrd, president of the university, spoke to the officers.

Gen. Brees Ordered To Command in Texas

The transfer of Maj. Gen. Herbert J. Brees, now commandant of the General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to the command of the Second Division, stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., was ordered yesterday by the War Department.

He will replace Maj. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, who was recently transferred to the command of the Sixth Corps Area, with headquarters in Chicago.

Brig. Gen. Charles M. Bundel, commanding the Third Field Artillery Brigade at Fort Lewis, Wash., will succeed Gen. Brees at Fort Leavenworth.

Marker to Brandeis Is Spelled 'Brandies'

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 4.—Kenneth Teasdale, of the St. Louis Bar Association, was chagrined today.

He discovered that the bronze tablet to be placed in a sidewalk tomorrow to commemorate the spot where Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis began the practice of law in 1878 spelled the justice's name "Brandies." Teasdale is chairman of the committee for the ceremony.

Craftsmen were quickly called to transpose the letters.

Taylor Indicted In First-Degree Murder Count

Accused Woman's Slayer; Grand Jury Returns 29 True Bills.

James Walter Taylor, colored, was indicted on a charge of first-degree murder by the District grand jury yesterday. The indictment was one of 29 the grand jurors presented to Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in the District Supreme Court.

Taylor is alleged to have fatally stabbed Mary Young, also colored, in a fight in their Second street southwest home last month.

Two women, charged with having performed criminal operations, were included in the list of indictments. They were Mrs. Myrtle Arnold and Mrs. Anna R. Hoff. In one instance, a young woman died as a result of an operation allegedly performed by Mrs. Arnold.

James Johnson and William Brown, assault with intent to commit robbery; Margaret W. North, receiving stolen property; George Daugherty, Walter Stenson, Arzsol A. Minor, Percy Thompson, Joe McCloud, Herbert E. Anderson and William Watson, assault with a dangerous weapon; James A. Churchman, violation of section 863 D. C. code.

Walter R. Roberts, Michael Burella and Mosby Williams, violation of Harrison narcotic act; Ruth M. Iddings and Eleanor Mears, false pretenses; Willboyd Peace, carnal knowledge; Anna R. Hoff and Myrtle Arnold, abortion; James Walter Taylor, first degree murder.

Those against whom the grand jury ignored charges were: Mabel Dyer, grand larceny; Wiley Crouch, Willie Paulin, James L. Grimes, Paul Chestnutt and Burris C. Holden, robbery; Robert David Kulp, violation of section 851-b, D. C. code; Chester S. Ellis, embezzlement; Morris Dove and George Du Presne, carnal knowledge, and Charles J. Ross, violation of section 814, D. C. code.

Tax Rate Is Set.

Hagerstown, Md., June 4.—Washington County's tax rate was fixed at $1.05 on the $100 yesterday by the board of county commissioners, an increase of 9 cents over last year's rate. The increase was made necessary to take care of primary and election expenses this year, provisions for the interest and retirement of road bonds and additional appropriations for old-age pensions.

Beauty, Asleep 4 Years, Hears Physician Talk

Chicago Woman Unable to Wake, However; Eyes Fill With Tears.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 4.—Tears filled the eyes of Oak Park's sleeping beauty, still and silent on the bed that has been her prison for the last four years.

Patricia Maguire had heard the doctor talking about her illness.

She wept, but she could not wake.

"She understood me," said Dr. Rene Cruchet, French authority on sleeping sickness, today after he talked to her. "I could tell it by the look in her eyes. When I spoke of her condition, her eyes filled with tears."

Despite the display of emotion, the 31-year-old victim remained fast in the grip of her slumber. Her arms were flexed, but rigid. One toe stood erect. The right side of her face was paralyzed, and her eyes turned outward.

Like the sleeping beauty of the legend, Patricia might, Dr. Cruchet said after a visit to her home, sleep on to old age without material change in her condition.

She already had slumbered longer, he asserted, than any other victim of the disease—encephalitis lethargica. She fell asleep on February 15, 1932.

The acute stage of her affliction had passed, and she was now suffering from its complicated and lingering sequel, he added.

He inspected the prescriptions of the patient's physician, Dr. Eugene Traut, and pronounced them the best the medical world could supply.

France, Britain Willing to Lift Curbs on Italy

Ready to Act if Mussolini Keeps Mediterranean, European Policies.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 4.—France and Great Britain are willing, diplomatic sources said tonight, to lift sanctions from Italy if Premier Mussolini agrees to maintain the present status of the Mediterranean and of central Europe.

They reached an agreement, said diplomatic sources, through their ambassadors after a talk on May 15 between Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and France's incoming premier, Leon Blum.

Lifting sanctions would permit Italy to borrow money to finance the development of Ethiopia.

Officials here confirmed that France and Britain have agreed to postpone sessions of the League of Nations' Council until June 29. This delay will allow them time to complete proposals for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian issue.

Blum Would Negotiate.

Diplomatic sources said they understood Blum is willing to negotiate with Reichsfuehrer Hitler if the British insist upon conversations. Hitler, it was said, has sounded Paris and London on the prospect of early negotiations.

Blum, France's new Premier, has announced his foreign policy will be based on the "two closely linked ideas of efficient mutual assistance and progressive disarmament."

He hopes to play doctor to the ailing League and also wants to tie up Britain, Germany, Soviet Russia and France in a "master" pact of mutual assistance and disarmament within the League.

Return to closest co-operation with Great Britain will be Blum's first move, say his followers.

New Disarmament Efforts.

Blum announced he would sponsor new disarmament efforts. Nationalist opponents smile politely, but the wealthy Socialist leader is determined to go ahead.

"And if Germany refuses to disarm?" he was asked.

"If Germany doesn't wish to participate in our work," he replied, "we'll have to conclude a convention without her.

"But," he hastened to add, "it would have to be just as fair to Germany as if she had been present at its drafting."

Texans to Exhibit Buffalo Bill Statue

Austin, Tex., June 4 (AP).—"Buffalo Bill"—his critics called him a Union spy—was victor today in the State Court of Civil Appeals over those who sought to bar him from the Texas Centennial because he fought against the South.

The court dissolved an injunction which had prevented centennial officials from placing Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney's equestrian statue of Col. William F. Cody on the exposition grounds at Dallas. Centennial authorities began assembling the statue a few hours later.

C. L. Greenwood, Austin oil man and historian, obtained the injunction. He contended Buffalo Bill's only connection with Texas history was that he fought against Texas and the other Confederate States.

Everett Looney, attorney for Greenwood, argued that a statue of "Haile Selassie, Hitler, Mussolini or Zioncheck would be as appropriate as one of Buffalo Bill," and that one of Santa Anna, Mexican dictator against whom Texas rebelled to gain its freedom, "would be more fitting."

Engineering Awards Show Large Gain

New York, June 4 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended June 2 totaled $45,305,000, against $19,672,000 for the like 1935 period, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Private work amounted to $15,619,000, against 8,586,000 last year; Federal, $2,903,000, against $3,003,000; State and municipal, $24,783,000, against $8,083,000.

France to Seek U. S. Debt Pact, Blum Aid Says

Popular Front Regime to 'Copy' New Deal, De Tessan Holds.

By the United Press.

Paris, June 4.—Francoise de Tessan, undersecretary of state in the new Popular Front government and foreign affairs adviser to Premier Leon Blum, revealed tonight that France will attempt to settle her defaulted war debt to the United States.

"I am not qualified to speak for the chief of the government," he said, "but personally I am convinced that Premier Blum has in mind a sort of symbolic settlement of the war debt question.

"I consider that he made this clear when he spoke before the American Club recently.

Wants Settlement.

"Certainly I myself want to see the war debt question settled satisfactorily as it will increase rapprochement between the United States and France."

De Tessan did not discuss what he described as a "symbolic settlement."

He said the new government, which took office tonight, will be modeled along Roosevelt lines.

"There have been too many attempts by high society to increase Franco-American amity," he said. "It is not enough to have the upper crust of both countries hobnobbing together. We need a friendship based on understanding among the masses.

Urges Copying U. S.

"Also, we of France need the energy the United States has shown in coping with her problems. We should certainly copy the courage of the United States as well as the imagination of some of her statesmen.

"In carrying out a new deal for France we can profit by the experiencies of the United States—both from the successes and errors of President Roosevelt's undertakings."

De Tessan said the problems confronting France are similar to those which President Roosevelt had to solve when he assumed the Presidency in 1933.

"France's problems will require equally as radical methods for solution as the American problems did," he said.

Labor Unrest Stirs Europe

Elysee Palace, unsmiling as he stepped from a Presidential automobile.

Blum spent an hour with President Lebrun. He will appear before the Chamber of Deputies Saturday and ask a vote of confidence.

Housewives jammed market places in some quarters gathering supplies. Union news dealers announced they were closing all stands tomorrow and demanding higher percentage in sales.

The Paris Newspaper Publishers Association decided to suspend publication of all papers until midnight tomorrow because of inability to distribute.

The deadlock continued between the metal workers and employers. The union, answering the employer's letter to Premier Sarraut, which termed their strike "revolutionary," announced they would "unswervingly" continue factory occupation until their demands were met.

The railroad workers' union warned members against listening to "agitators," but asserted its complete solidarity "with workers who are striking in other industries."

As Premier Sarraut and his cabinet began their trek to the palace to resign, the chamber gave former Premier Edouard Herriot the job as president of the new chamber, and Jules Jeannenley was elected president of the senate.

Premier, Leon Blum, Socialist; ministers of state, Camille Chautemps, Radical-Socialist; Paul Faure, Socialist; Maurice Violette, United Socialist; national defense and vice premier, Edouard Daladier, Radical-Socialist; air, Pierre Cot, Radical-Socialist; navy, Alphonse Gasnier-Duparc, Radical-Socialist; finance, Vincent Auriol, Socialist; interior, Roger Salengro, Socialist; commerce, Paul Bastid, Radical-Socialist; education, Jean Zay, Radical-Socialist; economy, Charles Spinasse, Socialist; public works, Albert Bedouce, Socialist; colonies, Marius Moutet, Socialist; communications, Robert Uardillier, Socialist; agriculture, Georges Monnet, Socialist; pensions, Albert Riviere, Socialist; social solidarity (Labor), J. Confusion Rules Markets.

By the Associated Press.

Confusion ruled in foreign exchange markets yesterday as a new crisis threatened the French franc.

Strikes in France, affecting food supplies and newspapers, and the naming of the new Socialist government brought a three-way flight of funds from Paris—to London, New York and Brussels.

International banking quarters said they deem devaluation of the franc imminent, owing to the gravity of the present crisis.

Demand for the pound sterling in New York lifted it to $5.04 at one time, the highest since August, 1934. It closed off ⅜ of a cent at $5.01⅜.

French francs in New York, deliverable in 90 days, were under pressure and sagged .53½ of a cent under the current rate, compared with .49½ of a cent Wednesday.

International banking circles said both the British equalization fund and the American stabiliaztion fund were at work—now buying, now selling—in an effort to confound speculators gambling on devaluation of the French money.

Foreign exchange experts said yesterday's flight of gold from Paris was precipitated in some measure by the gold loss of the Bank of France. For the week ended May 29 it totaled 438,000,000 francs (about $28,836,000 at the current rate of exchange). It was the tenth consecutive weekly drain.

In New York the Federal Reserve bank reported gold engagements of $13,455,000 in Paris for shipment to the United States, bringing the total outflow to $212,300,000 since April 24.

Spain's Cabinet Faces Crisis as Strikes Spread

250,000 Workers Sharing in Walk-Out; Leftist Split Adds to Peril.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, June 4.—Signs of a growing split in the Leftist front, which dominates the Spanish government, accentuated the gravity tonight of a series of growing strikes.

With nearly 250,000 workers out, there were widespread rumors a cabinet crisis is imminent.

A breach between Socialists and Syndicalists might force Premier Santiago Casares to resign, these reports said. Syndicalists, refusing to obey the government's order to end the strikes, are seeking to extend them.

Police guarded the cafes of Madrid after reported threats those places whose workers refused to join in the walkout would be bombed.

In a series of sporadic labor disorders in various parts of the country three persons were killed and a number were injured.

Fears of Barcelona health officials that the Catalonian capital might be swept by pestilence as a result of a garbage collectors' strike were dissipated when the strike was called off after two days. Refuse had been piled in the streets.

Representatives of 25,000 Austrian miners spent the day negotiating with the ministry of labor in an effort to arrive at some compromise, but apparently little headway was made.

The strike of Huelva and Malaga peasants spread to many new villages and there were a number of incidents in which several persons were wounded.

The government, through Augusto Barcia, minister of state, threatened to ban Syndicalists if they do not change their tactics. He said:

"If the Syndicalists persist in disobeying orders from the ministers of labor and the interior the government plan to outlaw them."

Belgium Labor Victorious.

Antwerp, Belgium, June 4 (AP).—Authorities granted a concession to 10,000 strikers here today by agreeing to a revision of wage scales within a fortnight providing the strike was canceled immediately.

An answer from the strikers was awaited.

A strike of dock workers spread to other unions with a total of 25,000 employes demanding wage increases. Delayed trains blocked freight yards, and troops concentrated in the strike area to prevent disturbances.

In Ghent, authorities, refusing to show sympathy with the strikers, would not allow vessels bound for Antwerp to unload at the Ghent docks, but shipping firms agreed to pay corresponding wages the Antwerp strikers might obtain.

South Chinese Demand Battle With Japanese

Reports Confirmed That Canton Troops Occupy Several Towns.

By the Associated Press.

Hongkong, China, June 4.—Provincial armies of southern China tonight demanded to be sent to fight the Japanese.

Petitions from the Kwangtung and Kwangsi military, addressed to the Southwestern Political Council, were published here along with similar urgings from numerous Canton public bodies.

They sought to press for resistance to Japan by the northern Nanking government.

Observers of the newest Sino-Japanese crisis, now involving high tension between North and South China, believed most of the demands were inspired by the Kwangtung and Kwangsi provincial leaders, Chen Chai-Tong and Li Chung-Jen.

Both these leaders have expressed a desire for war with Japan.

Despite official denials, there was confirmation of Japanese reports that Canton troops actually have crossed the border of Hunan Province, to the north, and have occupied several towns.

(Japanese reports reaching Shanghai from the Kwangsi capital of Nanking said the Kwangsi provincial military, with 100,000 troops already started into Hunan, had enlisted 60,000 more militiamen. Troops were being sent to the important Kwangsi Province towns of Kweilin and Liuchow, where chieftains said they had 500 trucks ready to move them across the border at any instant.

(Other Japanese advices to Shanghai, via Canton, asserted the Kwangtung military headquarters had revealed intelligence "indicating the National (Nanking) government is massing four divisions in southern Fukien Province to oppose the advancing Kwangtung first army." The latter troops were reported entering southern Fukien.)

Loeb Killer Freed, Judge Lauds Jury

Joliet, Ill., June 4 (U.P.).—James Day, young hill-billy convict, who slashed Richard Loeb to death with a razor, allegedly because the co-slayer of little Bobby Franks made improper advances to him, was acquitted by a jury late today.

The jury deliberated less than an hour.

Day smiled and walked over to his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Brooks, and put his arms around them.

His attorney said he would apply for parole.

The crowd in the courtroom, a mere 100 in contrast to the mob which jammed it during sensational testimony, applauded when the verdict was announced.

Circuit Judge Edwin L. Wilson commended the jury for its "justified verdict" and then called Day to the bench.

"If there's anything I can do for you when you are up for a parole," the judge told the beaming Day, serving a sentence for larceny, "let me know. I will be more than glad to help you."

The Speakership.

The importance of the office of Speaker of the House is emphasized by the prompt election of Representative Bankhead to fill the vacancy opened by the sad and untimely death of Joseph W. Byrns. And it will perhaps be some consolation to Mr. Byrns' many friends and admirers that both the immediate replacement of House leadership and the choice for that post would unquestionably have been approved by him as eminently desirable for the smooth conduct of democratic institutions.

The once enormous power of the Speaker was lessened by the successful fight, a quarter of a century ago, to take from his office the authority to appoint committees, other than those of a select or conference character. Though far less czaristic than formerly, the post has none the less retained a most important directing force. On the resourcefulness, tact and urbanity of the Speaker, aside and apart from his requisite knowledge of parliamentary law, depends in large part the efficient functioning of representative government.

In Great Britain, where the title of "Speaker" originated centuries ago in the delegation of one member to "speak" for the Commons to the King, the position is non-partisan, being purely one of presiding over parliamentary deliberations. Indeed quite a storm of protest was aroused when at the last British election the Labor Party decided to run a candidate, in the event unsuccessfully, against the member who has for many years held that politically detached office.

With us the Speakership is a frankly partisan office, as emphasized by Mr. Byrns when, at the time of his election, he said that: "I subscribe to the platform and principles of my party and shall endeavor, so far as I properly can, to assist in the enactment of legislation in accordance with those policies."

The difference between the British and American conceptions of the function is rooted in the intentional separation of executive and legislative powers in this country. With no administrative officers holding seats in Congress, it is inevitable that the Speaker should be allowed freedom to use his office in behalf of the legislative program of the Government, which bears responsibility for national welfare.

In strict accord with the American tradition, but always with proper regard for the rights of the minority, Speaker Byrns ably fulfilled his important duties. In spite of the popularity and skill of his successor, the very competent hand of the popular Tennessee leader will be greatly missed, and that more widely than in the halls of Congress.

The Last Link Finished.

Though the prospect of a clear route between downtown Washington and the residential northwestern section is reason enough for cheering the opening yesterday of the lower-level P street bridge, there is a larger cause for congratulation. The new viaduct, which provides the last link in the Potomac-Rock Creek parkway, is more than just another piece of steel and cement. It is, even to the most impatient motorist's eye, a graceful structure.

Every bridge is efficient by its very nature—even the clanking Fourteenth street arrangement across the Potomac—and on this hangs the great part of the layman's high regard for this form of engineering. Not every bridge, however, is beautiful as well. In this respect, particularly, the new P street bridge will win widespread acclaim.

For this achievement the District is indebted to the Bureau of Public Roads, which designed the bridge; to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which approved the plans; to the Public Works Administration, which undertook the construction, and to the local highway department which throughout co-operated closely on all phases of the project. Washington is fortunate in having all these agencies at its service.

They have yet to widen a few spots on the parkway, there is a slide to be walled back and—most important—a grade separation to be installed at K street to avoid congestion at the intersection. These accomplished and some solution found for the nocturnal detour around the Zoo, Washington will have moved far toward the realization of a sensibly planned and competently executed highway system.

Few other municipalities can boast so delightful and useful a parkway, cutting right through the city and affording relief to congested streets as well as recreation to those enabled to avoid them.

No Need For Haste.

When the Senate resumes its debate on the tax bill, it will have before it for consideration the controversial section on corporate taxation. Senator Black's introduction of a substitute proposal more in line with the House bill, carrying high taxes on undistributed corporate earnings, blocked passage of the bill last Wednesday. It is expected, however, that the Senate will make short work of the unfinished sections when it reconvenes and that the measure will be rushed through conference to become law prior to the end of the session.

Such precipitancy is more than unnecessary. It is inexcusable, in view of the little time that has been given to study of the proposals now under consideration. The case against the House bill has been set forth conclusively by the majority members of the Senate Finance Committee. In their report they point out that the House plan proposes an "entirely untried system which appears decidedly uncertain as to revenue yield."

Furthermore they believe that the proposed graduated taxes on undistributed profits would prevent the growth of new corporations, retard business expansion, and seriously affect the unemployment problem. In the opinion of the committee, the House bill would also penalize small corporations with insufficient reserves and give advantages to large corporations with surpluses on hand. The House plan tends, it is said, to "transfer the corporate control from the officers and directors of the corporation to the legislative branch of the Government." Last, but not least, the measure makes no distinction between the reserves required for a stable business and those which from their very nature are subject to very sharp fluctuations.

The Senate bill is much better than the House bill but, after all, it is merely a lesser evil. Even its authors place chief emphasis upon such negative virtues as its closer conformity with the prevailing system of corporate taxation. The Senate bill also would greatly increase the tax burdens resting upon corporate industry and have a retarding influence upon business recovery. Furthermore, neither the House nor the Senate measure can be relied upon to yield adequate revenue returns.

Advocates of the House bill, citing Treasury estimates, assert that it will provide a large part of the funds requested by the President. Opponents, likewise supported by expert opinion, doubt whether the House bill will provide much, if any, additional revenue. Finally, the members of the Senate Finance Committee challenge Treasury estimates as tending to minimize returns from their compromise tax plan. Since President Roosevelt called for new taxes, to make up for loss of revenue from processing taxes and added expenses due to bonus payments, the prevalent uncertainty about yields emphasizes the need for further study of the tax problem.

This is only one of many arguments in favor of delaying action until a well-balanced, carefully drafted tax measure can be put before both houses of Congress and defended on its merits. Senator Lewis made a characteristically impassioned but unsuccessful plea to recommit the Senate tax bill and postpone action until the next session of Congress. While the Senator from Illinois was frankly worried about the political consequences of new tax legislation on the eve of a Presidential election, his advice is none the less sound because his motives were mixed.

Suggested Acknowledgement.

One autumn afternoon 90 years ago in Andrews' Eagle Ice Cream Saloon in Pittsburgh a voice sang out above the polite din to apprise the patrons that "It rained all night the day I left, the weather was so dry."

Spoons clattered in delighted amazement. What was this new nonsense? "The sun so hot I froze to death," continued the minstrel, "Susanna, don't you cry." In a few weeks, and without benefit of phonograph or radio, the ditty had swept the country. A year later, it became the marching song of the thousands who poured westward in the great Gold Rush of '48. Today, almost a century later, it has been chosen for the marching song of eastward-marching hopefuls who will enter Cleveland next week to urge Alf Landon as the Republican nominee for President.

Ironically the song was written by a Democrat—Stephen Foster, son of William Foster, who was once appointed by Jackson to fill a minor Treasury Department position in Washington. As a young man in Pittsburgh, Foster belonged to a small group who styled themselves "The Knights of the S. T." (Square Table?). When they had learned all the current songs, Foster undertook to write some new ones himself. One result was "Oh! Susanna."

How it progressed from the knights' parlor to the ice cream saloon is not certain, but it is known that a few months later Foster gave the manuscript to a Cincinnati publisher who realized several thousand dollars from it before the pirates of the trade laid hands on it. There is no record of Foster ever receiving a cent for composition. He died, as is well known, in lonely penury in a New York hospital after having given the world such gems as "Old Black Joe," "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Old Folks At Home."

Perhaps John Hamilton could in some measure atone for this ungrateful neglect by forwarding, in token for his use of "Oh! Susanna," a check to any one of the several groups who today are striving to make permanent the memory of America's greatest troubadour.

Premier Blum Takes Office.

The spreading strike movement in France, now said to involve approximately half a million workers and a great variety of industries and occupations in various parts of the nation, provides a dramatic setting for the advent to power of the Popular Front government.

In a succession of statements and speeches Leon Blum, who yesterday assumed the post of premier, has sought to calm the fears of the propertied classes and of his Radical Socialist allies by promising that the new government would seek no revolutionary changes in the French economic system.

This strategy was sound. A further flight of French capital, bound to take place if the belief took hold that the Popular Front regime is planning to transform France into a Socialist state, would inevitably undermine currency stability. Yet M. Blum and the other leaders of the Popular Front are opposed to devaluation and are pledged to preserve the franc at its present par.

However, if for reasons of tactics the new government is forced to be moderate, it must also reckon with a deep underlying current of unrest among the masses that provided the Left parties with their votes at the last elections. For several years France has been grappling vainly with problems arising out of the depression. With popular sentiment dead set against devaluation, successive French governments were unwilling to take the course charted by Great Britain, the United States and many other nations. The alternative was deflation.

For at least two years France has been engaged in this process of bringing down governmental, industrial and other costs. But, as usually happens, the decline in wages has been more noticed than the decline in prices, thus arousing considerable resentment among the workers. It is this circumstance as much as anything else which was responsible for the sweeping gains made at the polls by the Communists and Socialists.

That this victory should have been followed by a wave of strikes for higher wages and improved working conditions is hardly surprising. It was an inevitable sequel. Yet up to now the strikers have put forth no political demands, limiting their aims to purely economic matters. It is therefore the extent rather than the actual nature of the strike movement which makes it dangerous. But the very spread of mass protest is bound to give rise to the belief that the motivation is revolutionary. And if it is permitted to get out of hand, it may become revolutionary.

Should that happen France would be faced by a very evil situation. Left extremism on the one hand is bound to arouse Right extremism on the other. The new government's first task, therefore, must be to restore quiet and order in the nation. It is no easy task for which Premier Blum has assumed responsibility.

Victor And Vanquished.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio, grizzled leader of the Italian armies in East Africa, returned to Rome this week, fresh from his triumphs. The populace turned out in hundreds of thousands to cheer him. Women wept with joy and covered the hero with flowers. The Duce gave him an accolade, for once letting someone else share the spotlight. A victory had been won, if by methods that do not bear too close inspection, and victory is sweet. The conqueror was receiving his reward.

At about the same moment that Badoglio arrived in the Eternal City, a slim, dark figure, unmistakably regal and intensely sad, was setting foot on British soil as an exile. He had left much behind him—the throne of the Lion of Judah, the Ark of the Covenant which, as tradition has it, had been brought centuries before from the Temple in Jerusalem, the towering mountains and the sun-baked deserts and the fertile fields of his native land. Also abandoned are the plans he had so eagerly worked out to raise his nation from dark savagery to the sunlit heights of modern civilization.

Haile Selassie, too, was given an ovation. And in his case the world will echo the acclaim. Like the British crowds who met him on his arrival in London, civilization recognizes in the last of Ethiopia's native rulers a man who fought bravely against overwhelming odds, and who in defeat remains a gallant and distinguished figure.

Why hasn't World Peaceways, which is depicting the horrors of war in a series of ads, thought to publish a picture of a plate of army beans?

A physician declares that it isn't spring, but fresh vegetables, that causes the young man's fancy lightly to turn. Oh, spinach!

Vandenberg's Qualifications.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the time nears for announced Republican Presidential candidates to go to the post, I am going to set forth my reasons for thinking that Michigan's United States Senator, Arthur H. Vandenberg, while not an announced candidate, is the man to whom the Republican Party should turn.

1. He clearly demonstrated his vote-getting ability during the time when the popularity of the President and the "New Deal" was at its extreme height.

2. He is better fitted by nature, training and experience for the high office than any announced candidate.

3. No candidate has the grasp of the present involved problems of government which he possesses. He knows what it's all about.

4. He is the only available man in the party who can be successfully matched against the President as a radio orator. On the platform he has few equals.

5. He hails from the great Middle West. The Republican Party requires the electoral votes of this region, including his own great State of Michigan.

6. He, more than anyone else, has actively and effectively stalled and stopped the "New Dealers" in their perilous march.

7. He is trusted and respected by his senatorial colleagues on both sides of the chamber. If elected he will need and would obtain the support of the Senators who are members of the majority party, which will control the Senate until 1940, where others would fail.

8. He espouses that necessary and balanced philosophy of government—true liberalism.

9. He is a statesman and a patriot.

Freedom Vs. License.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "An Unreasoned Objection," of June 3, takes issue with Senator McKellar for preventing a vote in the Senate on the "red rider" against teaching communism in the public schools of the District of Columbia.

In passing, may I remark that Mr. Blanton's support of the "red rider" has probably lined some people up against it because of his methods rather than because of their personal opinions for or against the amendment.

But Mr. Blanton aside, I think Mr. McKellar was right in moving as he did and I believe he was not alone by any means in his objection. Academic freedom should be upheld, but not academic license, and it would be academic license to allow the teaching of the revolutionary principles and philosophy of communism and its so-called "blessings." Its principles expressly contradict our own theory of a free country and republic; its practice would directly undermine all that the fathers of this republic labored for, fought for and died for.

Amend the rider, if you will, or take other measures to provide that other textbooks be supplied which teachers simply must use and in which the pupils will be shown how communism, as rampant in Russia and Mexico today, is both in theory and practice opposed to our American form of government and the liberty it guarantees our free and contented people.

There is no question now of excluding fascism from our schools, but we should take up that question, too, in our legislatures, should any attempt ever be made to supplant our democracy by fascism. We have plenty of evidence, produced almost daily, to show that Communists in this country are actively pushing an insidious Russia-supported propaganda to overturn our American system and institutions and place the United States under the red flag of the Internationale. And they know where to begin to make sure of the future—in our schools.

With such un-American (at least, in parts) textbooks as have been approved for the schools, who is going to prevent the advocacy of red communism by teachers who favor it? RUSSELL DILKES.

A Legal No Man's Land.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer has not seen the exact words used by the President, but, according to the impression conveyed by the news accounts, he characterized the Supreme Court's decision on the New York minimum wage law as "creating" a legal no man's land, where neither the State nor the Federal Government might control. If this is so, Mr. Roosevelt is either woefully ignorant of the most elementary principles of constitutional government. State and Federal, or he hopes that the public is ignorant.

Any normal adult with a brain of his own knows that, except under absolute dictatorships or despotisms, there are a thousand precious human rights which no government has a right to infringe. Neither the State nor the national Government has any right to dictate what clothes we shall wear, when we shall wear them, when, whether or whom we shall marry, how many children we may have, what religious beliefs we may hold; and the Supreme Court held on Monday that neither could fix the minimum wages an employer should pay to a woman or a child.

Perhaps the Supreme Court was wrong; perhaps the fourteenth amendment was not intended to prevent minimum wage legislation, or perhaps its meaning could have been stretched slightly to allow the New York legislation to stand. Perhaps a majority of the people of New York and of the United States would like for the Government, State or Federal, or both, to be allowed to fix minimum wages, not only for women and children, but for men also. The Supreme Court merely held that in the opinion of the majority the people had not so expressed their wishes, and that it felt itself constrained to hold that the fourteenth amendment prohibited the States from exercising the power in question.

If the President really thinks that the Supreme Court was wrong, he has the right to say so. If he thinks that the decision properly construed the law and the Constitution, but that the Constitution imposes an undesirable limitation upon States, or upon the national Government, he has the right to propose and sponsor an amendment to the organic law. He has no right to mislead the people into believing that the Supreme Court has "created" a new domain where no law can reach.

There has always been, and we hope there will always be, a vast domain where no government—State, Federal, municipal, or other—can interfere. The Constitution enumerates some of these—others are too plain to require mention. No ex-post-facto law can be passed by either State or Federal legislature; no person shall be deprived of the right to vote on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude; no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process, etc. All of these rights, and a thousand more equally important, constitute a legal no man's land that has existed at least since the Declaration of Independence—much of it from the dawn of civilization.

The Supreme Court has said, perhaps erroneously, but at least with intellectual honesty, that the right to fix wages is a liberty which neither government may violate. The President might do well to choose expressions that present the facts without distortion, even in an election year. E. T.

Crime And Slums.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent letter on parole and crime, the writer seems to contradict himself when he says that effective punishment is a deterrent to crime. How can prison walls and punishment be considered a deterrent when a great number of criminals, even those on parole, commit more crimes once they are free? Yes, when a criminal is inside the walls he is physically restrained, but nevertheless often kills a guard, or another convict. Thus according to the writer's views the only way to make a prison really serve as a crime deterrent (with a few exceptions) is to keep a criminal imprisoned until he dies.

In reliable crime researches, it is made clear that our prisons with present methods have proven to be training schools for the commitment of more hazardous adventures, by those who had been confined. Admitting this, how can penal servitude operate as a deterrent to crime? I maintain that it can not. There is a disinction between crime detection and crime prevention. Conditions in child life are primarily the causes of crime. The radical reform of childhood conditions is one sure type of action for the prevention and averting of crime.

A prominent criminal psychiatrist stated to me that he believed 75 per-cent of crimes was due to slum conditions. Emphasis might well be put on crime prevention.

Call For Mr. Oyster.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently Mr. Fairfax Oyster proposed to conduct a series of summer concerts at the Water Gate and was roundly criticized for "usurping" our National Symphony's "rights." The criticism may now be taken back, and I suggest that Mr. Oyster be invited to present the concerts.

For five years Dr. Kindler has labored to create a first-class orchestra and, with the generous support of Washingtonians, he has done so. And now that a measure of public and artistic success has come to the National Symphony, the musician union has become dictatorial. It will manage the symphony itself.

The union is entitled to all the rights of organized labor, but it cannot be allowed to handicap Dr. Kindler. The importation of musicians is at times necessary, and surely it might be left to the judgment of the association and Dr. Kindler to determine when vacant posts cannot be filled from the local union. Otherwise, how can a high standard of musicianship be maintained?

The orchestra has asked for public support, time and again, and has emphasized that it was struggling against great difficulties. It was said that members of the orchestra had to hold other jobs to make a living, in some cases very lowly jobs. Washington appreciated this and came to the rescue. Yet the union refuses to play the summer concerts and thus loses some $14,000 to $15,000 for its members. Can the union maintain this attitude and yet ask for public support?

Let the union arbitrate and abide by a fair decision, or let Mr. Oyster form an orchestra.

Fading 'Kittie.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to "Alice in Wonderland" a fat, healthy, grinning Cheshire Cat started slowly disappearing, one fine day, and only a faint grin remained, when the process had been completed and Tabby was no more.

In our modern "Blunderland" we have the astonishing spectacle of a Federal, financial "kittie," once fat, now fading away rapidly (some $36,000,000,000 having already vanished), while our political leaders grin optimistically.

Many are of the opinion that when the spending spree is over, the grins will be shifted "to the other side of the face." And, with both the dollars and the charming grins gone, one wonders what expression will settle on the brows of the weary and bewildered taxpayers.

Pity that Lewis Carroll can not be "paged," perhaps he could furnish the answer. E. K. G.

The Post Impressionist

Dustless Journeys.

Post Office, Friday.

IF there is one social vice that we reprobate more than most of the other social vices it is disingenuousness—and we regret to say that this one flourishes among our Column's correspondents. Every day's mail brings to our diminutive desk some example. Today's issues from Secretary Robinson: deftly he tries to entice us into a dispute about the movies.

"In a recent issue of The Post," he cunningly begins, "you discussed, with your customary felicity, the metamorphosis of the movie, from the early 'flicker' to its present state of excellence, including true technicolor and synchronized sound. Why not now comment on the two final phases which have yet to be achieved and which—if or when—accomplished, will bring the screen millennium?"

And what are these delectable phases?

Says Mr. Robinson—and we bid you to note his subtle use of the phrase "of course": "I refer, of course, first to the providing of the third dimension—which will create the illusion of depth—and second, to the probably much more difficult development of a corps of directors who will have both the brains and the authority to see to it that the lovely heroine looks, as well as acts, her role."

Well, perhaps he does refer to those two matters—once. But thereafter he refers to only one of them.

For he pursues: "I am completely fed up with seeing a heroine go through Hell and high water in 'moving accidents by flood and field' in Alaskan wilds, in jungles or on desert isles—and at the end thereof appear as though she had just stepped from a Hollywood beauty parlor and swanky sports shoppe. These dames may be beautiful, but, as clever Harry Hopkins might say, most of them seem to be 'too damned dumb to understand' that real artistry demands a certain amount of realism in the detail of personal appearance.

"Of course," Mr. Robinson admits—again employing that oratorical bird-trap "of course"—"of course, now and then one sees a most refreshing exception—but it is all too rare."

It is so rare that he simply won't dwell on it. He rushes right on with his condemnation:

"A glaring case in point," says he, "occurs in the picture 'A Message to Garcia.' Although the story has been ruined by too much exaggerated comedy and an absurd romance, there is some skillful acting by John Boles and Wallace Beery, who look their respective roles. But did you observe the close-up of whoever-it-was who played the heroine—after she had spent days in the Cuban wilds, part of that time submerged in a stream?

"Well, that close-up showed her with heavily rouged lips, mascaraed eyelids, waved hair with not one strand out of place!

"Phooey!" cries Mr. Robinson. "The same thing occurred in the picture version of 'The Call of the Wild,'" says he, "and it occurs in countless other pictures. Somebody," he concludes, "ought to be told about it!"

So he flatteringly tells the Post-Impressionist.

Nevertheless, we don't want to hear it.

And we don't hesitate to remark that we are surprised at Mr. Robinson.

Over and over again this Column has publicly declared that it would not be controversial. Yet, at one time or another, each of its correspondents slyly tries to tar it with controversy.

"Of course," we well know the surest way to court any specific trouble. It is to announce to the world that you will have nothing whatever to do with the trouble in question. Then the world brings that trouble to your doorstep and rings the bell—throws the thing in at every open window—drops it down your chimney.

But we did think that Mr. Robinson was above such maneuvers.

Why, Mr. Robinson is Eliot H. Robinson. He is the energetic secretary of that able M. C., the Hon. Charles L. Gifford, Fifteenth Massachusetts District. Mr. Robinson is almost as good a politician as George Dye.

Nor is that the best reason for our amazement at Mr. Robinson.

Doesn't he know that the little slips of which he complains are no fault of producers or directors? Doesn't he know that everybody in Hollywood is in terror of the lady stars? And doesn't he know that most of the lady stars insist upon looking like lady stars no matter what hardships they may be pictured as suffering?

This columnist will do nothing to disarrange a single eyelash of those stellar beauties. He wants to sell another scenario.

Doesn't Mr. Robinson? Mr. Robinson is the author of at least ten good books—and not all of them have yet been filmed, either!

Fair Enough

Those Who Pay.

One hears harsh criticism of the income tax from persons found guilty of earning their living in private industry, but in justice to this thriving institution it should be pointed out that the law has moments of great generosity.

The employes of the Federal Government are exempt from State income taxes. The employes of States, counties and cities are exempt from the Federal tax. Not only that, but certain State officials drawing big salaries out of the kitty provided largely by the income taxes of their fellow citizens are exempt from both State and Federal assessments on their pay.

The Governor of New York, for example, heads a long list of high-salaried public officials who do not have to pay any tax on their public salary. The Governor gets $25,000 a year—a figure which would make a marked man of him if he were working for a private employer. But his is what is known as a constitutional office, so his $25,000 a year is all his own. The lieutenant governor, at $10,000 a year, enjoys the same immunity, and so do the judges of the court of appeals, the appellate division, the supreme court, the court of claims, the court of special sessions and the surrogates.

These learned and public spirited ornaments of the State government draw from $15,000 to $22,500 a year and keep it all, whereas a single-handed clerk or mechanic employed by a business firm at $100 a month is expected to shower down to both national and State treasuries. The members of the New York Legislature receive $2,500 a year, or, roughly, twice as much for their part-time work as the taxpaying $100-a-month man, but they, too, are constitutional officers and thus exempt.

Few States have income-tax laws up to this time, so the State, county and municipal employes constitute the most favored class. They are all exempt from the Federal tax, whereas comparatively few Federal employes are stationed in States where the exemption means anything to them. Federal men in New York and Massachusetts, for example, are excused from State assessments, but a Federal employe in Florida has no special advantage, because Florida has no State tax. But the public servant of the Florida community and its subdivisions are excused from paying anything to the National Government. They pay no income tax at all.

The State, county and municipal jobholders in more or less permanent positions throughout the country far outnumber the Federal personnel if you disregard the armed forces and the relief-work people, whose pay is not enough to qualify for returns, anyway. I have seen their number estimated at 5,000,000—a general figure, but with a reasonable sound, nevertheless.

Of course, some questioning souls will wish to know why a New York alderman, for example, drawing $5,000 a year for political services, should not kick back at least a few dollars of the money toward his next year's $5,000.

And possibly there are some so base as to suggest that the unfortunate school teacher—always a pathetic figure in the American scene—should pay her share the same as people whose employment is much less secure and less attractive. The school teacher works five days a week, ten months a year, and in many cases may look forward to the security of a pension when her work is done. It might even be argued that the school teacher's sense of responsibility in the community would be sharpened if she were to be granted the privilege of contributing to the cost of the government.

But I mention these ideas not to criticize the income tax—merely to suggest how impatient some people are under the burden of the bill.

• • • •

New York State and New York City in particular present the most wholesome examples of the generous forethough of the politicians when they were writing the income tax laws. The list is much too long to undertake here, but if you have a current World Almanac turn to the chapter on State and municipal salaries in New York, read the roster of jobs ranging from $40,000 a year down to $10,000 and reflect upon the sunshine which is let into the lives of thousands of patriots by that kindly provision which exempts them from the Federal tax and in many cases from the State tax as well.

The patriots of the New York Legislature, themselves forbidden to enjoy the citizen's right to pay and pay, are not niggardly, however. This year they have doubled the honor of citizenship in the Empire State with an increase of 100 per cent in the tax.

Martial Law Nears.

Jerusalem, June 4 (Palcor Agency).—The Palestine government is rushing arrangements for the proclamation of martial law to cope with current disorders, it was learned tonight on the highest authority.

The proclamation may be issued at any moment.

The contemplated action of the government is believed to be due to its inability, after almost seven weeks of continuous rioting, bombing, shooting, arson and killing, to suppress Arab demonstrations against British policy in Palestine.

Hitherto civil authorities, reinforced by almost 10,000 troops, police and special watchmen, have contended with the demonstrations by dispersing assemblies, routing attackers of Jewish settlements and banishing Arab leaders. Under the program now being rushed to completion, the military will run the entire country on a war-time emergency basis.

The League's Future

British Dominions And Latin America Group Seen As Unlikely To Desert Geneva; Europe Cries For Greater Security.

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE ITALIAN conquest of Ethiopia in the face of the active opposition of the League of Nations has given rise to a barrage of headlines concerning the future of the League. Some cite the withdrawal of Guatemala and proposals emanating from South America for an "American league of nations" as the start of a great movement of secession from Geneva. Others prophesy the immediate and drastic revision of the League Covenant, involving either the deletion or strengthening of its main peace guarantees.

A general withdrawal of all non-European nations from the League would be a most serious event. It would mark a retrogression in a great historical trend which we and our descendants seem destined to witness, the slow integration of world society. Since this trend appears inevitable, analogous to the national unification that has characterized American history since 1776, secession would be a backward step which must some day be reversed.

The best way to estimate the likelihood of a general secession of overseas states from Geneva is to get down to cases. The non-European members of the League consist of two active and important groups, the Latin-American nations and the five British overseas Commonwealths, as well as a heterogeneous body of less influential states such as China, Siam and Persia.

British Commonwealth Welded By Geneva.

THE BRITISH commonwealths are bound to Geneva by a factor which vitally affects the continuance of the British Empire, their constitutional relationship during war. If it were not for their common membership in the League, the Empire might at any time be disrupted by the entrance of Great Britain into a European war.

From both the practical and the legal standpoints, there is only one kind of war in which commonwealths like Canada and South Africa are certain to participate jointly with Great Britain; that is a League war against an aggressor. Eliminate the League tie which binds the six partners owing allegiance to the British Crown, and the urge for individual neutrality during a European war might prove irresistible, leading perhaps to the dissolution of the British commonwealth of nations.

To the commonwealths the League represents not only an international machinery for peace; it also forms the only existing mechanism which provides for a united imperial attitude on questions of war, guaranteeing that if they are ever forced to fight abroad again, they will have a large part of the world on their side.

If the British Commonwealths may be regarded as "last ditch Leaguers," there is no likelihood of the League degenerating into a purely European institution. Other overseas nations also, such as China, Persia and Siam, have every interest in seeking whatever protection the League may offer against the rapacity of certain imperialistic great powers. Nevertheless, a solid withdrawal of South America from Geneva would strike a staggering blow at the world character of the League, reducing it in effect to an organization of European powers and their overseas satellites.

South Americans Unlikely To Withdraw.

IT MAY SEEM at first sight reasonable to suppose that the South American nations, disillusioned at the triumph of Mussolini, might withdraw in a body from Geneva and seek to set up an American league of nations. There are, however, a number of reasons why such a course would be harmful to their interests.

However great the influence of Great Britain or France may be at Geneva for any short period, the League has never been steadily dominated by any one power. There have always been a number of checks and balances, the divergent policies of Great Britain, France, Russia, the World War neutrals and the smaller states as a body. The Latin-American bloc has an undeniable influence at Geneva and has played a power in the annual League Assembly.

In an American league of nations this balance would not exist, for the simple reason that the power, wealth, population and resources of the United States is considerably greater than that of all South America. Our Latin neighbors to the south would, therefore, be loathe to exchange the Geneva League for a Pan-American substitute which must inevitably be dominated by Washington in every question of real importance. Only two leagues could be acceptable to countries like Argentina and Chile, the world League at Geneva, or an association limited to South American nations in which a balance of forces could exist. The rivalries and realities of South American politics leave little chance for the latter.

There are a number of additional reasons why a general South American secession from Geneva in favor of a Pan-American league is far from likely. These reasons include the great political influence of individual South American statesmen who delight in the prestige of positions on the League Council and Assembly, the desire of South American governments to keep Geneva as a sounding board for potential grievances against their somewhat overwhelming neighbor to the north, and the unwillingness of our own Government to take the responsibility either for torpedoing the League of Nations, or for setting up a Pan-American equivalent with equally far-reaching obligations and guarantees.

League Organization Too Valuable To Junk.

IN ORDER to obtain an objective view of other recent headlines which prophesy the collapse or radical revision of the League, a few fundamental facts should be kept in mind. The international guarantee against aggression has failed to protect Ethiopia against Fascist ambitions, showing that this guarantee is inadequate for its purpose. But that is only one aspect of the League of Nations.

Its secretariat, an international civil service of some 700 trained men, has proved for 15 years its practical value in international relations. Its Council and Assembly have afforded invaluable opportunities for frequent contacts between the leading statesmen of most existing nations. And the League has just moved into a new and expensive plant. It is hardly reasonable to expect these tested assets to be discarded now, or the new secretariat building to be converted into another Swiss hotel.

Fifteen years of post-war history have shown a fundamental conflict of views between the European military powers and the naval and overseas powers over the peace guarantees of the League Covenant. France, the Little Entente, and other continental powers have constantly tried to make more automatic and more extensive the mutual assistance and military provisions of Article 16. Great Britain, the British dominions and many South American nations have opposed these efforts since 1921, holding that the obligations of Article 16 were too far-reaching for application in all parts of the world.

In view of this long conflict, demands in sections of the London press that the guarantees of Articles 10 and 16 should be eliminated from the Covenant should not be regarded as presaging an imminent change. This demand collides squarely with the view of France, the Little Entente, Russia, and many smaller European states. And one basis for the demand, the theory that such a change might bring the United States into the League now, can hardly be regarded as practical politics under present conditons.

Efforts of the continental powers to make sanctions provisions more rigid, on the other hand, will continue to meet strenuous opposition in Great Britain and among many non-European nations. This opposition may hold with reason that the failure of the League to save Ethiopia was not due to the inadequacy of the Covenant, since the strict enforcement of Article 16 would have halted the Italian conquest in a few weeks, but was caused by the refusal of many League members to fulfill their Covenant obligations.

The present war danger in Europe is primarily of European concern, necessitating security guarantees far more drastic than the overseas countries are now prepared to accept, such as European aerial and military mutual assistance pacts which reinforce the League Covenant. There is reason to expect that international developments will be along these lines in the next few months, rather than a widespread secession from the League or a comprehensive and basic revision of its machinery.

"This Way to the Big Show," or "Duty and the Beasts" ($3.50 with popcorn), by Dexter Fellows, most famous of circus press agents: Here is a story full of gnu twists in which the author apes nobody; a book in which the interest is tents at all times, the clowning excellent and the episodes funny as a circus. The book teems with virility and vigor. (It is probably the animal in him.—Ed.)

• • • •

The story opens in the quaint setting of a steam calliope where Mr. Fellows spent his early childhood. His old Nubian nurse relates how his first words as a babe were "Gargantuan" and "Unparalleled," and of the household concern when it was found that a first tooth caused him to lisp when pronouncing "Unprecedented." Almost from the cradle our hero had what is known as vocabulary fever, and he tells how his description of a rattle given him on his second birthday was so full of hyperbole that his astonished and somewhat frightened parents thought they had given him the largest carillon in the world.

• • • •

Mr. Fellows as a youth entered the newspaper field, but was fired after covering a wedding and describing the bride as "one of the rarest specimens ever taken alive." He tried again on the old Hartford Courant, but was dropped from the private sanctum of the late Charles Hopkins Clark when he referred to a Republican State Convention as "the pageant of curious people."

• • • •

Mr. Fellows then wandered about from pillar to postilion and from postilion to elephant howdah and for a time was a boxer, fighting and whipping Dan ("Old Unabridged") Webster all over the country on innumerable occasions. (Subsequently he toured the country in vaudeville, offering to lick any Thesaurus in the house.—Ed.)

It was on one of these trips that he met P. T. Barnum, Mr. Barnum listened to his description of the Ringling show, then starting out with one zebra, a dancing bear and two garter snakes, and immediately took his show to Europe buckety-buckety.

Some years later Mr. Fellows had grown to such an extent that Mr. Barnum's heirs sent up the white flag and asked for a merger. This led to the consolidation of the Barnum & Bailey Show, Ringling Brothers' Greatest Show on Earth, the Encyclopaedia Britannica and 300 pachyderms with Mr. Fellows and the survival of the circus as we know it today.

tion could have been avoided by an inquiry about the United States' policy.

The Chilean communication to the State Department here was based on a Costa Rican report that President Sacasca of Nicaragua had asked support of several Central American republics in requesting American intervention.

Informed sources noted, however, that if the Costa Rican report were accurate, it would mean that Dr. Sacasa has abandoned his traditional attitude against American interference in the affairs of Latin-American countries.

Hull's statement indicated that the American Minister to Nicaragua, Boaz Long, had been instructed to inform Nicaraugan authorities and other government representatives of the attitude of this Nation.

Both Chile and Peru expressed confidence in the sincerity of the American position in their discussions here, officials said.

Ramifications Outlined.

In outlining the ramifications of the policy of the United States, Secretary Hull said:

"During the course of the recent internal disturbances in the Republic of Nicaragua, this Government has received suggestions from various sources that it co-operate with the governments of certain other American republics in a tender of good offices to the various political factions in Nicaragua with the hope that such exercise of friendly good offices would result in a peaceful solution of the difficulties which had arisen.

"The United States Minister in Managua (capital of Nicaragua) has been consistently instructed from the outset to inform both the Nicaraguan authorities as well as the representatives of the other American governments accredited to the government of Nicaragua that even the consideration by the Government of the United States of its participation in any joint tender of good offices must depend in the first place upon the willingness of all political factions in Nicaragua to invite the good offices of other friendly American nations; that in the event, and only in the event, that such invitations were unanimously extended, this Government would then be disposed to determine whether it would take part in a joint tender of good offices after consulting with other interested nations of this hemisphere.

"The United States Minister was further instructed that the Government of the United States would take no initiative in the matter and would under no circumstances even consider whether or not it would exercise its good offices except in association with other American nations."

when wars will cease. They are the 'red herrings' thrown in your way to confuse you."

Mrs. Catt implored her listeners to become "minutewomen for peace—crusaders" and advised them to make the abolition of war the chief aim in their lives.

"Peace," she declared, "is the one common interest of the women of all continents, of all races and nations, of all classes and kinds."

Preceding the addresses by Secretary Wallace and Mrs. Catt, the Department of Agriculture Chorus, 40 mixed voices directed by Robert F. Freund, sang.

Overseas Delegates Greeted.

Greetings from overseas delegates were also on the banquet program, presided over by Miss Grace E. Frysinger, chairman of the United States groups affiliated with the A. C. W. W.

Admission to last night's affair was highly prized, as there was room in the banquet hall for only 1,500 of the 7,000 rural housewives who had come to the conference. Throughout yesterday women stormed registration headquarters, trying to get tickets for the dinner meeting. When plans for the banquet were made the committee expected the total attendance at the conference to be little more than a thousand.

The conference closes formally at 6:30 tonight with a colorful farewell ceremony at the Water Gate, Arlington Memorial Bridge. The public is invited to hear the massed chorus sing and to see the flag presented by 40 Girl Reserves of the Y. W. C. A., representing the 40 nations with members in the Associated Country Women of the World.

Fru Marie Michelet, of Oslo, Norway, a vice president of the A. C. W. W., will deliver the farewell address, "Our Challenge to Ourselves." Baroness Henry Schroeder, Germany, and Mrs. Edward Young, of Milton, N. Y., will give responses. Baroness Schroeder is a vice chairman, and Mrs. Young is a member of the executive committee of the A. C. W. W.

Although the majority of the women attending the conference will leave Washington tonight following the farewell ceremony, most of the official delegates, including the representatives from foreign countries, will remain in the Capital another week.

Election of officers will be held Monday. The remainder of the second week will be spent in visiting rural places of interest in nearby Virginia and Maryland. The Bethesda Farm Women's Co-operative Home Market will be visited tomorrow morning.

Yesterday the thousands of farm women still in Washington divided their time between social affairs and a business-like tour of the exhibits set up especially for them in the United States Government Auditorium.

The 26 Canadian delegates were entertained at a tea at the Canadian Legation, given by the Charge d'Affaires, Hume Wrong, and Mrs. Wrong.

Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, was hostess at a similar affair for a group of the foreign delegates. All the overseas and Canadian delegates were invited to a tea given by the board of directors of the Y. W. C. A.

Picketing of F.P.C. Offices Renewed

Announcing their determination to continue their protest indefinitely, members of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, renewed their picketing of the Federal Power Commission offices at the corner of Tenth and K streets, yesterday.

The federation is demanding the reinstatement of Robert Y. Durand, corresponding secretary of the organization, who was discharged by the commission recently. The pickets contend the dismissal was in retaliation for Durand's union activities.

Six members of the federation were on the picket line yesterday with three others distributing handbills. The pickets march from 8 to 9 o'clock in the morning and from 4 to 6 in the afternoon.

California Official Admits Liquor Bribes

Oakland, Calif., June 4 (AP).—District Attorney Earl Warren announced today Liquor Control Officer R. J. McGill testified before the grand jury he had taken bribes and sold confiscated liquor and stills with the knowledge and consent of the State Board of Equalization, which employed him.

Warren said Elwood Squires, the board's assistant secretary, and Richard E. Collins, of Redding, president of the board, would be called before the grand jury.

It was implied but not directly stated by McGill, Warren said, that Squires and Collins directed his activities as a means of "getting something" on other operatives.

Farm Women List Six Topics For Discussion

Mrs. Tyler to Lead Round Table on 'Town People in the Country.'

Town people in the country as workers, residents and holiday makers will be the discussion topic this morning at one of the six informal round-table meetings of the Associated Country Women of the World.

The six gatherings, open to all members of the A. C. W. W. members, will open at 10 a. m. and continue until 12:30. Topics, discussion leaders and places of the meetings are:

"Town People in the Country," Mrs. George Tyler, of New York State, leader; in the small ballroom of the Willard Hotel.

"The Countrywoman and the Economic Problem," Mrs. Lyda Lynch, of Kentucky, leader; in the United States Government auditorium, Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets.

"Electricity in Rural Life," Frau Marie Michelet, of Oslo, Norway, leader; in the National Museum auditorium, Constitution avenue and Tenth street.

"Rural Unemployments and Readjustment," Lady Eleanor Cole, of British East Africa, leader; in Room 1 of the United States Chamber of Commerce, 1615 H street northwest.

"The Countrywoman's Use of Rural Resources," Mrs. E. A. V. Sterne, of Queensland, Australia, leader; in the Department of Agriculture auditorium, Independence avenue and Fourteenth street.

"Marketing of Home Products," Mrs. A. E. Walker, of Bartonville, Ontario, leader; in the Department of Commerce auditorium.

A summary of the discussion groups held Wednesday morning will be presented, along with a resume of today's round-tables, at this afternoon's session in the United States Government auditorium, presided over by Mrs. Alfred Watt, of Canada and England, president of the organization.

Naval Academy Gives Diplomas To 261 Cadets

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 4.—With 215 ensigns and 25 second lieutenants added to the officer personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps, the June Week activity at the Naval Academy ended today.

Within an hour after the 261 graduates had received their diplomas and bachelor of science degrees at the colorful graduation exercises in the huge blue and gold decorated armory, the exodus of June Week visitors began.

A few June Week visitors remained in the city to see the 1,130 midshipmen of the new senior and sophomore classes embark tomorrow on the battleships Arkansas, Wyoming and Oklahoma for a summer practice cruise. The ships, commanded by Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, U. S. N., will steam 9,590 miles during the summer, visiting England, Sweden and France before returning to the Academy on August 26.

Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations and Acting Secretary of the Navy, distributed the diplomas at the commencement exercises. Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Academy, conferred the degree of bachelor of science upon all receiving diplomas. The singing of a verse of the "Navy Blue and Gold;" cheers for "those about to leave us" and for "those we leave behind us" followed.

The white-clad graduates hurled their midshipmen caps in the air as the ceremony ended, precipitating scrambles among the feminine spectators.

Mothers and sweethearts, who had sat through the graduation, holding officers' caps and shoulder markers in their laps, hurried to "Lovers' Lane" to decorate the new officers. While the "plebes," promoted to "youngsters" or sophomores, turned their coats inside out and danced and shouted, the new officers took the oath of office in Bancroft Hall.

For the next few hours, throughout the city, girls could be seen wearing the white midshipmen's caps they had captured in the scramble. Ensigns, their single gold bar shining, and Marine lieutenants in new khaki, strolled about, preparing to enjoy leave before reporting to their ships and stations.

Admiral Sellers entertained the group of distinguished guests and high ranking naval officers who sat on the official stand at luncheon. Among his guests was Admiral Sir Richard Webb, K. C. M. G., C. B., R. N. (retired), former aid de camp to the late King George V of England. With him were Lady Webb and their daughter.

Admiral Standley was received with full military honors, including a salute of 17 guns when he arrived at the Academy. In his address to the graduates he stressed the technical development of the Navy and the necessity of study and character building. Smilingly he told the graduates:

"You will rate salutes and tailors' bills, and all the other honors and tribulations of commissioned officers."

A. F. L. Groups Bolt to Form New Steel Unit

By the Associated Press.

Open conflict in the American Federation of Labor flared last night as the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers joined the John L. Lewis group and decided to organize the 500,000 workers in the steel industry into one big union.

After hesitating for eight months between the industrial union advocates led by Lewis and the craft union led by William Green, A. F. of L. president, the leaders of the Amalgamated announced after a short conference last night with Lewis that they would join his committee for industrial organization.

Asked what action the executive council of the A. F. of L. might take, Lewis said, "I can think of nothing so uninteresting tonight as Mr. Green's platitudes and generalities."

Announcement of the agreement was made in a statement issued jointly by Lewis and Louis Leonard, secretary of the Amalgamated.

The Amalgamated delegation, comprising Louis Leonard, secretary-treasurer, and Vice Presidents Thomas G. Gillis, Edward W. Miller and Joseph K. Gaither, passed the entire day in continuous secret session.

The Amalgamated, an A. F. of L. affiliate, was authorized eight months ago by the federation convention to proceed with organization of the steel workers. Green, federation president and craft leader, appealed to all unions to contribute funds for this campaign, but so far he has received only one offer—a proposal carrying with it $500,000 from Lewis if the Amalgamated would organize steel into one big industrial union.

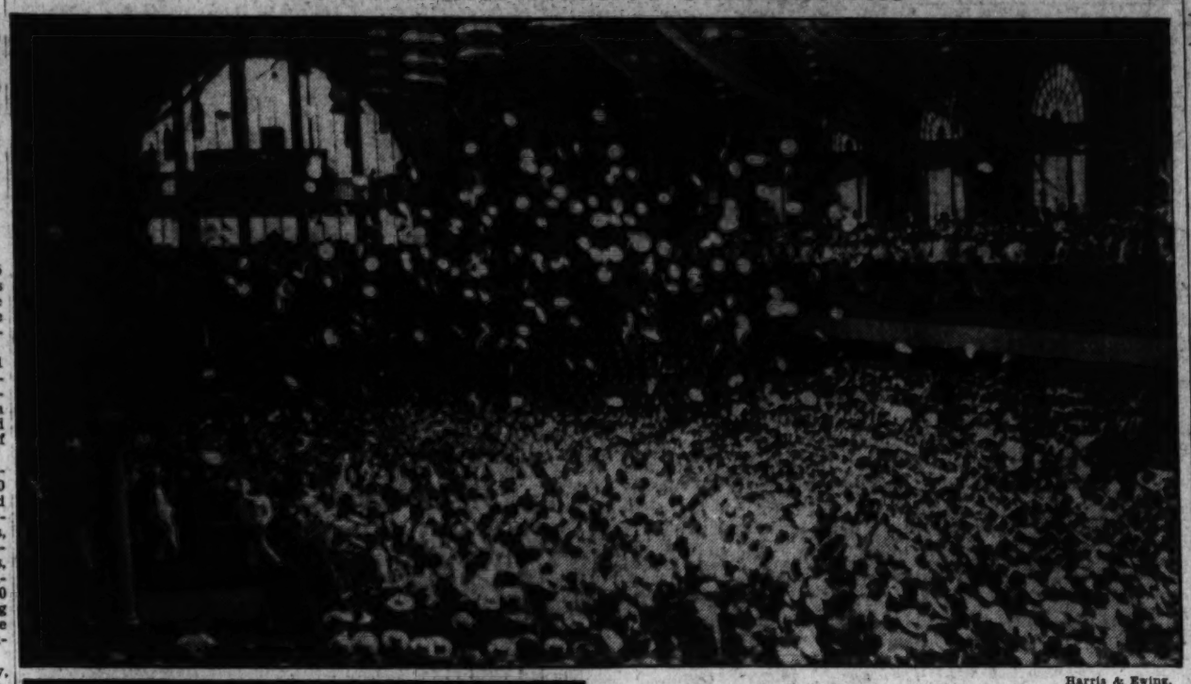
The Amalgamated at its recent convention at Canonsburg, Pa., decided to accept Lewis' money, but also agreed to certain proposals made by Green as the craft leader. Lewis at a meeting Wednesday night gave the Amalgamated officials 24 hours to make up their minds.

Police Boys Club Fund Increased by $1,538

Reaching the total of $55,923 yesterday, the fund of the Boys Club of Metropolitan Police was advanced by $1,538, including 760 associate memberships from the 4 bureaus and 12 precincts of the Police Department, as reported by James E. Colliflower, campaign chairman.

The Pioneer Laundry Corporation added $50 to a previous subscription for a similar amount, to head the day's subscriptions with a $100 founder's membership. Shep Allen, manager of the Howard Theater, reported $111 from the benefit show. Other large memberships listed for the day included those of Joseph P. Tumulty, former secretary to the late President Woodrow Wilson; Wholesale Liquor Dealers of Washington, Peoples Life Insurance Co. and the National Hotel Supply Co., Inc.

261 Middies Receive Commissions



Harris & Ewing.

There was a wild scramble as friends and relatives of graduates of the Naval Academy tried to secure caps that the middies flung into the air at the conclusion of graduation ceremonies at Annapolis yesterday. Daley Is Elected By Executives Of Trade Units

William L. Daley, secretary of the American Publishers Conference, was elected president of the Washington Trade Association Executives at an annual meeting yesterday in the Willard Hotel.

The new president and other officers of the group were elected by a unanimous ballot cast after Herman Fakler, chairman, presented the nominating committee's report.

George W. Romney was made vice president and Julian D. Conover, secretary-treasurer.

Conover succeeds Philip P. Gott, who had held the office since the group's organization seven years ago. Members yesterday presented the retiring secretary with a gold watch in appreciation for his years of service.

In a round-table discussion the trade association heads heard reports on several legislative proposals now before Congress. Harold R. Young discussed the tax bill; A. W. Dickinson, the Guffey coal bill and stream pollution; Dr. T. J. Cullen, the food and drug bill; O. M. Kile, price discrimination; Edgar Markham, commodity exchanges, and George W. Romney, the Healey bill on Government contracts.

On the nominating committee with Fakler were six other former presidents: Charles J. Brand, Wilson Compton, Pyke Johnson, George A. Lilly, Warren N. Watson and Harold R. Young.

Recesses Kill Hopes for Vote On Red Repeal

A decision by House leaders yesterday to declare a recess all next week so that members could attend the Republican National Convention ended all hopes for another District day and a House vote on the Sisson bill to repeal the "red rider" at this session.

Chairman O'Connor, of the Rules Committee, who is slated to be next majority floor leader, said the plan to take a week's recess on Monday will prevent the District from having its customary semimonthly legislative day.

"I'm very sorry," he said, "because I am very much in favor of the Sisson bill. But it can't be helped now."

Under present plans, the House will convene at noon Monday, but will take up no legislative business.

A similar course will be followed the week of June 22 if Congress does not adjourn before that time, O'Connor said. The next District day, which would fall on June 22, consequently will be canceled.

Speaker Bankhead, while personally sympathetic with the move to repeal the "red rider," has told promoters of the Sisson bill he thought it politically unwise to call the repeal measure up at this session.

The bugaboo of Communism, he said, would embarrass many of the Democratic members from the South. The Speaker indicated he would not stand in the way of a House vote early in the Seventy-fifth Congress.

Mrs. Suydam Given Divorce From U. S. Aid

Capital Social Registerite Wins Reno Decree on Cruelty Charge.

Mrs. Anne Gordon Suydam, Washington social registerite and poetess, yesterday won an uncontested divorce in Reno, Nev., from Henry West Suydam, noted war correspondent who now is a special assistant to the United States Attorney General. According to the Associated Press, Mrs. Suydam charged cruelty.

The couple, sought-after dinner guests in diplomatic and official as well as social circles of the Capital, separated a year ago. According to an agreement of April 6, 1936, they will share the custody of their only child, 10-year-old Henry West, jr., a student at the National Cathedral School for Boys.

Mrs. Suydam, who helped cover the Hauptmann trial at Flemington for a Washington newspaper, is a daughter of Mrs. George Barnett, widow of Gen. George Barnett, World War commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps. Her father was the late Basil Gordon, of Baltimore.

Noted as a debutante for her combination of beauty and brains, the former Anne Hamilton Gordon and Henry West Suydam, then a Washington correspondent for the Brooklyn Eagle, were married in a brilliant ceremony at the Church of the Epiphany on April 25, 1925.

Suydam gained fame as a correspondent during the World War. Later, in 1921 and 1922, he was secretary of the American delegation to the Conference on Limitation of Armaments, in charge of press matters.

As special assistant to the Attorney General he now is in charge of press relations for the Department of Justice and J. Edgar Hoover's office.

Mrs. Suydam, sister of Mrs. Newbold Noyes, left for the Nevada divorce center about six weeks ago. In addition to writing special articles for a Washington newspaper she has had considerable verse published in various magazines.

Col. Fenning Predicts District Policed by U.S.

Washington police eventually will be directed by the Federal Government, Col. Frederick A. Fenning, former District Commissioner, predicted in an address at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

Dr. McClellan Named to Head D.C.Edison Unit

Clarkson Will Aid Director in Foundation's Work in Washington.

The Thomas Alva Edison Foundation for the District will be directed by Dr. William McClellan, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., the national committee headed by Owen D. Young announced yesterday.

The main object of the foundation is to award scholarships, largely in technical colleges and universities, to young men and women annually.

The District is part of the area comprising Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland. In addition to the scholarships the foundation will commemorate the name and services of Edison by erecting a permanent tower for the "eternal light" at Menlo Park, N. J., and will put up a building at West Orange, N. J., to house the Edison library and laboratory.

Dr. McClellan's vice chairman for the District will be Walter B. Clarkson, vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Publicity—C. Melvin Sharpe, chairman; Risley Goldsborough, vice chairman; H. A. Brooks, Robert Dougan, William B. Bennett, Carter Barron, Frank B. Russell, K. H. Berkley, William B. Dolph, Joseph D. Kaufman, Fred Feiker, Dr. E. C. Crittenden, Dr. H. C. Dickinson, George M. Graham and T. B. Kingsbury.

Sharpe has appointed two subcommittees, displays and advertising. On the former are W. C. Bowman, H. D. Sonneman and J. E. Bartlett. The advertising unit is composed of Henry M. Brundage, jr., and E. B. Scholtes.

F.W.Newcombe Dies;Mayflower Society's Head

Victim of Heart Attack; St. Margaret's Choir Soloist Was 57.

Frederick W. Newcombe, governor of Washington's Mayflower Society and prominent in club and church affairs, died at his home, 3214 Porter street northwest, yesterday.

Death came suddenly from a heart attack. He was 57.

Newcombe was a native of Maine. Before his retirement he was a manufacturer in St. Paul, Minn. He came to Washington in 1925.

He was prominent in musical circles in Washington, being soloist of St. Margaret's Church choir. He also was a member of the Cleveland Park Club and of Wesley Methodist Church.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock from Hines funeral home. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Surviving are his wife and two daughters, Frances, 9, and Ruth, 7. In addition, three brothers survive, George S. Newcombe, of 4704 Forty-sixth street, this city; Dr. Alfred W. Newcombe, professor of history at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., and Edwin B. Newcombe, of Thomastown, Me.

Writ Asked to Take 'Lemons' From Car

District Supreme Court yesterday was asked to restrain the owner of an automobile on which has been painted the likenesses of lemons and white elephants from driving the car on the city's streets.

The owner of the car is Vernon L. Haynes, of 2121 First street northwest. According to the suit, which was filed by the auto dealer who sold Haynes the car, Haynes was dissatisfied with the vehicle and asked that he be given a later model car or that the entire purchase price be refunded to him.

The car, it was said, was purchased just before 1936 models were sold. In their anxiety to please Haynes, the dealer stated, he had even obtained the services of a factory expert who went over the car and suggested many changes which were carried out. This failed to satisfy the purchaser, the dealer said.

Czechs Will Fortify German Border Area

Praha, Czechoslovakia, June 4 (AP). Construction of massive fortifications along the German border was approved today by the Supreme Defense Council presided over by President Eduard Benes. Money to finance them is to be obtained by loans already voted.

The council fixed construction details, but did not publish them. Details also were discussed for strengthening the army's equipment.

Mrs. Griffin Rites Will Be Tomorrow

Mrs. Elinor Hyde Libbey Griffin, 72, long-time Georgetown resident, and daughter of the late Mary Orme Libbey, of Georgetown, died Wednesday evening at Garfield Hospital following a few months' illness.

Mrs. Griffin is survived by her husband, William Yancey Griffin, and three children, Mrs. W. W. Wilson, Joseph Libbey Griffin and William Yancey Griffin, jr.; a sister, Mrs. Frederick E. Chapin, and a brother, Robert B. Libbey.

Funeral services will be held at Oak Hill Cemetery Chapel tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Miss Saxton's Funeral Held At Arlington

Funeral services were held yesterday for Isabella Clary Saxton, 95, who died Monday at her home, 1922 Calvert street northwest.

The services were held at the chapel of Joseph Gawler's Sons, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Officiating ministers were the Rev. Oliver James Hart, rector of St. John's Church, and Canon Edward S. Dunlap. Interment was in Arlington National Cemetery.

Miss Saxton was a native of Springfield, Mass., member of a family which had distinguished itself in the Army and the Navy. Her father was the late Col. Byron Gordon Daniels, U. S. A., of Washington. Her grandfather was Ethan Allan Cary. She was the niece of Gen. Robert E. Clary, who served with Union forces throughout the Civil War, subsequently becoming acting quartermaster general of the Army.

Another of her uncles was Commodore Albert Gallatin Clary, who died in 1905 after a long and distinguished career. The late Mrs. Alfred Noyes, wife of the British poet, was her cousin.

Clara D. Noyes Services Today In Georgetown

Nurses' Guard of Honor Planned for Red Cross Medal Recipient.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon for Clara D. Noyes, national director of nursing service for the American Red Cross. Miss Noyes died suddenly Wednesday.

With a guard of honor of Red Cross nurses in attendance, and other Red Cross branches represented by their national heads, the services will be held at 3:30 p. m. in Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, will officiate, in the absence of the pastor of the Georgetown church.

Lived in Georgetown.

Pallbearers will be these officials of the American Red Cross: Harold F. Enlows, H. J. Hughes, Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, Richard F. Allen, H. J. Simons and Colin Herrle.

Burial will be in Old Lyme, Conn., Saturday morning. Miss Noyes was a native of Old Lyme.

Telegrams and letters of condolence were received by members of Miss Noyes' family and the Red Cross from all over the world yesterday.

The international committee of the Red Cross at Geneva, which conferred upon Miss Noyes the Florence Nightingale Medal several years ago, cabled:

"Profound sympathy with American Red Cross and nursing in their great loss."

Hi-Hat Patrons Like Hitzeman As Lewis Mime

Band Leader's Counsellor Impromptu Entertainer at Ambassador.

By Chanticleer.

The Ambassador's Hi-Hat continues to enjoy the impromptu entertainment staged by Harry Hitzeman. Now Hitzeman is not an actor, nor of the profession. Except by proxy. He's the gentleman Ted Lewis turns to when he needs legal advice. And as Lewis' counselor, Hitzeman has become thoroughly saturated with the mannerisms of the "high hat tragedian of song." They do say his interpretation of "When My Baby Smiles At Me" is Lewis all over.

A cocktail hour crowd presses the best of the maestros for versatility in orchestrations and types of ditties. Moe Baer, whose band is at the Hamilton's rainbow room, reports that a cocktail crowd demands everything from an old Irish ballad to a Liszt classic.

Many of the local citizenry figure La Paree is virtually closed when Emory Daugherty and his boys leave for their summer resort tour. Anyway, the summer will be a bit quiet without the maestro there with his Worry Club, network broadcasts and midnight skyrides. But gosh, after all, you'll still be able to get something to eat at La Paree, we'll bet.

The beautiful blonde maiden who sings this week at Maryland Club Gardens is Lorraine Rhoda. They say she was a mild sensation in Philadelphia. Maybe it's because Lorraine sings melody first, last and always. None of these weird and wild arrangements that leave you wondering what the name of the tune might be.

Eleven stories up in the air again with Pete Macias and his orchestra. That's the Powhatan Roof, with Ramon taking down the reservations. Music from 7:30 to 9:30 for dinner. An augmented orchestra from 10 to 1 for the supper dancers. Under the stars with a good breeze blowing.

Songstresses of the Night

Hudson Motor Sales Break 5-Year Record

New York, June 4.—Retail sales of Hudsons and Terraplanes for May continued to break all monthly records since 1930, according to William R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales.

"For the country generally," he says, "the Hudson Motor Car Co. shows a gain in retail sales of over 40 per cent, comparing May, 1936, with May, 1935."

Southeastern's 105 Graduates Hear Journalist

Sir Willmott Lewis Urges 'Honesty in Work' at Commencement.

Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, told more than 100 graduates of Southeastern University last night that honesty and fellowship are urgent needs of the times.

Addressing the prospective lawyers and accountants at commencement exercises in Memorial Continental Hall, the noted English journalist emphasized "it is honesty in work that is demanded of us, from policeman to President, from crossing-sweeper to king."

"The world of our time," Sir Willmott said, "is more in need of fellowship than ever before, for it is a world in which the life of the individual becomes every day more precarious, more dependent upon the good will, the good faith and the services of others.

"Society has worked out certain main straightforward rules for all of us—to do as well as possible what one can do best, to labor for the improvement of the social organization, to regard men and women as comrades in work and their fredom as a sacred thing, to seek earnestly after truth, and only to accept provisionally the opinions one has not inquired into."

66 Get Law Degrees.

Sixty-six graduates of the school of law and 39 of the school of accountancy were awarded diplomas and degrees. Gold scholarship keys were presented to Richard Ernest Branham, whose scholastic average, 94.88, was highest in the school of law, and to Jerome Kline and Arthur Weiler, tied with an average of 93.94, in the school of accountancy.

Dr. James A. Bell, president of the university, presented the diplomas and prizes to the graduates. Candidates for law degrees were presented to Dr. Bell by William Roy Vallance, director of graduate work in law, and candidates for accountancy degrees were presented by Dean Joseph K. Moyer, of the school of accountancy, and Harvey T. Casbarian, director of graduate work.

Sir Willmott was introduced by George W. Offutt, dean of the school of law and vice president of the Young Men's Christian Association, with which the university is affiliated. Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, pastor of Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, offered invocation. An orchestra played the overture and processional.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

The work of getting out the millions of dollars of bonus money to the war time soldiers keeps hundreds of extra workers at desks during the day and the lights burning all night in a number of Government offices.

Over at the Veterans' Administration, the task has brought 1,970 temporary employes to work. 865 of them on a night shift and the desk space is at such a premium that even the corridors have been filled and the minute one person finishes a day's work, another takes his place. The preliminary check-up of all applications is done here and the records are then turned over to the Treasury Department, where a 24-hour staff gets out the bonds and checks.

And, although these will go out by registered mail to be delivered only upon identification and, although they are non-transferable, all kinds of special secret service precautions are being taken. In the disbursing office there are 200 men and women making out the checks and in Loans and Currency 1,100 more are working night and day on the bonds and other materials to be sealed into tough manila envelopes before they are turned over to the Postoffice for mailing.

Secret Service on Job.

At the Treasury Department there is a secret service committee headed by Chief Moran and the special guards are at particular attention in the Liberty Loan annex and in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

These two buildings, where much of the work connected with the bonus payment goes on, are connected by a tunnel, and Treasury officials were frank to admit that the work had been so placed in order that transfer of bonds can be made from one building to the other without taking them outside into possible dangers on the streets.

The bonds are prepared in batches of 100, which makes the task of following their progress easier for the watchers.

Postmaster Vincent C. Burke says he has called for volunteers from his staff of 2,100 for the extra work of handling about 1,000,000 registered letters between June 15 and 18. And he is swamped with responses, for the extra work means extra pay. Beginning at 12:01 a. m. on June 15, it will take several thousand hours of overtime work to do the job and, in addition to 175 or so of his own regular workers qualified for the job, he will call back about 200 former employes who have had at least six months experience in postoffice work.

"People without experience would be useless to me," he said, "and the Civil Service has given me permission to recall former workers."

Those who work days will receive the usual hourly pay but those who come on for night work will get an additional 10 per cent night rate. No one will be allowed to work more than 12 hours. Burke pointed out that the delivery of the letters in all parts of the country will mean overtime work for the carriers, for over 3,500,000 registered letters are to be cared for during the three-day period.

Queer Queries.

Life is more simple for Government employes in Washington than in England, a recent request for information at the United States Trade Commissioner's office in London illustrates. Commissioner E. B. Lawson was asked to supply "the history and addresses of all haunted houses in England and an itinerary by road to each," he writes to friends in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

He was also asked "Can you trace my wife, who is motoring in the Lake district, and break it gently to her that our house has been burned down?" Another request to the trade commissioner, Lawson wrote, was "Where is the most suitable point on a large arterial road to install a cage of mice for medical research purposes?"

A protest against the suggestion of the executive committee of the Washington Central Labor Union that the American Federation of Government Employes be considered one unit in the American Federation of Labor instead of allowing each of the District lodges separate entity has been organized under a committee for District representation within the group of Government workers.

The committee issued a statement yesterday in which it declared "this attack upon the rights of Government unions to participate directly in the labor movement constitutes an attack upon trade union democracy, and we appeal to all sincere trades unionists to support our fight against discrimination and for fair representation in the Central Labor Union."

Local Unions, Is Claim.

"The committee feels that the various A. F. G. E. lodges clearly constitute local unions as this term is used throughout the American Federation of Labor and further that the District department of the A. F. G. E. cannot in any sense be considered as the local union of the A. F. G. E., but is itself a delegate body maintaining the structure and carrying on the functions of such a body and as such has no right to represent local A. F. G. E. lodges in the Central Labor Union."

The statement also denied the assertion of the Central Labor Union that the local A. F. G. E. lodges do not have peculiar individual problems similar to those of all trades' unions.

Because of their interest in behalf of AAA employes, AAA Lodge 116, of the American Federation of Government Employes, has unanimously conferred honorary memberships on Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, and Representative Charles I. Faddis, of Pennsylvania. Senator Smith was the author of the resolution making it mandatory for the Secretary of Agriculture to retain as many of the present AAA employes as would be needed on the new soil conservation program, rather than make new appointments which would displace the old personnel. Faddis was instrumental in getting the matter before the House. As the lodge pointed out, he is to be commended upon having Chairman Jones of the House Agricultural Committee get a verbal agreement from Wallace on this subject.

The Civil Service Commission reports 238 new and recent appointments in the District, 8 reinstatements and 27 transfers to civil service ranks, bringing the entire total in Washington to 37,834 civil service employes. By separation the service has recently lost 72, by transfer 27 and by correction 1. Forty States, Puerto Rico, Alaska and Hawaii are in arrears on the quota of employes they are entitled to have in the Federal service in Washington.

Husband Slain, Dead Widow's Letter Reveals

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, June 4.—An alleged confession by the now dead wife of Ambrose J. Small, Toronto millionaire whose disappearance has never been solved, that his body was dismembered in 1919, was read in court today.

The purported confession was presented on behalf of Miss Florence Small, sister of the missing theater magnate. She brought an action to restrain distribution of the estate of Small's wife, entered for probate at about $2,000,000.

Small disappeared in 1919 and his wife died last year.

Miss Florence Small's attorney, Paul Hinds, read to the court this alleged confession, addressed to Small's two sisters, Florence and Gertrude:

"I feel unwell, downhearted and lonely. I spend the most of my time in prayer and preparing my soul for a happy life with God after death.

"I received absolution from our Holy Father for the great sin I committed on December 2, 1919, but still I feel I should not leave this world to face my Eternal Father without telling you what happened to your brother.

"Poor Ambrose was killed on December 2, 1919, and I know that a part of his body, the trunk, was buried in the Rosedale Ravine dump, and other parts of the body were burned in the Grand Opera House furnace. You will be surprised, my dear Florence and Gertrude, to learn that I am more than any other person responsible for your brother's death. God forgive me.

"I will not cause any more pain to a living soul and that is why I will not reveal the names of those who are involved in this grewsome crime, but I will tell you one thing, it cost me plenty to close their mouths.

"I am leaving the bulk of your brother's estate to those who are doing Christ's work on earth; they will always pray for the repose of our souls.

"I have told many untruths about you and Ambrose in court and I said unkind things in many unsigned letters which I have sent to you. I hope you will forgive me and your forgiveness will be pleasing to God.

"I request you in the name of Christ not to give the contents of this letter to any other person; leave the matter rest.

"This confession, which relieves my mind of a great burden, is typed by a very dear friend of mine who will deliver it to you after my death.

"Forgive me, dear Florence and Gertrude, and pray for the repose of my soul when I pass away.

"God bless you.

"Your loving sister,
(Signed) "T. Small."

Attorney Hinds also submitted affidavits which he said "corroborated most of the facts in the confession."

Mrs. Small's will left most of the estate to the Roman Catholic Church and to charitable institutions. Executors of the State have agreed not to distribute it pending the outcome of the present legal action.

24 Graduates Hear Sayre Tell Of World's Ills

Ceremonies Held at Va. Theological Seminary in Alexandria.

The little ivy-covered chapel on Seminary Hill was crowded with alumni, friends and relatives of the 24 young men who were about to enter the ministry. The Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Bishop of Virginia, presided at the ceremony—the 113th commencement of the seminary.

Sayre said:

"You are privileged to be living is one of the times of crisis of our civilization. The future is literally in our making. We seem to be slipping backwards in the long march of progress. Political institutions are cracking ominously. Democratic government is fighting for its life. Our whole capitalistic system is under fire.

"Fear of the future haunts every land. The demoralization that comes from idleness and public relief is eating into youth. We are forced to mortgage unborn generations to care for present want. In the midst of abundance, the world is multiplying poverty."

"Humanity is not now athirst for more inventions and scientific discoveries and improved methods of manufacture," the son-in-law of President Wilson asserted. "These things will not stop heartaches or broken lives or suicides. What men and women are yearning and groping for today are spiritual values, such as inner happiness unconquerable by outward circumstances."

Among the graduates to whom Bishop Tucker handed the 19 B. D. degrees and five certificates of graduation were James DeWolf Perry, jr., son of the presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church, and Gustavus William Buchholz, jr., of 2248 Cathedral avenue, Washington.

Buchholz, a graduate of Central High School and Annapolis, will be ordained at the Washington Cathedral at 11 a. m. Sunday. He then will assume the rectorship of Christ Church, Bowling Green, Ky.

3 District Girls Will Carry Chain

Adele Johnson, Marjorie Kerr and Betty Fisher, all of Washington, will be among the freshman students carrying the daisy chain in the class day exercises on the lawn at Chevy Chase Junior College, Conecticut avenue, today at 4:30 p. m. The exercises form an important part of the graduation formalities of the junior college.

Earlier in the day the glee club concert will be given. Following the exercises on the lawn, there will be the alumnae dinner at 6:30 p. m., with the annual meeting at 8. Felix Garziglia will give a piano recital at 9.

Richard Burton, poet, author and professor, will be the speaker at the commencement exercises at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

On the Air Today

Fred Allen's Wednesday night show at 8—and the Fred Allen show for the West Coast a couple of hours later—are two entirely different hours of entertainment.

Fiddling around with the short waves night before last produced this interesting and entertaining comparison. I've heard for a long time that Allen is one buffoon who departs unceremoniously from his script and that every show is a catch-as-catch-can proposition for everyone involved. I can now attest to that experience.

For example, you may remember this week that he had on his amateur show section a girl from Georgia. At the end of his introduction to her he says: "Miss Whoozis, you're from the South; would you mind answering a question for me?" And she says she would be glad to. And Allen then asks: "Well, is it really true what they say about Dixie?" Which was good for a big laugh from the audience.

In the repeat show, however, the situation was completely changed. Allen was ready to release the girl for her song, when he suddenly said there was something else he wanted to ask, but couldn't think just how the gag went. Promptly the girl fills in with the line "Miss Whoozis you're from the South, etc." Then Allen went ahead to do the line just as in the first show.

It was interesting to note that the amateur who won the audience vote, good for a week at the Roxy and some cash, in the first show did not win in the repeat performance. Which was extremely interesting to me, and promptly raised the question as to which winner gets the stage engagement. Or does the theater take both? You can catch the repeat show from your short-wave band.

Much excitement around WJSV because young Charles Godwin has been assigned the Presidential announcing job. Godwin has not been with WJSV long enough yet to even permit Ann Gillis to provide the radio writers with details of his past experience, what he eats for breakfast and what kind of scents he likes in his fan letters. And now he's Presidential announcer! If he makes good on this first jaunt he will have the job for keeps, no doubt.

How a Baby Grows

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

Five Creepers Parts 2 and 3

FIVE CREEPERS OF THE SAME AGE, in different stages of creeping.—Today's pictures show two more creepers of the same age. In the first row, the baby shown crawls by arm drag. He remai ns on his stomach, but is able to move forward by propelling himself with his arms. In the second row, still another type of creeper is pictured. This child "creep-crawls." He gets into the creep position, holds it for a moment and then falls forward, making progress. It is a combination of creeping and crawling. TOMORROW: Creepers Four and Five.

Comedy Crowd Has a Lingo of Cryptic Import

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 4.—"The heavy does a double take 'em and a burn, then we go for a chase and the other guy Brodies 108 for the fade, see?"

You probably don't see at all, unless you understand the peculiar lingo of comedy lots. Foregoing is an excerpt from Charley Rogers' explanation of a gag sequence to Gordon Douglas, assistant director of the Hal E. Roach lot. Rogers writes comedies for Laurel and Hardy.

Much less briefly, what he meant was this: The villain of the piece is subtly insulted by a second player. He doesn't get it for a moment, but as suspicion dawns he glances sharply at the player (the "take 'em"), then looks stupidly away.

A moment later he grasps full significance of the insult, snaps his head around (for the "double take 'em," and goes into his burn (gets visibly angry). Heavy then starts to chase player No. 2, who slips and Brodies (falls) in the style called "108" a head-first high somersault, landing on feet or face, as the scene fades out.

Are Many Variations.

There are innumerable variations of the "take 'em," and no limit on the number that can be done in sequence. Harry Langdon has been known to do as many as 20.

The delayed "take 'em" of Stan Laurel is one of the best. He uses it in dialogue, and also in "stick-work." (Someone pops him on the head, but he pays no attention for several seconds before going into a surprising Brodie.)

The triple "take 'em," with a "forward dip and a one-eyed fade," is the specialty of Jimmy Finlayson. (A sinister nod and the closing of one eye to pantomime that "all is discovered."

W. C. Fields is a "fig-bar" comic, one who plays on coyness, embarrassment or innocence, but he also does the "broadest" (most subtle), "take 'ems" in Hollywood. Inferior comedians "mug" (overemphasize their "take 'ems"), hence a person who goes high-hat 'takes it big."

More "Fig-Bars."

Charlie Chaplin, Charlie Chase, Hugh Herbert and Frank Morgan are also "fig-bars," but Wheeler and Woolsey and the Marx Brothers go for "screwy" comedy and "fast patter."

Charlie Ruggles and Buster Keaton are "dead pan" experts, and Oliver Hardy is master of the "slow burn." You can see him getting madder and madder for seconds before he explodes.

"High and dizzy" routines are steeple-jack balancing acts such as Harold Lloyd, normally a fig-bar, did in "Safety Last." "Big eyeing," or "pug eyeing," is really a "take 'em"—a blank surprise stare. "Lots of teeth," you've guessed it, is a Joe E. Brown grin.

Other popular Brodies are the "high gruesome" (a feet-first flip in which the player lands flat on his back), the "nip up" and the common or garden "pratt fall."

Long-Distance Loan.

Victor Jory claims the Hollywood long-distance loan-out championship. He'll sail shortly for Australia on Zane Grey's yacht to play in a romantic story Grey is writing for production by an Anzac film company. The Western novelist sails south every year to fish in Australian waters.

Veloz and Yolanda, present premier ballroom dancers, will turn actors for "Champagne Waltz." Dancers have previously appeared in movies, but never before have had dramatic parts with lines to read.

Columbia is preparing to cramp Bing Crosby's vacation style, with studio art department already designing sets for his picture, "Pennies From Heaven," in which he does a strolling guitar player. Only other player cast is Edith Fellows, child actress. It's to be one of the crooner's few trips off the Paramount lot. He isn't often loaned.

Cutting Room Scraps.

Ernst Lubitsch is home from Europe preparing to do three or four pictures a year as an independent producer on the Paramount lot. He'll direct one personally.

H. C. Witwer, jr., son of the late short-story writer, was unearthed in Warner Brothers' sound department, and hustled into the story mill.

About the Showshops

So Washington is going to have its professional summer theater, after all.

It has been an open secret for weeks, of course, that Stephen E. Cochran, manager of the National Theater, impresario of the National Theater Players—not functioning this season for the first time in a decade—and founder of the National Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts, has been scouring the highways and byways of the Maryland and Virginia countrysides in quest of an ideal spot for a theatrical venture of some expansiveness. After having been "pushed around," in a manner of speaking, by divers and sundry property owners, Panjandrum Cochran finally clapped his eye on the perfect pastoral setting for his pet project. Where? Try and find out!

BELL.

While the geographical location of the site of this tentative counterpart of Denver's Elitch Gardens may not at the moment be disclosed, it can be definitely stated that a conveniently located acreage property on Tuesday afternoon was sewed up by a five-year lease with option of purchase at the end of that period.

The owner of the property is a landed gentleman well known in Washington, at present residing on his rolling estate in Southern Maryland. So determined was Mr. Cochran to consummate his deal that when it came time to get down to the brass tacks of a specific lease, he dispatched a real estate expert to the ancestral home of this gentleman farmer, with reams of blank legal paper, carbon paper, fountain pens and even a portable typewriter to make sure that lack of facilities for the execution of so important a document might not be pleaded as an excuse for delay.

On Tuesday night the lease was duly signed, sealed and delivered. Mr. Cochran now is busy in Rockville perfecting certain necessary licenses, permits, concessions, bonds and whatnot.

If theatergoing Washington can hold its curiosity in leash until the coming Sabbath, complete details of this elaborate enterprise will be made known in this department at that time.

* * * *

Incidentally, the plutocratic Loew influence seems to have trickled around the block into E street.. Mr. Cochran now is hauling the body around in a new Packard perambulator, and is keeping the old one, besides. And Norman Pyle, the peregrinating publicist who does the cymbal-whanging for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer magic lantern shows in this territory, camping out temporarily at the Willard, has gone and bought himself a new LaSalle, to match Division Manager Carter Barron's, in which he is driving to Philadelphia to close the ten-week run of "The Great Ziegfeld" at the Chestnut Street Opera House. Was it only ten weeks ago that we trekked up there to see the opening?

* * * *

And still the orchestras come. Having recently been privileged to hear Ray Noble and Benny Meroff, and with Yascha Bunchuk and his symphony of 60 and Jack Hylton and his English organization primed to fill the air with a concord of sweet sound for the week beginning today, the Warners break out the further word that a week from today, June 12, Theodore L. Friedman and his band will occupy the stage at the Earle as headline attraction.

Mr. Friedman, in case your memory has slipped a little to one side, is known to the trade as Ted Lewis, the "high-hatted tragedian of jazz." Mr. Friedman-Lewis hails from Circleville, Ohio, a neck of the woods that has produced other notables of the theater, prominent among them being the Frohmans, Daniel, Charles and Gustav; George C. Tyler and our old office-mate of the Fourth Estate, Thomas M. Cahill, a reformed professional thespian still prevalent in the better of the local amateur productions.

Ted Lewis' last screen appearance was in "Here Comes the Band," one of last fall's lesser items that stumbled a little this side of first base through no fault of Mr. Lewis and his ardent instrumentalists. I am laying as high as 11 to 10 that when he comes to the Earle "Me and My Shadow" will be one of his hit numbers. It always has been!

* * * *

While we are on the subject, representatives of the British Embassy will be in attendance at the Earle tonight as guests of Jack Hylton, their fellow countryman. The Hylton "Continental Revue" almost ought to be termed "Insular," instead, according to the billing, enlisting, as it does, the services of Alec Templeton, English pianist; Magda Neeld, Australian singer; Peggy Dell, Irish balladist, and Pat O'Malley, Irish-English vocalist.

* * * *

The Roadside Theater, preliminary to the opening of its third summer season on June 15, is open-housing on Saturday and Sunday afternoons this week—Saturday from 2 p. m., Sunday from 3.

Subscriptions for the forthcoming Roadside season are being booked in large number as the opening date of "Around the World in 80 Days" approaches. Two plans are offered. A subscription for all six plays now scheduled is priced at $4.40. For the benefit of those who will be out of town during a part of the season a subscription to any four of the plays may be purchased for $3. Mail checks to Richard P. Creyke, 3525 R street northwest.

That place as pianist to furnish incidental music for the first play of the summer, by the way, is filled. Betty Grey, daughter of the chancellor of American University and herself a player of parts, egged on slightly by this column, got the job.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Star Dust.

Chicago, June 4.

Sophie Tucker, who originated long before they built theaters around microphones, is slightly dazed by radio . . . It is a pleasant daze, for from the terrace room of the Morrison Hotel, Miss Tucker has been reaching out into the air and summoning an audience that she never knew existed . . . Night after night, this grand veteran is playing to capacity attendances . . . The audience is youthful, and most of them never knew her until she walked into their front parlors, tapped on their radio sets and struck up an acquaintanceship . . . Now she is the pet of the Chicago collegiates . . . Last night 300 youngsters graduating from a local military school were seated there in the terrace room . . . I asked one of the young cadets why they'd selected Miss Tucker's spot . . . "Over the radio, she sounds so nice and human," he told me . . . "The kids think she's a peach."

ROOSEVELT.

* * * *

Responsibility of this completely new audience carries its own obligations . . . Sophie has changed her songs to meet the new need . . . No risque songs for these 16-year-olds . . . She sings the popular tunes, and sings 'em as only she can deliver them . . . Between numbers, she hustles around and actually mothers the kids . . . If she catches them trying to sneak in a wee drink, it is just too bad . . . "Your mothers sent you here and Sophie won't stand for any funny business," she warns . . . Last night she introduced the military prep school boys . . . "These children," she said, and was interrupted by a storm of protests . . . "All right," she amended, "you're grown up people. I'll call you ladies and gentlemen—children" . . . The school cheer leaders gave her a school yell that must have been heard all the way back to Tin Pan Alley.

* * * *

Amazing character, this Sophie Tucker . . . A headliner for 30 years, and as clean-cut as a cameo . . . I marveled at her energy . . . "I don't drink, I don't smoke a great deal, I get my sleep," she explained . . . Josephine Huston commented on her astonishingly fresh skin . . . "Never had a facial in my life," said Sophie . . . "A 50-cent cream and plenty of soap and water do the trick. You younger girls are always rushing for facials. Over a span of years, they break down your tissues" . . . Her fresh, clean appearance has caused great interest here among the Chicago women of her own age . . . Some of them dance close to the bandstand and peer closely to see if they can find traces of a face-lifting operation . . . So Miss Tucker now has her corn-colored hair drawn tightly from her face . . . "Just want them to see that no plastic surgeon built my face up to a terrific letdown," she says genially.

* * * *

My man, Rasputin, has been taking excellent care of me on this visit . . . His real tag is Victor Weinshanker, but that has been lost in the passage of years, and even he wouldn't answer to it . . . A vaudeville actor called him Rasputin in 1915 as a tribute to his long hair, and the name was so fanciful that it clung to him . . . Theatrical people always interested him, and for the past 30 years he has been prowling around backstages and night clubs and fight camps . . . He does publicity jobs, and his contacts enable him to stroll in on managing editors and city editors, who find him a relief from deadline tensions . . . At 5 a. m., three days ago, I needed a typewriter . . . Rasputin disappeared into the night, his long hair trailing behind him in the rush of wind created by his exit . . . Twenty minutes later he was back with a mill . . . "But I gotta get it right back," he said . . . "I borrowed it from an all-night restaurant and they need it to type their menus for breakfast."

* * * *

Once upon a time, this was a wild and wooly town . . . At regular intervals, citizens on the streets would duck hastily to cover at the staccato signal of a tommy gun . . . Beer runners, who entered their garage to park their trucks, never knew whether St. Valentine was a holiday or a day of execution . . . Autoists forever were complaining that their tires had been punctured by cartridge shells that littered the public thoroughfares . . . A new era has been achieved here . . . Commissioner Allman, Detective Chief Sullivan and Capt. Gilbert accomplished it . . . When you hear a sharp report echoing in the streets now, you can be certain that it is only backfire from an exhaust.

* * * *

Plenty of money in evidence hereabouts . . . A crowd of 43,000 at Wrigley Field, a new parimutuel handle record at the race track on the same day, crowded night clubs, hotels and theaters—all of these are metallic evidence of a return to sound money . . . Locals say that only in New York and Down East is there a halting return to recovery, and blame that on the textile confusion . . . As far West as Omaha, coins are clinking and dollar bils are rustling happily . . . The residents here seem to be agin F. D. Roosevelt, but they concede that even Landon is no match for him as a vote-getter . . . Prominent Republicans, who do not wish to be quoted, privately believe that the next four years of Roosevelt will be marked by a magnificent administration . . . "He had to play politics the first four years," they point out . . . "The next four years he'll concentrate on statesmanship."

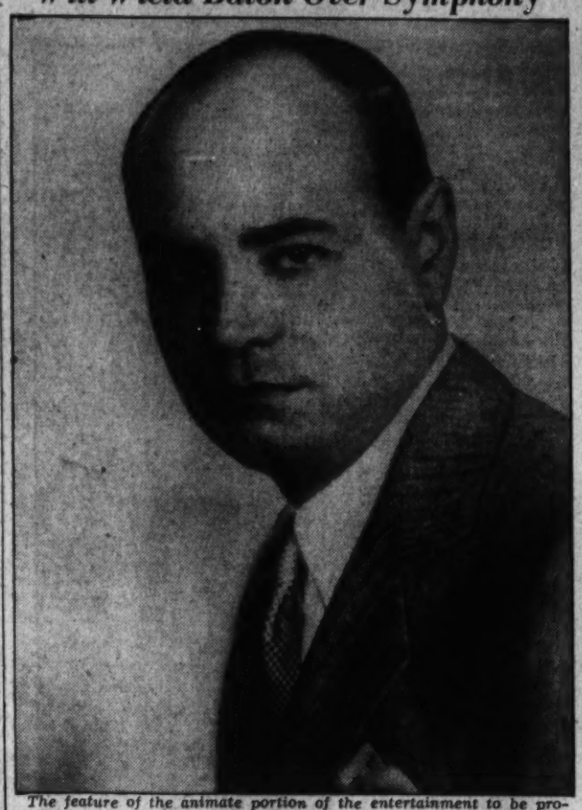
Will Wield Baton Over Symphony



The feature of the animate portion of the entertainment to be provided at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning today will be the 60-piece symphony orchestra to be directed by Yascha Bunchuk, noted conductor and concert cellist, whose likeness appears above. A brilliant musician and composer, Bunchuk has had a distinguished career on both sides of the Atlantic. He already is well known to Washington audiences by virtue of earlier appearances here both as conductor and soloist.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, June 4.

Dick Powell believes he discovered a movie boner in the flicker "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." It is in the very entertaining courtroom sequence, and Gary Cooper finally decides to take the stand and testify in his own defense. Cooper takes the stand, but he is not sworn in by the court attendant, although the other witnesses were.

BINNIE BARNES.

A different type flicker flaw in the same picture is contributed by a person who signs himself, "member of the Post staff." He writes: "In 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town,' Jean Arthur is portrayed as a first-class reporter. But she must be something more than that, because when she sits in her room writing one of her stories about Gary Cooper, she not only writes the story, but the caption as well. It's shown sprawled all over the top of the sheet of paper she's writing on. Or maybe the paper she works for has no copy desk."

Carile Lombard saw the flicker, "A Message to Garcia," and is amused by the fact that Barbara Stanwyck hides shoulder deep in a muddy stream, travels through a jungle for weeks, and is wearing a nice silk blouse. Miss Stanwyck journeys through the jungle and the flicker without a trunk or baggage. Yet, in the later sequences in which Wallace Beery and John Boles appear, their clothes torn and dirty, Barbara Stanwyck appears, her blouse is neat and as clean as when she started.

"Everyone is kinder to us heroines, aren't they," says Lombard.

Now for the movie fans. "Ravenal has a rendezvous with Magnolia on the top deck," writes Karl Ireland about "Show Boat." "Telling Ravenal that she has to take a drink of water to Parthy, she fills a dipper from the water barrel and holds it in her hands while talking. Ravenal seizes her and kisses her, at which she drops the dipper to the deck. Gallant gentleman that he is, he recovers the dipper and hands it to her, after which she goes down the stairs, carrying said dipper with great care. The only flaw in his generous act is that he neglects to refill the dipper before returning it to her. Thus rendering her trip down the stairs and her great care with the dipper somewhat superfluous. I am pretty sure of this point," adds Mr. Ireland, "since I stayed for the next show in order to check on it."

"It must be a phone system special for the movies," claims Miss Turner, "for usually, counting the exchange and the numbers, I've got to dial six or seven times."

Robert Young in the Jessie Matthews' flicker, "It's Love Again," is seen typewriting and is using the "hunt-and-seek" method, according to L. Hano, for it is clearly evident that Young is pecking away at the keys with two fingers.

However, in the closeups, Robert Young is seen typing and using the touch system. He uses one method for the regular shots and suddenly knows how to type for the closeups.

"Fast learning, I calls it," says Mr. Hano.

"THE BONERS in the flicker, 'Three Wise Guys,' could take up plenty of your space, but I'll confine myself to this," writes Al Reiser.

"Robert Young"—he's playing in plenty of pictures, isn't he?—"invites Betty Furness for a drive and ends up in a resort town getting married. The next morning at the hotel, he is dressed in slacks and sweater, while Betty wears a beautiful negligee. I guess people are prepared for everything these days.

"The coincidences in the picture are, to say the least, quite remarkable. Blackie and Doc, Betty's ex-partners in crime she has eluded, happen to pick up a Pennsylvania trade magazine which happens to have a picture of an ex-convict who happens to be the man Robert Young is working for. Later, the escaping thieves, after fleeing for miles, happen to hide their loot in Betty's barn. It certainly happens in the movies."

Yes, there are many things that happen only in the movies. You can always expect an author to smoke a pipe . . . Whenever a man and woman register at a hotel they have baggage . . . A football game is always won by the correct team . . . All heroines have a distinctive handwriting . . . The hero always smokes the heroine's favorite brand of ciggies . . . Heroines are never taller, at least never appear taller, than the man making love to them . . . A taxi is always within hailing distance . . . A waiter is always a comic . . . The detective always solves the crime, no matter how baffling . . . After a sequence in which the heroine and hero innocently romp through the forest, there is always a scene in which the heroine expects a baby.

Canada Flood Menaces Towns: One Drowned

Vancouver, British Columbia, June 4 (AP). — Flood waters took one life and menaced scores of towns in southern British Columbia today.

Dykes crumbled before the increasing pressure and thousands of acres of rich farm lands in the southwestern part of the province were under water.

Reports to the provincial government tentatively set the damage at $300,000 but the figure did not take in reports from the northern part.

Agassiz, about 75 miles up the Fraser, was isolated.

Leeds Re-Weds Bride To Be Sure of Legality

Miami Beach, Fla., June 4 (AP).—William B. Leeds and his bride, the former Olive Hamilton, of Pittsburgh, were remarried here today to insure legality of their first wedding May 23 at sea aboard the tinplate heir's yacht Moana.

The sportsman heir and the comely former telephone operator he rescued from the surf at Atlantic City, N. J., six years ago, were wed by County Judge W. F. Blanton, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sailing Baruch.

Mary Brahany Becomes Bride Of E. H. Lloyd

Miss Mary Jane Brahany, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Brahany, was married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon to Mr. Edmund H. Lloyd, son of Dr. and Mrs. Bolivar J. Lloyd, of Washington. The ceremony took place in St. Matthew's Church, the Rev. Joseph M. Moran, rector of St. Thomas Apostle Church, officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin with a long train and a silk tulle veil with a coronet of seed pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Brush, Miss Betty Myers and Miss Shirley Browning, all of Washington; Miss Dorothy Emerson, of Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Beverly Kurtzmann, of Maplewood, N. J., and Miss Betty Wyllis Stone, of Clarendon, Va. They were dressed alike in gowns of hydrangea-blue silk organza, and large eggshell picture hats of horse-hair, with slippers and gloves to match.

Mr. Bolivar J. Lloyd, jr., was his brother's best man. The ushers were Mr. Roger M. Lloyd, Dr. Charles E. Coulon, Mr. Blanchard K. Slaughter, Mr. Frederick E. Sessions, Mr. Robert L. Keith and Mr. James M. Bailey.

Following the ceremony, there was a reception at the Shoreham, after which the couple left for New York to sail for Nassau and Havana. They will be at home after June 21 at 2601 Calvert street.

The bride attended Duke University, and the bridegroom was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Rippon Lodge Fete To Be Held Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis Will Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, assisted by Miss Luella P. Chase, regent, and members of the Susan Riviere Hetzel Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will entertain at a garden party Sunday, from 3 to 7, at their home, Rippon Lodge, near Mount Vernon.

Mr. Ellis will talk at 4:30 in the colonial garden of Rippon Lodge on the history of the eighteenth century estate. Built by Richard Blackburn, of Rippon, England; inherited by Judge Bushrod Washington and later by John Augustine Washington, it has always been the scene of much hospitality. The famous old Potomac path, formerly a part of Kings highway, runs for 3 miles on Rippon Lodge ground and has been well preserved.

The guests of honor and officers of the chapter will be introduced by Miss Chase. Proceeds of the party will go toward the patriotic work of the chapter.

3 Weddings Hold Interest Tomorrow

Miss Beal, Miss Lippert and Miss Cox to Marry.

Three weddings of interest in naval and resident circles of Washington society are scheduled to take place tomorrow.

Miss Elizabeth Ashby Beal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Beal, and Mr. Frank Cleland Devlin, of Duluth, Minn., will be married at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the home of the bride. The Rev. Herbert Scott Smith, rector of St. Margaret's Church, will perform the ceremony, and the bride's sister, Miss Anne Ashby Beal, will be her only attendant.

Miss Katherine Lippert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Arthur Lippert, whose marriage to Ensign Irving Stahl Presler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Logan Presler, of Washington, will take place tomorrow in the chapel of the Naval Academy, has selected Miss Elizabeth Hussy as her only attendant.

Mr. John N. Ditzler, of Washington, will be best man.

Miss Adaline Peter Cox, whose engagement to Mr. Herbert Wood Walker, son of Mrs. Nina Chinn Walker, of Washington, was announced in April, will be married tomorrow at 4 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Nettelton Cox, in Louisville, Ky. Mr. Herndon Phillips, of Washington, will be best man. Only members of the immediate families will be present at the ceremony.

Mr. Louis Livingston Weds Miss Stevens

Miss Marietta Stevens, of Chicago, and Mr. Louis Livingston, formerly of Washington, were married here yesterday by the Rev. Oliver J. Hart of St. John's Episcopal Church. Only members of the two families and a few close friends were present. Following the ceremony the couple left for Chicago and will later sail for an extended trip to Europe.

Mrs. Mary Borroughs Is Married to Mr. Ward

The marriage of Mrs. Mary Peters Borroughs, daughter of Mr. John C. Peters, and Mr. William Frederick Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ward, was solemnized Wednesday evening at the Petworth Baptist Church, with the Rev. H. J. Smith officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Harry Peters, was attended by Mrs. R. Bruce Keiner and Mr. Keiner served as best man.

After a honeymoon in Atlantic City the young couple will be at home at 4821 Third street.

D. A. R. Entertains.

Miss Perkins To Be Speaker

Ashburn, Mrs. Harry E. Harvey, Mrs. Nina K. Trible, Mrs. Charles H. Pierce, Mrs. Walter N. Campbell.

Mrs. Marie H. Heath, Mrs. F. H. Fohrman, Mrs. George O. Gillingham, Mrs. William A. Boss, Mrs. Frederick Yates, Mrs. John C. Kondrup, Mrs. Wallace Streater, Mrs. Charles M. Jones, Mrs. A. L. Rheinstrom, Mrs. Warren Wagner, Mrs. Byron M. Coon and Mrs. A. B. McManus.

Benjamin Williams Weds Charlotte Brink

Miss Charlotte Brink, daughter of Hobart D. Brink, of Scranton, Pa., who has made her home with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Overacker, in Takoma Park, Md., was married at 8:30 last night to Mr. Benjamin Williams, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs Earle Williams, of San Fernando, Calif.

The ceremony was at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Charles Briscoe, 210 Buffalo avenue, Takoma Park, Md., the Rev. Edward Carey, of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, officiating. Miss Joanne Bollman was the only attendant. A reception followed.

Hospital Alumnae Plan To Sponsor Cotton Ball

A cotton ball will be given under auspices of the Providence Hospital Alumnae Association June 15, at Wardman Park Hotel in the main ballroom. The proceeds are to be used for installation of new lighting equipment in the operating suite.

The chairman of the dance, Miss Dorothy Farrin, is being assisted by Miss Catherine O'Donnell, Miss Mary Haas, Mrs. Frank Shea and Mrs. Ralph Carbo.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

At the commencement exercises of Shattuck Military School at Faribault, Minn., yesterday morning, one of the most interested spectators was the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Washington, who watched his eldest grandson, Clyde Palmer Jaffray, jr., graduate cum laude.

The lad is the son of Mrs. Mary Jaffray, daughter of the Bishop and Mrs. Freeman, who died in 1923, shortly before her father was consecrated. Among the students at the Shattuck also is Bishop Freeman's other grandson, James Edward Freeman Jaffray, named for his grandfather. The younger brother will graduate from Shattuck next year.

Due to the illness of Mrs. Freeman she was unable to accompany the Bishop to the graduation of their grandson.

Bishop Freeman will return to Washington tomorrow morning. If Mrs. Freeman continues to improve they expect to leave about June 12 for their summer home at Sorrento, Me., where they have spent the summer season for a number of years.

Mrs. Raymond L. Wolven, wife of Canon Wolven, of the Cathedral staff and daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Freeman, will join them in Sorrento later in the summer.

Diplomatic Dilemmas.

His difficulties started on the train to Washington from Philadelphia, where he attended the Davis Cup tennis preliminaries. On the night trip back to the Capital he suddenly awoke, found the train at the station, and himself alone in the car. He seized his bags, rushed out and jumped into a taxi, giving the address of the chancery to the driver. An expression of bewilderment crossed the driver's face.

"There's no such address here," he said. "This is Baltimore."

Upon his arrival in the Capital several hours behind schedule, Senor Padilla was so busy saying good-by to his friends that he put off packing until the last minute. He had no time to fold and pack his clothes, so threw them into his bags and he and his friends stood on the lids until they succeeded in shutting them. Things were still left over, and with coats and suits flung across his arm and barely enough time catch the train, Senor Padilla hopped into a cab and left for a three-month vacation in Spain.

Mrs. Bacon Off for Ohio.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon, of New York, who is a delegate from New York to the Republican National Convention in Cleveland, will leave today for Ohio. Mrs. Bacon also is chairman of the Republican women of the Empire State, and for the past few months has traveled extensively there in the interests of the party and organizing the women for the campaign.

Mrs. Bacon writes on political questions for both newspapers and party journals. When political activities of the fall are over she no doubt will resume work on her projected history of the famous house in Washington occupied by Representative Bacon and their family, once the home of Chief Justice John Marshall, Chief Justice Melville H. Fuller and many other figures in American history.

Children Plan 'Elastic' Show

Lines Vary, Plot Unknown, Cat Runs Off; but the Play Will Go On.

By Dudley Harmon.

Poison ivy, the sudden departure of a Siamese cat, an important member of the cast, and the temporary withdrawal of a little girl member, who "went home mad," failed to discourage Barbara Caldwell, 9-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Caldwell, and the group of children under her who are presenting "The Half of the Whole" tomorrow afternoon at the Turkish Embassy.

"Proceeds will go to pay expenses" read the tickets; for mothers and fathers predicted when the project was launched it probably would bring only enough to cover the cost of production. However, the performance is really being given for the benefit of the Thrift Shop, the Children's Hospital and the Stephen Foster Memorial and the advance sale of tickets indicates the children will have funds left over to aid the charities.

The plot is still a secret among the members of the cast and, although the dialogue is elastic, changing from day to day with the changing moods of the young actors, the general idea remains the same. The subject concerns poor people, and the children will wear ragged costumes. Barbara Caldwell conceived the idea of buying these from the Thrift Shop, and so even the expenses of the production will contribute to the cause.

Eloise Richberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, the member who was suffering from poison ivy, has returned to the cast.

The young troupers were worried when the Caldwell's Siamese cat, who has an important role in the drama, disappeared. Fortunately, however, he turned up again, and now the players are taking no chances. They are keeping him locked up in a room until the day of the performance.

If the play meets with success, the children plan to form a little stock company of their own and continue to write, produce, and act in other dramas. The other members of the cast include Selma Ertegun, daughter of the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun; Virginia Thurston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Thurston, Joey Lou Berliner, and Lorel Horning.

Grace Warner Is Bride Of Azro J. Cory, 2d

Mrs. Haviland Connors, of Baltimore, announces the marriage of her granddaughter, Miss Grace Elizabeth Warner, to Azro Jackson Cory 2d, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Cory, of Baltimore and formerly of Takoma Park, Md., on May 30 at Elkton, Md.

The bridegroom is a grandson of Dr. and Mrs. Azro J. Cory, of Takoma Park, Md., who are the oldest inhabitants of that town, having lived there for 50 years. The couple is living temporarily with Mr. Cory's grandparents.

Mrs. Borden Sees Daughter Given Diploma

Motors to Madeira School, Her Alma Mater, for Closing Exercises.

Mrs. William Ayres Borden yesterday motored over the old toll road to the Madeira School, near Greenway, Va., to see her daughter, Miss Dorothy Borden, receive a diploma from Mrs. Lucy Madeira Wing, from whom Mrs. Borden received hers years ago. The school was then located in Washington. Mrs. Borden always has been interested in Madeira and has served as secretary of the Washington Alumnae Association.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Borden, with their daughter, are planning to leave Washington soon for their summer home near Lake Sunapee, N. H. They will not return for some time, unless as visitors, for they expect to reside in Springfield, Mass., where Col. Borden has been transferred.

Miss Borden is planning to attend Smith College and will be near enough to her parents' new home to spend many week-ends with them.

Miss Clara Sasscer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Harold Sasscer, who also was graduated from the Madeira School, has made tentative plans for the summer and fall which include a trip to Mexico with her mother and entrance in Bryn Mahr in the fall. A classmate, Miss Alice Leake, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Leake, in September will enter Smith College, the alma mater of her mother and sister.

Miss Kirk's Plans.

Miss Marian Kirk, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Allan G. Kirk, will enter Bryn Mawr after spending the summer with her parents at Black Point, Conn. Commander Kirk will leave, the middle of the summer for his new post on the West Coast and will be joined there in the fall by Mrs. Kirk.

Miss Kristi Putnam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Putnam, who also received her diploma from the Madeira School yesterday, likewise plans to go to Bryn Mawr in the fall.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Leckie, of Columbus, Ohio, attended the graduation exercises at the Madeira School yesterday, when their daughter, Miss Lean Leckie, received her diploma. She will accompany them to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for a short stay before returning to their home.

Mrs. Harry A. McBride, wife of the Assistant to the Secretary of State, will entertain at luncheon today in honor of the graduating class and faculty of Friends School at her apartment in Tilden Gardens. Robert McBride, president of the graduating class, which will receive diplomas this evening, plans to attend Princeton University this fall.

Mrs. Greenway to Speak.

Representative Isabella Greenway will address the members of the Friends School graduating class tonight in the gymnasium of the school on Wisconsin avenue. Among the graduates will be Miss Eleanor Browning Barton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Barton, who has been interested in hockey and the dramatic club and plans to attend Swarthmore in the fall; Richard S. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Smith, who will go to Dartmouth and, from his record at Friends, will probably distinguish himself in athletics; Minor Giles Atwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, who will attend Amherst; Hugh Scott Duncan, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Duncan, who plans to go to Stanford; James H. Forsythe, jr., and Miss Beatrice Gibson, who will go to William and Mary College; Miss Margaret Furlow and Miss Victoria Kuhn, who plan to attend George Washington University; John Lewis Gwynn, son of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Gwynn, and William Gray Schultz, son of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Hood Shultz, who will go to Georgetown University; Miss Elisabeth Prescott Lawton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edwin Lawton and Miss Rita Abigail Scheffler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Scheffler, will attend American University.

Miss Mary Finch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Finch, of Chevy Chase, Md., who will be graduated with honorable mention from Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., June 15, received her preparatory training at Holy Cross Academy. Miss Finch was awarded a medal offered by the Society of Spanish Teachers in America for excellence in Spanish.

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Liebman were entertained at dinner last evening at Woodmont Country Club, in celebration of their twentieth wedding anniversary. Preceding the dinner Mr. and Mrs. Liebman were hosts to the 40 in the party at cocktails at their apartment at Woodley Park Towers.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT.

BRENDA didn't know which was the worse—hearing the telephone ring, or looking in the mail box. "It's Walter," she said to herself every time she was at home and the phone rang. "It's Walter——" Wondering what she would say to him, how she could find out where he was. But it wasn't Walter. It never was Walter.

Every time she looked in the mail box it was with the same hope, and she looked into it a dozen times a day. First thing in the morning, she raced downstairs, knowing the mail wouldn't be there yet, but thinking there might be some message for her, dropped in the box during the night. Then, she looked again before she went to the hospital, and after she came home from the hospital at 2 o'clock to see what was there, because that was the time the afternoon mail was delivered, and always when she returned around 9:30 at night.

But there was no phone call, no letter, no telegram. Walter's flowers, however, were coming each day to the Corwin, for the order had apparently been paid for in advance. Red roses. She took these every morning to Lally.

At 12 sharp, she called Main 2121, trembling as she dialed the number, shaking when she got her connection. The first day, which was Friday, Brady answered himself. When she told him who she was, he asked, "Anything new?" And when she said there wasn't he hung up without a goodby. Saturday, a strange voice answered, but there was no message from Brady. Sunday, the same voice replied, and there still was no message.

Wretched.

There was the wrench every time she faced Lally, and Lally's eyes smiled their greeting, and Lally's lips touched hers. Sometimes, she stood outside the door of 402 for a long time before she had the courage to enter, to bring a smile to her own lips.

And the lies she had to tell her sister, because she was spending more time than usual with her. She told that Walter had insisted she take a vacation until after the operation so she could be at the hospital as much as possible; that Miss Rush had insisted, too; that they were so good to her; that everything was coming along fine.

Longing all the time to confide in someone, and yet not daring. Val, she was ashamed to have him know, loving him as she did. Besides he would know soon enough. She could hardly bear to think of his knowing.

Dr. Pierce. She was ashamed, too, to have him know, and yet he would know soon, the same as Va..

Lally so gay, Lally so happy. If she could only stay happy! Lally would have to know some day, but Brenda prayed every night that she wouldn't know until she was walking, if it could be kept from her that long!

There was the "bargain" always foremost in her mind. What Brady had meant by "bargain." Did he mean that if she found Walter for him, set him on the trail where he could arrest Walter, she would go free? Absolutely free? Or did he mean that he would simply make things lighter for her, temper the charges which would be put against her?

She repeated over and over again his words about the "bargain," for she remembered every word. Sometimes, she went to bed at night saying them to herself, and woke up in the morning still saying them. They were so ambiguous and she hadn't dared ask him to explain any further. He wouldn't have anyway, she decided. She had to admit that the purport of his words were "You do this, and I'll try to do that, but I make no definite promises, although you must carry out the terms of our bargain in good faith, and exactly as I've outlined them." A one-sided bargain at most, but she didn't deserve more.

She never went to the Tower Building, nor to Ethel's apartment. She didn't know what had happened to the office, or to the clothes and furs which were left in Ethel's apartment. When she had left with Brady, she had left there the wardrobe which the Jason Enterprises had purchased for her, left it without regret.

She read the newspapers eagerly, every line of them, wondering each day if the story had been given to them, but she saw nothing of it, so she knew the papers didn't have the story. Brady wasn't ready to tell it yet. He probably wouldn't be ready, she thought, until Walter Jason was arrested. Then it would come, the whole scandal of it, and Val would know. She tried to tell herself that it would be the best thing in the world if Val did know. If she went up to him boldly and told him just what she had done, it would be the best thing for herself, and for Lally, even better than wearing Walter's ring. Then in the next breath, she said she couldn't do it. No matter what happened she couldn't do it.

Not Enough Nerve.

Sunday afternoon she knew he was in with Lally; the nurse at the door told her and she waited for him to come out. Waited outside the door so that she could speak to him, tell him; but when she saw the doorknob move, and felt in her heart that his hand was moving it, she ran down the hall and out of sight.

That night again, when she was at home, she walked the floor for a long time, getting more courage together to go upstairs to tell him. He was there. She heard him come in, and at 11:30 she knew he wasn't asleep yet, because she could look up between Lally's morning glory vines and see the light shining in his living-room window.

Twice she took the passbook with Lally's name on it—the book about which she had told Tim Brady nothing, although she had confessed everything else—and got as far as the stairs. Twice she came back, her nerve gone, without having ascended one step. The mere sight of the stairs had sent her back.

"All you have to say, Brenda," she argued with herself, "is, 'Val, I'm in trouble, my own doing, of course, and somebody will have to see that Lally is all right if I go to jail. I thought you might. Here's her passbook, and I'll arrange a power of attorney for you tomorrow.'"

That would settle his love for her, that would settle her anxiety about Lally, if she could do it.

At midnight, she took up the passbook once more, and went out of the flat. She got up the stairs and stood at his door, but although her finger was on the bell she couldn't press it.

"In the morning, I'll do it," she whispered as she found the stairs and stumbled down. "It'll be easier then."

In the morning, however, it wasn't easier and she didn't do it. Instead, she took the pass book to the hospital with her, and when Dr. Pierce came in to see Lally about 11 o'clock she met him in the hall. To him she made the speech she had been rehearsing for Val.

"What kind of trouble, Brenda?" he asked.

"I can't tell you yet, but you'll know soon. I simply want Lally to be protected, that's why I'm giving you this book." The utterance of the words lifted a great load from her shoulders. She felt infinitely better as she looked up to him.

He took the book, and slipped it in his pocket. "Of course, I'll do what I can, and you don't have to worry about Lally. Dr. Koenig has decided to operate in the morning."

Later when he looked at the book in his office he saw that to Laura Fayre's credit in the Security Bank was $3,000, and he whistled softly in surprise as he put away the little book in his own safe.

Neurotic Person Often Finds Aid In New Activity

Everyone longs to be happy and to find his lot in life cast in pleasant places. Ambition we must have, but not the sort that inhibits enjoyment of the present. We sympathize deeply with the one who appears to have much, but who, nevertheless, is always grumbling because he is a bit short of his goal.

When one develops a neurosis the very fact denotes an attempt to substitute for the realities of life something easy or at best more appealing. Fears, anxieties, prolonged periods of depression, doubts, etc., all characterize various phases of the condition. The individual may become an addict to self-pity and attempt to drown his sorrows with drugs or alcohol. Married life may be unsatisfactory even when linked with a normal partner. The victim may embrace an odd philosophy of life and regard himself as independent of the rules of society.

The remedy, of course, lies in finding something that will bring genuine satisfaction—a type of gratification that comes as the result of effort. Ofttimes the creative instinct may be aroused and frequently the patient may be encouraged to learn of things and affairs. The study of science offers in many cases a hopeful outlook and familiarizing oneself with the habits of living things—birds and plants—has saved many a queer person. The life history of mosses, ferns and wild flowers of a given locality will, if mastered, develop logical thinking.

If such a person can but recognize the symptoms, cure is more than half accomplished. He may then be able to smile at his weaknesses and discount them to their proper values. The reading of an elementary book on psychology, particularly if it contains a good chapter on the emotions, will often help him to understand his many vagaries. While mental exercise is the objective yet it must be begun gradually, otherwise introspection may be unduly emphasized and the patient may feel that he is utterly unable to rise above his fears.

Perhaps each of us is a bit queer. It is no sign of greatness, however, to parade the streets in a straw hat in the middle of winter or to don a bearskin on the hottest day in summer. Nevertheless, the world requires the fostering of individuality. All men need not wear blue ties, nor all women blue dresses, but somewhere in between bizarre actions on the one hand and drab unity on the other lies the middle ground of what we call normal behavior.

Sweden Solves House Drudgery Of Busy Women

HOMEMAKING with its attendant meal-planning, cooking, caring for children, dishwashing and dusting is still a millstone around the neck of the average working wife in this country. But in Sweden, where feminine wage-earners also have an enviable place in public life, women are being released from domestic duties.

So reports Fru Martha Silfverhjelm, of Stockholm, a board member of the National Swedish Housewives' Association and the only delegate from Sweden to the current conference of the Associated Country Women of the World.

Telling of a recent experiment in Stockholm, Fru Silfverhjelm described a huge apartment house where the servant problem has been solved on a central basis. "Meals for each family are cooked in one kitchen and served in each apartment," she said. "Later, an employe collects all dishes, which are washed in the central kitchen. Each morning the housewife makes her selection for all meals from the daily menu. Thus her cooking and serving problem is solved.

Although this arrangement has proved a boon to employed housewives since it went into effect a year ago, it has not met with unanimous approval, Fru Silfverhjelm said, "because many persons resent any change in established order and object on the score that this plan destroys homelife. Others point out that the family atmosphere is maintained by the serving of each meal in the apartment where only members of the family eat together; and that the rest and peace of mind the housewife gains through such an arrangement more than makes up for what is lost in having meals cooked, children cared for and laundry done by one staff of workers."

Believing the latter group is gaining more adherents, Fru Silfverhjelm thinks the year-old experiment in Stockholm presages the eventual domestic release of all Swedish housewives—not only those in urban communities but in rural districts as well.

"The only help rural women have had so far has come through the Swedish Housewives' Association, which provides a medium of exchange of practical hints between farmers' wives, seeks to convince the farmer that his wife needs his aid in negotiating her 16-hour working schedule, and establishes a bond between urban and rural women and an understanding between consumer and producer."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH, DIVORCEE, ET AL: And now for a defense of the male sex, which "Divorcee," fair column correspondent of June 1, finds so reprehensible. I am afraid I am the type of man she describes. A year or more ago I was cast unfettered once more upon the marriage mart of the District of Columbia. Prior to experiences which led up to that casting forth I had been schooled in the belief that girls were sweet, innocent creatures; delicate and charming; delectable and divine. It was a good belief, yes; but it contrived to keep my romance account practically a blank, white page.

* * * *

But having been, as I said, cast forth at an age similar to "Divorcee's," I dedicated myself to the task of finding another mate; of re-establishing the little home; of building another vine-covered cottage (ah, Mary, that misplaced "a" in cottage is accidental, but quite appropriate! What better noun could one supply for the domicile of one of your sex)? I was very bitter, very dejected and very uninterested in feminine companionship. But I started my quest. Out of 20 acquaintanceships with the opposite sex, I am convinced that two were decent women. As for myself, compared to Clark Gable I am a wash-out. I am short, homely, a poor dancer, know few risque stories. In short, I exert small appeal to the feminine nature.

* * * *

I find the whole species of working female either immoral or unmoral. Possibly that is woman's normal self. It creates no nausea in me when a girl frankly admits she is no good, but usually in the earlier part of an evening I have to listen to the same rigmarole that "Divorcee" has put forth. Then at some later date they introduce me to their child. "Darling, meet Mr. Drunko. Mumsie is going to ride with him this evening" (and probably get home in time to go to work). So Mr. Drunko has to smile and shake a small paw and try to keep from gagging the next time he kisses his attractive bum.

* * * *

Of course I drink. I get just as drunk as I can get. If it wasn't for liquor half the men would go nuts. As for church-going, what has it to offer? Spiritual solace? Sure. In a monastary. I am not interested in religion. No more than some woman would be interested in studying Diesel engines. If it has no appeal, am I to blame? Some creator fashioned my mind. If he wanted me to be devout, why didn't he stick some slight desire for devoutness into my chest?

Tsch, Tsch, Mary; or Miss Haworth; or Mrs. Haworth. I started out to write an answer you could publish for "Divorcee's" benefit, but I guess I'm getting a bit over the line.

Oh, well, what difference does it make? I can stand it. I wouldn't be a male if I didn't get a kick out of these amatory episodes. All I wonder is: If ever I do find a girl who is decent, will the ghosts of other women I have known rise up to suggest to me that she is probably just like all the rest of them the minute my back is turned. Tell "Divorcee" for me that men take their women as they find them. Tell her if one of them automatically insults her, not to be offended. He had no other precedent to go by.

ANONYMOUS.

Cynical Outburst.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Yours is a rather too embittered and cynical outburst, isn't it? Instead of defending yourself as an individual, or the male as a species, against the accusations of "Divorcee," you have tacitly admitted the truth of her case and at the same time shrugged the blame to the woman's shoulders. I had hoped for something a bit more dignified and constructive in the way of masculine comment on "Divorcee's" letter when I wrote in this column Monday: "It would be tremendously interesting to get the masculine reaction to (Divorcee's) point of view."

Regular Baby Schedule Aid To the Mother

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"I DON'T SEE how mothers have time to do anything but tend the baby when they have little babies."

Mrs. Brown's first child was 6 months' old, and Mrs. Brown spent all day and often part of the night on her job of being a mother. The work was never finished. By the time she had mixed the formula, the baby was ready for his next meal, and then cereal must be prepared and vegetables pureed and diapers washed, and so it went from morning until night.

If, however, all the babies absorbed so much time, the work of the world would never get done. Mrs. Brown did not know how to organize her work and budget her time. It never occurred to her that a regular schedule is a time saver.

To do the same thing at the same time and in the same way ends by making it automatic. It requires no thought, and after a while, no effort. There are a certain number of things which must be done for a baby every day, but in time they can be done almost unconsciously.

One thing is certain, the mother of a little baby cannot sleep late, unless, of course, she has a nurse. She should be able to mix his formula, wash his clothes, and plan and partially prepare his luncheon before she bathes the baby, besides making the beds and washing up the breakfast dishes, if she has her own work to do.

By the time the baby has had his bath at 10 a. m., half of the day's work should and could be finished.

Mary Brahany Becomes Bride Of E. H. Lloyd

Miss Mary Jane Brahany, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Brahany, was married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon to Mr. Edmund H. Lloyd, son of Dr. and Mrs. Bolivar J. Lloyd, of Washington. The ceremony took place in St. Matthew's Church, the Rev. Joseph M. Moran, rector of St. Thomas Apostle Church, officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin with a long train and a silk tulle veil with a coronet of seed pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Brush, Miss Betty Myers and Miss Shirley Browning, all of Washington; Miss Dorothy Emerson, of Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Beverly Kurtzmann, of Maplewood, N. J., and Miss Betty Wyllis Stone, of Clarendon, Va. They were dressed alike in gowns of hydrangea-blue silk organza, and large eggshell picture hats of horse-hair, with slippers and gloves to match.

Mr. Bolivar J. Lloyd, jr., was his brother's best man. The ushers were Mr. Roger M. Lloyd, Dr. Charles E. Coulon, Mr. Blanchard K. Slaughter, Mr. Frederick E. Sessions, Mr. Robert L. Keith and Mr. James M. Bailey.

Following the ceremony, there was a reception at the Shoreham, after which the couple left for New York to sail for Nassau and Havana. They will be at home after June 21 at 2601 Calvert street.

The bride attended Duke University, and the bridegroom was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Rippon Lodge Fete To Be Held Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis Will Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, assisted by Miss Luella P. Chase, regent, and members of the Susan Riviere Hetzel Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will entertain at a garden party Sunday, from 3 to 7, at their home, Rippon Lodge, near Mount Vernon.

Mr. Ellis will talk at 4:30 in the colonial garden of Rippon Lodge on the history of the eighteenth century estate. Built by Richard Blackburn, of Rippon, England; inherited by Judge Bushrod Washington and later by John Augustine Washington, it has always been the scene of much hospitality. The famous old Potomac path, formerly a part of Kings highway, runs for 3 miles on Rippon Lodge ground and has been well preserved.

The guests of honor and officers of the chapter will be introduced by Miss Chase. Proceeds of the party will go toward the patriotic work of the chapter.

3 Weddings Hold Interest Tomorrow

Miss Beal, Miss Lippert and Miss Cox to Marry.

Three weddings of interest in naval and resident circles of Washington society are scheduled to take place tomorrow.

Miss Elizabeth Ashby Beal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Beal, and Mr. Frank Cleland Devlin, of Duluth, Minn., will be married at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the home of the bride. The Rev. Herbert Scott Smith, rector of St. Margaret's Church, will perform the ceremony, and the bride's sister, Miss Anne Ashby Beal, will be her only attendant.

Miss Katherine Lippert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Arthur Lippert, whose marriage to Ensign Irving Stahl Presler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Logan Presler, of Washington, will take place tomorrow in the chapel of the Naval Academy, has selected Miss Elizabeth Hussy as her only attendant.

Mr. John N. Ditzler, of Washington, will be best man.

Miss Adaline Peter Cox, whose engagement to Mr. Herbert Wood Walker, son of Mrs. Nina Chinn Walker, of Washington, was announced in April, will be married tomorrow at 4 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Nettelton Cox, in Louisville, Ky. Mr. Herndon Phillips, of Washington, will be best man. Only members of the immediate families will be present at the ceremony.

Mr. Louis Livingston Weds Miss Stevens

Miss Marietta Stevens, of Chicago, and Mr. Louis Livingston, formerly of Washington, were married here yesterday by the Rev. Oliver J. Hart of St. John's Episcopal Church. Only members of the two families and a few close friends were present. Following the ceremony the couple left for Chicago and will later sail for an extended trip to Europe.

Mrs. Mary Borroughs Is Married to Mr. Ward

The marriage of Mrs. Mary Peters Burroughs, daughter of Mr. John C. Peters, and Mr. William Frederick Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ward, was solemnized Wednesday evening at the Petworth Baptist Church, with the Rev. H. J. Smith officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Harry Peters, was attended by Mrs. R. Bruce Keiner and Mr. Keiner served as best man.

After a honeymoon in Atlantic City the young couple will be at home at 4821 Third street.

D. A. R. Entertains.

Benjamin Williams Weds Charlotte Brink

Miss Charlotte Brink, daughter of Hobart D. Brink, of Scranton, Pa., who has made her home with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Overacker, in Takoma Park, Md., was married at 8:30 last night to Mr. Benjamin Williams, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs Earle Williams, of San Fernando, Calif.

The ceremony was at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Charles Briscoe, 210 Buffalo avenue, Takoma Park, Md., the Rev. Edward Carey, of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, officiating. Miss Joanne Bollman was the only attendant. A reception followed.

Hospital Alumnae Plan To Sponsor Cotton Ball

A cotton ball will be given under auspices of the Providence Hospital Alumnae Association June 15, at Wardman Park Hotel in the main ballroom. The proceeds are to be used for installation of new lighting equipment in the operating suite.

The chairman of the dance, Miss Dorothy Farrin, is being assisted by Miss Catherine O'Donnell, Miss Mary Haas, Mrs. Frank Shea and Mrs. Ralph Carbo.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

At the commencement exercises of Shattuck Military School at Faribault, Minn., yesterday morning, one of the most interested spectators was the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Washington, who watched his eldest grandson, Clyde Palmer Jaffray, jr., graduate cum laude.

The lad is the son of Mrs. Mary Jaffray, daughter of the Bishop and Mrs. Freeman, who died in 1923, shortly before her father was consecrated. Among the students at the Shattuck also is Bishop Freeman's other grandson, James Edward Freeman Jaffray, named for his grandfather. The younger brother will graduate from Shattuck next year.

Due to the illness of Mrs. Freeman she was unable to accompany the Bishop to the graduation of their grandson.

Bishop Freeman will return to Washington tomorrow morning. If Mrs. Freeman continues to improve they expect to leave about June 12 for their summer home at Sorrento, Me., where they have spent the summer season for a number of years.

Mrs. Raymond L. Wolven, wife of Canon Wolven, of the Cathedral staff and daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Freeman, will join them in Sorrento later in the summer.

Diplomatic Dilemmas.

His difficulties started on the train to Washington from Philadelphia, where he attended the Davis Cup tennis preliminaries. On the night trip back to the Capital he suddenly awoke, found the train at the station, and himself alone in the car. He seized his bags, rushed out and jumped into a taxi, giving the address of the chancery to the driver. An expression of bewilderment crossed the driver's face.

"There's no such address here," he said. "This is Baltimore."

Upon his arrival in the Capital several hours behind schedule, Senor Padilla was so busy saying good-by to his friends that he put off packing until the last minute. He had no time to fold and pack his clothes, so threw them into his bags and he and his friends stood on the lids until they succeeded in shutting them. Things were still left over, and with coats and suits flung across his arm and barely enough time catch the train, Senor Padilla hopped into a cab and left for a three-month vacation in Spain.

Mrs. Bacon Off for Ohio.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon, of New York, who is a delegate from New York to the Republican National Convention in Cleveland, will leave today for Ohio. Mrs. Bacon also is chairman of the Republican women of the Empire State, and for the past few months has traveled extensively there in the interests of the party and organizing the women for the campaign.

Mrs. Bacon writes on political questions for both newspapers and party journals. When political activities of the fall are over she no doubt will resume work on her projected history of the famous house in Washington occupied by Representative Bacon and their family, once the home of Chief Justice John Marshall, Chief Justice Melville H. Fuller and many other figures in American history.

Children Plan 'Elastic' Show

Lines Vary, Plot Unknown, Cat Runs Off; but the Play Will Go On.

By Dudley Harmon.

Poison ivy, the sudden departure of a Siamese cat, an important member of the cast, and the temporary withdrawal of a little girl member, who "went home mad," failed to discourage Barbara Caldwell, 9-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Caldwell, and the group of children under her who are presenting "The Half of the Whole" tomorrow afternoon at the Turkish Embassy.

"Proceeds will go to pay expenses" read the tickets; for mothers and fathers predicted when the project was launched it probably would bring only enough to cover the cost of production. However, the performance is really being given for the benefit of the Thrift Shop, the Children's Hospital and the Stephen Foster Memorial and the advance sale of tickets indicates the children will have funds left over to aid the charities.

The plot is still a secret among the members of the cast and, although the dialogue is elastic, changing from day to day with the changing moods of the young actors, the general idea remains the same. The subject concerns poor people, and the children will wear ragged costumes. Barbara Caldwell conceived the idea of buying these from the Thrift Shop, and so even the expenses of the production will contribute to the cause.

Eloise Richberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, the member who was suffering from poison ivy, has returned to the cast.

The young troupers were worried when the Caldwell's Siamese cat, who has an important role in the drama, disappeared. Fortunately, however, he turned up again, and now the players are taking no chances. They are keeping him locked up in a room until the day of the performance.

If the play meets with success, the children plan to form a little stock company of their own and continue to write, produce, and act in other dramas. The other members of the cast include Selma Ertegun, daughter of the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun; Virginia Thurston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Thurston, Joey Lou Berliner, and Lorel Horning.

Mrs. Borden Sees Daughter Given Diploma

Motors to Madeira School, Her Alma Mater, for Closing Exercises.

Mrs. William Ayres Borden yesterday motored over the old toll road to the Madeira School, near Greenway, Va., to see her daughter, Miss Dorothy Borden, receive a diploma from Mrs. Lucy Madeira Wing, from whom Mrs. Borden received hers years ago. The school was then located in Washington. Mrs. Borden always has been interested in Madeira and has served as secretary of the Washington Alumnae Association.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Borden, with their daughter, are planning to leave Washington soon for their summer home near Lake Sunapee, N. H. They will not return for some time, unless as visitors, for they expect to reside in Springfield, Mass., where Col. Borden has been transferred.

Miss Borden is planning to attend Smith College and will be near enough to her parents' new home to spend many week-ends with them.

Miss Clara Sasscer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Harold Sasscer, who also was graduated from the Madeira School, has made tentative plans for the summer and fall which include a trip to Mexico with her mother and entrance in Bryn Mahr in the fall. A classmate, Miss Alice Leake, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Leake, in September will enter Smith College, the alma mater of her mother and sister.

Miss Kirk's Plans.

Miss Marian Kirk, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Allan G. Kirk, will enter Bryn Mawr after spending the summer with her parents at Black Point, Conn. Commander Kirk will leave, the middle of the summer for his new post on the West Coast and will be joined there in the fall by Mrs. Kirk.

Miss Kristi Putnam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Putnam, who also received her diploma from the Madeira School yesterday, likewise plans to go to Bryn Mawr in the fall.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Leckie, of Columbus, Ohio, attended the graduation exercises at the Madeira School yesterday, when their daughter, Miss Lean Leckie, received her diploma. She will accompany them to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for a short stay before returning to their home.

Mrs. Harry A. McBride, wife of the Assistant to the Secretary of State, will entertain at luncheon today in honor of the graduating class and faculty of Friends School at her apartment in Tilden Gardens. Robert McBride, president of the graduating class, which will receive diplomas this evening, plans to attend Princeton University this fall.

Mrs. Greenway to Speak.

Representative Isabella Greenway will address the members of the Friends School graduating class tonight in the gymnasium of the school on Wisconsin avenue. Among the graduates will be Miss Eleanor Browning Barton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Barton, who has been interested in hockey and the dramatic club and plans to attend Swarthmore in the fall; Richard S. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Smith, who will go to Dartmouth and, from his record at Friends, will probably distinguish himself in athletics; Minor Giles Atwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, who will attend Amherst; Hugh Scott Duncan, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Duncan, who plans to go to Stanford; James H. Forsythe, jr., and Miss Beatrice Gibson, who will go to William and Mary College; Miss Margaret Furlow and Miss Victoria Kuhn, who plan to attend George Washington University; John Lewis Gwynn, son of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Gwynn, and William Gray Schultz, son of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Hood Shultz, who will go to Georgetown University; Miss Elisabeth Prescott Lawton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edwin Lawton and Miss Rita Abigail Scheffler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Scheffler, will attend American University.

Miss Mary Finch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Finch, of Chevy Chase, Md., who will be graduated with honorable mention from Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., June 15, received her preparatory training at Holy Cross Academy. Miss Finch was awarded a medal offered by the Society of Spanish Teachers in America for excellence in Spanish.

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Liebman were entertained at dinner last evening at Woodmont Country Club, in celebration of their twentieth wedding anniversary. Preceding the dinner Mr. and Mrs. Liebman were hosts to the 40 in the party at cocktails at their apartment at Woodley Park Towers.

For Love or Money

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT.

BRENDA didn't know which was the worse—hearing the telephone ring or looking in the mail box. "It's Walter," she said to herself every time she was at home and the phone rang. "It's Walter——" Wondering what she would say to him, how she could find out where he was. But it wasn't Walter. It never was Walter.

Every time she looked in the mail box it was with the same hope, and she looked into it a dozen times a day. First thing in the morning, she raced downstairs, knowing the mail wouldn't be there yet, but thinking there might be some message for her, dropped in the box during the night. Then, she looked again before she went to the hospital, and after she came home from the hospital at 2 o'clock to see what was there, because that was the time the afternoon mail was delivered, and always when she returned around 9:30 at night.

But there was no phone call, no letter, no telegram. Walter's flowers, however, were coming each day to the Corwin, for the order had apparently been paid for in advance. Red roses. She took these every morning to Lally.

At 12 sharp, she called Main 2121, trembling as she dialed the number, shaking when she got her connection. The first day, which was Friday, Brady answered himself. When she told him who she was, he asked, "Anything new?" And when she said there wasn't he hung up without a goodby. Saturday, a strange voice answered, but there was no message from Brady. Sunday, the same voice replied, and there still was no message.

Wretched.

There was the wrench every time she faced Lally, and Lally's eyes smiled their greeting, and Lally's lips touched hers. Sometimes, she stood outside the door of 402 for a long time before she had the courage to enter, to bring a smile to her own lips.

And the lies she had to tell her sister, because she was spending more time than usual with her. She told that Walter had insisted she take a vacation until after the operation so she could be at the hospital as much as possible; that Miss Rush had insisted, too; that they were so good to her; that everything was coming along fine.

Longing all the time to confide in someone, and yet not daring. Val, she was ashamed to have him know, loving him as she did. Besides he would know soon enough. She could hardly bear to think of his knowing.

Dr. Pierce. She was ashamed, too, to have him know, and yet he would know soon, the same as Va..

Lally so gay, Lally so happy. If she could only stay happy! Lally would have to know some day, but Brenda prayed every night that she wouldn't know until she was walking, if it could be kept from her that long!

There was the "bargain" always foremost in her mind. What Brady had meant by "bargain." Did he mean that if she found Walter for him, set him on the trail where he could arrest Walter, she would go free? Absolutely free? Or did he mean that he would simply make things lighter for her, temper the charges which would be put against her?

She repeated over and over again his words about the "bargain," for she remembered every word. Sometimes, she went to bed at night saying them to herself, and woke up in the morning still saying them. They were so ambiguous and she hadn't dared ask him to explain any further. He wouldn't have anyway, she decided. She had to admit that the purport of his words were "You do this, and I'll try to do that, but I make no definite promises, although you must carry out the terms of our bargain in good faith, and exactly as I've outlined them." A one-sided bargain at most, but she didn't deserve more.

She never went to the Tower Building, nor to Ethel's apartment. She didn't know what had happened to the office, or to the clothes and furs which were left in Ethel's apartment. When she had left with Brady, she had left there the wardrobe which the Jason Enterprises had purchased for her, left it without regret.

She read the newspapers eagerly, every line of them, wondering each day if the story had been given to them, but she saw nothing of it, so she knew the papers didn't have the story. Brady wasn't ready to tell it yet. He probably wouldn't be ready, she thought, until Walter Jason was arrested. Then it would come, the whole scandal of it, and Val would know. She tried to tell herself that it would be the best thing in the world if Val did know. If she went up to him boldly and told him just what she had done, it would be the best thing for herself, and for Lally, even better than wearing Walter's ring. Then in the next breath, she said she couldn't do it. No matter what happened she couldn't do it.

Not Enough Nerve.

Sunday afternoon she knew he was in with Lally; the nurse at the door told her and she waited for him to come out. Waited outside the door so that she could speak to him, tell him; but when she saw the doorknob move, and felt in her heart that his hand was moving it, she ran down the hall and out of sight.

That night again, when she was at home, she walked the floor for a long time, getting more courage together to go upstairs to tell him. He was there. She heard him come in, and at 11:30 she knew he wasn't asleep yet, because she could look up between Lally's morning glory vines and see the light shining in his living-room window.

Twice she took the passbook with Lally's name on it—the book about which she had told Tim Brady nothing, although she had confessed everything else—and got as far as the stairs. Twice she came back, her nerve gone, without having ascended one step. The mere sight of the stairs had sent her back.

"All you have to say, Brenda," she argued with herself, "is, 'Val, I'm in trouble, my own doing, of course, and somebody will have to see that Lally is all right if I go to jail. I thought you might. Here's her passbook, and I'll arrange a power of attorney for you tomorrow.'"

That would settle his love for her, that would settle her anxiety about Lally, if she could do it.

At midnight, she took up the passbook once more, and went out of the flat. She got up the stairs and stood at his door, but although her finger was on the bell she couldn't press it.

"In the morning, I'll do it," she whispered as she found the stairs and stumbled down. "It'll be easier then."

In the morning, however, it wasn't easier and she didn't do it. Instead, she took the pass book to the hospital with her, and when Dr. Pierce came in to see Lally about 11 o'clock she met him in the hall. To him she made the speech she had been rehearsing for Val.

"What kind of trouble, Brenda?" he asked.

"I can't tell you yet, but you'll know soon. I simply want Lally to be protected, that's why I'm giving you this book." The utterance of the words lifted a great load from her shoulders. She felt infinitely better as she looked up to him.

He took the book, and slipped it in his pocket. "Of course, I'll do what I can, and you don't have to worry about Lally. Dr. Koenig has decided to operate in the morning."

Later when he looked at the book in his office he saw that to Laura Fayre's credit in the Security Bank was $3,000, and he whistled softly in surprise as he put away the little book in his own safe.

Neurotic Person Often Finds Aid In New Activity

Everyone longs to be happy and to find his lot in life cast in pleasant places. Ambition we must have, but not the sort that inhibits enjoyment of the present. We sympathize deeply with the one who appears to have much, but who, nevertheless, is always grumbling because he is a bit short of his goal.

When one develops a neurosis the very fact denotes an attempt to substitute for the realities of life something easy or at best more appealing. Fears, anxieties, prolonged periods of depression, doubts, etc., all characterize various phases of the condition. The individual may become an addict to self-pity and attempt to drown his sorrows with drugs or alcohol. Married life may be unsatisfactory even when linked with a normal partner. The victim may embrace an odd philosophy of life and regard himself as independent of the rules of society.

The remedy, of course, lies in finding something that will bring genuine satisfaction—a type of gratification that comes as the result of effort. Ofttimes the creative instinct may be aroused and frequently the patient may be encouraged to learn of things and affairs. The study of science offers in many cases a hopeful outlook and familiarizing oneself with the habits of living things—birds and plants—has saved many a queer person. The life history of mosses, ferns and wild flowers of a given locality will, if mastered, develop logical thinking.

If such a person can but recognize the symptoms, cure is more than half accomplished. He may then be able to smile at his weaknesses and discount them to their proper values. The reading of an elementary book on psychology, particularly if it contains a good chapter on the emotions, will often help him to understand his many vagaries. While mental exercise is the objective yet it must be begun gradually, otherwise introspection may be unduly emphasized and the patient may feel that he is utterly unable to rise above his fears.

Perhaps each of us is a bit queer. It is no sign of greatness, however, to parade the streets in a straw hat in the middle of winter or to don a bearskin on the hottest day in summer. Nevertheless, the world requires the fostering of individuality. All men need not wear blue ties, nor all women blue dresses, but somewhere in between bizarre actions on the one hand and drab unity on the other lies the middle ground of what we call normal behavior.

For Fewer Cooks

MRS. MARTHA SILFVERHJELM.

Sweden Solves House Drudgery Of Busy Women

HOMEMAKING with its attendant meal-planning, cooking, caring for children, dishwashing and dusting is still a millstone around the neck of the average working wife in this country. But in Sweden, where feminine wage-earners also have an enviable place in public life, women are being released from domestic duties.

So reports Fru Martha Silfverhjelm, of Stockholm, a board member of the National Swedish Housewives' Association and the only delegate from Sweden to the current conference of the Associated Country Women of the World.

Telling of a recent experiment in Stockholm, Fru Silfverhjelm described a huge apartment house where the servant problem has been solved on a central basis. "Meals for each family are cooked in one kitchen and served in each apartment," she said. "Later, an employe collects all dishes, which are washed in the central kitchen. Each morning the housewife makes her selection for all meals from the daily menu. Thus her cooking and serving problem is solved.

Although this arrangement has proved a boon to employed housewives since it went into effect a year ago, it has not met with unanimous approval, Fru Silfverhjelm said, "because many persons resent any change in established order and object on the score that this plan destroys homelife. Others point out that the family atmosphere is maintained by the serving of each meal in the apartment where only members of the family eat together; and that the rest and peace of mind the housewife gains through such an arrangement more than makes up for what is lost in having meals cooked, children cared for and laundry done by one staff of workers."

Believing the latter group is gaining more adherents, Fru Silfverhjelm thinks the year-old experiment in Stockholm presages the eventual domestic release of all Swedish housewives—not only those in urban communities but in rural districts as well.

"The only help rural women have had so far has come through the Swedish Housewives' Association, which provides a medium of exchange of practical hints between farmers' wives, seeks to convince the farmer that his wife needs his aid in negotiating her 16-hour working schedule, and establishes a bond between urban and rural women and an understanding between consumer and producer."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH, DIVORCEE, ET AL: And now for a defense of the male sex, which "Divorcee," fair column correspondent of June 1, finds so reprehensible. I am afraid I am the type of man she describes. A year or more ago I was cast unfettered once more upon the marriage mart of the District of Columbia. Prior to experiences which led up to that casting forth I had been schooled in the belief that girls were sweet, innocent creatures; delicate and charming; delectable and divine. It was a good belief, yes; but it contrived to keep my romance account practically a blank, white page.

* * * *

But having been, as I said, cast forth at an age similar to "Divorcee's," I dedicated myself to the task of finding another mate; of re-establishing the little home; of building another vine-covered cottage (ah, Mary, that misplaced "a" in cottage is accidental, but quite appropriate! What better noun could one supply for the domicile of one of your sex)? I was very bitter, very dejected and very uninterested in feminine companionship. But I started my quest. Out of 20 acquaintanceships with the opposite sex, I am convinced that two were decent women. As for myself, compared to Clark Gable I am a wash-out. I am short, homely, a poor dancer, know few risque stories. In short, I exert small appeal to the feminine nature.

* * * *

I find the whole species of working female either immoral or unmoral. Possibly that is woman's normal self. It creates no nausea in me when a girl frankly admits she is no good, but usually in the earlier part of an evening I have to listen to the same rigmarole that "Divorcee" has put forth. Then at some later date they introduce me to their child. "Darling, meet Mr. Drunko. Mumsie is going to ride with him this evening" (and probably get home in time to go to work). So Mr. Drunko has to smile and shake a small paw and try to keep from gagging the next time he kisses his attractive bum.

* * * *

Of course I drink. I get just as drunk as I can get. If it wasn't for liquor half the men would go nuts. As for church-going, what has it to offer? Spiritual solace? Sure. In a monastary. I am not interested in religion. No more than some woman would be interested in studying Diesel engines. If it has no appeal, am I to blame? Some creator fashioned my mind. If he wanted me to be devout, why didn't he stick some slight desire for devoutness into my chest?

Tsch, Tsch, Mary; or Miss Haworth; or Mrs. Haworth. I started out to write an answer you could publish for "Divorcee's" benefit, but I guess I'm getting a bit over the line.

Oh, well, what difference does it make? I can stand it. I wouldn't be a male if I didn't get a kick out of these amatory episodes. All I wonder is: If ever I do find a girl who is decent, will the ghosts of other women I have known rise up to suggest to me that she is probably just like all the rest of them the minute my back is turned. Tell "Divorcee" for me that men take their women as they find them. Tell her if one of them automatically insults her, not to be offended. He had no other precedent to go by.

ANONYMOUS.

* * * *

Cynical Outburst.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Yours is a rather too embittered and cynical outburst, isn't it? Instead of defending yourself as an individual, or the male as a species, against the accusations of "Divorcee," you have tacitly admitted the truth of her case and at the same time shrugged the blame to the woman's shoulders. I had hoped for something a bit more dignified and constructive in the way of masculine comment on "Divorcee's" letter when I wrote in this column Monday: "It would be tremendously interesting to get the masculine reaction to (Divorcee's) point of view."

Regular Baby Schedule Aid To the Mother

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"I DON'T SEE how mothers have time to do anything but tend the baby when they have little babies."

Mrs. Brown's first child was 6 months' old, and Mrs. Brown spent all day and often part of the night on her job of being a mother. The work was never finished. By the time she had mixed the formula, the baby was ready for his next meal, and then cereal must be prepared and vegetables pureed and diapers washed, and so it went from morning until night.

If, however, all the babies absorbed so much time, the work of the world would never get done. Mrs. Brown did not know how to organize her work and budget her time. It never occurred to her that a regular schedule is a time saver.

To do the same thing at the same time and in the same way ends by making it automatic. It requires no thought, and after a while, no effort. There are a certain number of things which must be done for a baby every day, but in time they can be done almost unconsciously.

One thing is certain, the mother of a little baby cannot sleep late, unless, of course, she has a nurse. She should be able to mix his formula, wash his clothes, and plan and partially prepare his luncheon before she bathes the baby, besides making the beds and washing up the breakfast dishes, if she has her own work to do.

By the time the baby has had his bath at 10 a. m., half of the day's work should and could be finished.

Car Permits Lost by 52 During May

Charges of Operating While Intoxicated Cause Action.

2 Revoked Over Failure to Pay Judgments in Accidents.

Fifty persons lost their driver's permits during the month of May for driving while intoxicated. Two others lost permits and license plates for failure to meet court judgments from accidents at which they were deemed at fault.

In all 50 cases of driving while intoxicated permits were revoked. In those cases where the person was operating with a District permit he was blacklisted. In all cases where the car owner was the operator the tags were revoked until such time as the owner files insurance in the amount of $11,000.

The action in all cases was taken by the division of financial responsibility of the Traffic Department.

The two who lost permits and tags for failure to meet a judgment were Jack H. McCarthy, of 425 D street southeast, and John R. Mose, of 1460 Irving street northwest.

Those blacklisted for driving while intoxicated follow:

Milton F. McCormick, Capitol Heights, Md.; Tyler Smith, 1150 Nineteenth street northeast; A. H. Wood, Fort Belvoir, Va., and J. F. Wood, whose address was given as a houseboat at the foot of East Capitol street.

Those who lost permits or permits and license plates follow:

Woman Freed In Car Death of Brookhart Boy

Mrs. Ralph Is Exonerated; Motorman Absolved in Trolley Accident.

The death of 3-year-old William W. Brookhart, grandson of former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, was declared accidental yesterday by a coroner's jury, which exonerated Mrs. Dorothy W. Ralph, of 4565 Cathedral avenue northwest, driver of the automobile that struck the boy.

In a second inquest the jury absolved Benjamin F. Hale, 29, of 3603 Thirteenth street northwest, of all blame in the death of Ernest Easley, 54, of 1359 L street southeast. Easley was killed Tuesday when he was struck by a street car of which Hale was the motorman.

Mrs. Brookhart was not at the inquest, but Mrs. Ralph sat through the hearing as successive witnesses re-enacted the tragedy with toy automobiles.

The Brookhart boy was being taken home by his mother from a private kindergarten in the 3200 block of Highland place. As they were leaving school, Mrs. Brookhart turned to talk to one of the teachers, and the boy ran out into the street.

Pushing a toy automobile on a table, two school teachers who saw the accident, showed how Mrs. Ralph's automobile had been pulling away at a "crawling" pace from another parked in front, when the boy, "running diagonally to the right," was hit by the automobile. Because of the height of her car and the angle at which the boy was running, it was brought out, Mrs. Ralph may not have been able to see the boy until too late.

At the second inquest, testimony showed that because of a high hedge bordering the trolley-car tracks the motorman did not see Easley until he stepped out of a walk into the car.

John Cappallo, 6, of 432 New Jersey avenue, was struck by a hit-and-run driver yesterday when he ran into the street in front of his home. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he was treated for cuts and bruises.

Girl Rides Running Board of Purse Thief's Car.

A daring ride on the running board of an automobile traveling 30 miles an hour availed Miss Anna Murphy nothing but a good description of the two colored men who stole her purse early yesterday. The pair escaped with her $1 and street car pass.

Miss Murphy, returning from a downtown movie, was about to enter the door of her home at 1948 Calvert street northwest when a colored man, about 18 years old, snatched her pocketbook and jumped into an auto standing at the curb. Refusing to be intimidated, the girl leaped to the running board as the car sped away with a second man at the wheel.

After racing about three blocks, in the course of which several sharp turns were made, the machine slowed down and Miss Murphy was pushed to the sidewalk.

Clinking of Glass, Suspicious Boxes Trip Rum Suspect

Policeman William E. McEwen, vice squad member, hardly could believe his eyes or his ears yesterday when he noticed a man piling unlabeled cartons, the kind liquor was carried in during prohibition days, on the sidewalk in the 100 block Pierce street northwest.

And not only did this look suspicious to McEwen, but when the crates were moved the familiar clink of glass was heard.

Upon investigating, McEwen found ten cases containing 120 half-gallon jars of illicit liquor in the rear of the car and on the sidewalk.

Early yesterday a man was arrested as he drove across the Eleventh Street Bridge southeast. Sergt. George C. Deyoe, of the vice squad, said 140 quarts of untaxed liquor were found in the car.

2 More Unions Support Strike Of Mechanics

Iron Workers and Bakery Drivers Contribute to Walkout Fund.

The Bakery Drivers' Union and the Structural Iron Workers' Union at meetings last night voted to support the striking automobile mechanics in the city. Both are contributing money to the strikers.

News of the action of the two unions was brought by delegates to a meeting of the mechanics at the Sons of Jonadab Hall. Further support was given the strikers in a letter from the Building Trades Council.

This council, made up of delegates from all the local building trade unions, assured the strikers of its moral backing and sent a $10 contribution. The letter also said that the local unions affiliated with the council would contribute liberally.

The most substantial support the automobile mechanics have received in their four-week-old strike came Wednesday night when Lodge No. 174, International Association of Machinists, contributed $1,000 and promised further weekly contributions.

At their meeting last night the mechanics elected Oliver N. Garrison, their business agent, as delegate to the national convention of the International Order of Machinists, to be held at Milwaukee in September.

Well Will Supplement St. Elizabeths Water

The water supply of St. Elizabeths Hospital is to be supplemented by a new well, expected to supply more than 2,000,000 gallons of filtered water a day, it was disclosed yesterday.

Some time ago the hospital abandoned the use of several wells which had been its principal source of water. Since then the hospital has been depending on the District water system.

Musicians Plan Series of Concerts

Thomas J. Mullikin, chairman of the National Symphony Orchestra members' committee, started yesterday to lay plans for a summer concert series to be sponsored by the musicians themselves.

Mullikin said he had an "informal" conference with C. Marshall Finnan, parks director, to discuss plans for securing the Watergate site. No conclusions were reached at the conference.

The orchestra has several "prospects" of financial backing, according to Mullikin. He said he felt confident that concerts would be held here this summer.

Drive Gains For Uniform Work Hours

Civil Service Body Gives Approval to Report of Committee.

Hopes of Federal and District employes for uniform regulations on hours of labor yesterday were brought one step closer to realization by the Civil Service Commission's action in approving the report of its committee on hours of duty and overtime.

The report, compiled at the request of Congress, was attached to a letter forwarded by the commission to heads of all Government departments, independent establishments and Government corporations.

Schedules for three classes of employes were drawn up in the report, which the commission urged officials to apply to their departments as a basis for practical operation. A particular request was made for reports on all overtime found necessary after the schedules are applied.

Report Not Mandatory.

The report is not mandatory. However, it pointed out, "explanations for nonconformity should be forthcoming and be readily accessible to Congress."

The regulations are to go into effect June 14.

While employes throughout the Government offices were found to be working under widely contrasting conditions and schedules, the committee, according to Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, the committee's chairman, reached the conclusion "that the various occupations involved may properly have their hours of duty standardized in three schedules."

The three groups, Donovan said, should be applicable to all employes with few exceptions.

Group one, for which is designated a "duty of seven hours per day with 39 hours per week," includes: office workers in general, foreign service employes, professional, scientific and technical employes, office messengers and office laborers, administrative and staff employes in penal and correctional institutions and in hospitals, bank and similar examiners, investigational and inspectional employes.

In Group II, which calls for "duty of 8 hours per day with 40 or 44 hours per week, are professional scientific and technical employes and sub-professional employes, employed principally on outdoor work, custodial or maintenance employes, laborers employed in shops and on outdoor work, mechanical and crafts employes, employes engaged in the protection of life and property (except as stipulated in Group III).

A 44-Hour Week.

Group III, which stipulates "duty of an average of 8 hours per day or an average of 44 hours per week with the enforcement of this average spread over a three-month period," includes custodial maintenance and guard employes in penal and correctional institutions, employes on ships and floating craft, farm laborers, railroad employes, professional and sub-professional employes in hospitals, maintenance and custodial workers in hospitals.

Employes whose occupaion is not listed in the three groups are to be governed by the group to which the character of work most closely corresponds.

The committee recommended that over-time work be understood to cover all labor performed beyond the hours of duty required by department regulations issued in conformance with Section 2 of the Public No. 471 Act passed by Congress March 14, 1936.

Children of Evicted Family

Parents of Pat, Mary and Basil Harlow are searching for a home to replace the one from which they were evicted Wednesday.

Furniture of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Harlow remains on the sidewalk in front of the house from which they were evicted Wednesday.

Evicted Couple Tramps Streets Seeking $22.50-a-Month Home

Samuel Harlow and his wife, Eleanor, were tramping the streets yesterday in search of a home they could rent for $22.50 a month—the amount allowed by District relief officials.

The Harlow couple and their three children—Patrick, 5; Mary Ellen, 3, and Basil, 2—were evicted Wednesday from their home in the 300 block of Thirteenth street northeast.

Harlow says the first notice he was given of the eviction was the sight of his household furniture on the sidewalk. The furniture had been removed while the family was absent. His rent, he said, was paid until May 7.

Sending wife and children to the home of a friend, Harlow stayed all Wednesday night on the sidewalk in front of his home to guard their possessions. He spread linoleum mats over the furniture to protect it from the rain.

Although Harlow served in the Navy during the World War, he has already received as a loan half of the amount of his veteran's bonus. After the war he was employed by the Food Administration and since then has worked as a painter and at odd jobs.

Harlow applied for relief about ten days ago, when he saw he would be unable to pay his rent. He had never been on relief before, he said.

Late last night his search for a new home had been futile. His wife and family were still remaining with friends.

The three children were cheerful yesterday. Patrick and Mary Ellen were barefoot. Patrick's only apparent concern was a stubbed toe.

Police Bring 'Clairvoyant Bishop' Here

Miss Carver Is Charged With Plot to Avoid Paying D.C. Fee.

Ada Victorine Carver, "bishop" of the Washington Institute Church of Christ, was brought here from New York yesterday on a warrant charging her with "conspiracy to avoid payment of license."

She was the tenth person arrested by police in what they say was a conspiracy to avoid paying the local license fee of $250 required of all fortune tellers. Warrants have been issued for the arrest of others.

Those being arrested, police say, were members of Miss Carver's church, described as a spiritualist institution. They paid $1 for membership, police charge, and $50 for a diploma certifying each to be a "doctor of divinity."

Exemption Claimed.

Then, police say, they claimed exemption from the $250 fortune tellers license fee.

Miss Carver, who gave her age as 44 and her local residence as 3731 Warren street northwest, was arrested in a New York hotel on a warrant signed by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

She made the trip here in her own limousine, driven by her own chauffer. With her was Deputy Marshal Shirley Wyne, of New York, who arrested her, and Mrs. Wyne, a police matron.

The New York deputy marshal said that Miss Carver was indignant when she was placed in custody and voiced her indignation frequently on the journey to Washington.

Commissioner Turnage yesterday set Miss Carver's bond at $5,000. Early today she was still being held.

Arraignment Today.

She is scheduled to be arraigned before Turnage this morning.

Two other persons arrested yesterday charged with "conspiracy to avoid payment of license" were Mary Ellen Harrigan, 36, of 623 Seventh street northwest, and Abram Timothy Brewer, 34, of 1220 Seventh street northwest.

The complaining officer who signed the warrents for the arrest of Miss Carver and the others was Policeman John O. Patton. In his investigation, Patton "joined" the church. He spent several months learning the tenets and the ritual and, according to his superiors, was about to receive his diploma when he decided to launch the round-up.

Aimee McPherson Visit Postponed Till Autumn

Aimee Semple McPherson, the evangelist, will not appear in Washington until next autumn, her manager, Robert Hollinshead, announced yesterday.

Originally she was to have given a talk at Constitution Hall, May 27, and then her visit was postponed until Sunday. At the last moment her arrival was delayed again.

Runyan, Mangrum, Clark Get 69's; Tie for National Open Lead

14 Break Par In Scoring Scramble

10 Others Equal Course Standard With 72s; Parks Has 76.

New Record for Crown Is Seen; Picard, Revolta Both Have 70s.

By Dave Herman,
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltusrol Golf Club, Springfield, N. J., June 4.—After the wildest opening day scoring scramble in history, during which 14 golfers shattered par and 10 others equaled it, 3 young professionals—Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y.; Ray Mangrum, of Dayton, Ohio, and Clarence Clark, of Bloomfield, N. J., swept into a three-way tie for the lead with rounds of 69, 3 under par, in the National Open championship here today.

Over this hallowed turf, where 33 years ago the immortal Willie Anderson stroked his way to the Open championship, and the equally great Jerry Travers, an amateur, triumphed 12 years late, Runyan, Mangrum and Clark led a star-studded field of 168 pros and amateurs.

This was no day for the golfer who wasn't hitting his shots, and veteran observers were inclined to believe that a new record for the championship would be set before the last putt is holed late Saturday evening.

Picard, Revolta Next.

Hot on the heels of Runyan, Mangrum and Clark, neither of whom had been figured among the list of possible champions, came six other professionals, including the two favorites, Henry Picard, the Hershey, Pa., whirlwind, and Johnny Revolta, the Chicago sensation, present holder of the National P. G. A. championship.

They had 70s, 2 under par, and still that kind of golf didn't stand up under the relentless firing of the three siege guns.

In this class, besides Picard and Revolta were Vic Ghezzi, the dark young Italian from Deal, N. J., who looks like one of Mussolini's best lieutenants; Tom Kerrigan, 43-year-old New Yorker, making his best bid in years; Lester Madison, of Hollywood, Calif., and Frank Moore, of New York, the latter two unknowns as far as this championship is concerned.

Par also was broken at 71 by Craig Wood, unattached New Jersey pro, who was out in 34, 2 under par, seemed to have situation well in hand until he 3-putted the seventeenth for a 6, and missed a short putt at the eighteenth for a 5.

McCarthy Has a 71.

Harry (Light Horse) Cooper shot a 71, a six on the unlucky thirteenth, known as "death valley," ruining an otherwise almost perfect round. Ky Laffoon, Chicago; Ted Longworth, of Portland, and the powerful driving Chicagoan, Johnny Bulla, were others locked in a tie at 71.

Among the ten golfers who matched par with a 72 were Billy Burke, remembered for his marathon triumphant play-off with George Von Elm in the 1931 Open; Denny Shute, former British Open titleholder; Zell Eaton, the one-time Oklahoma caddy, and two

Lopez Outslugs Koverly in Mat Show

3,500 See Title Claimant Make Short Work of Foe in Feature.

By George Considine.

Thirty-five hundred spectators sat by the light of the silvery moon last night at Griffith Stadium to witness Vincent Lopez, so-called world wrestling champion, taming villainous George Koverly in one of the wildest slugging exhibitions on record.

The orgy, the shortest feature match in memory, went 14 minutes and was climaxed when Lopez whirled his adversary into the ropes and caught him on the rebound with a crushing right uppercut. Koverly was unconscious for ten minutes and had to be carried to the locker room.

Always cast in the role of a villain, Koverly took such a beating from the mountainous Mexican that he won the sympathy of the crowd for the first time in his local career. But then that was natural because he spent so much time out of the ring that he became chummy with the ringsiders.

Just Like a Swan.

Time and time again Maj. Brown's minions raced to the ringside to save Koverly from injury after being zoomed through the ropes by Virile Vincent. On one occasion both men were slugging away at each other a good 15 feet from the mat.

Only in the opening second did Koverly have any fun. He wobbled from his corner, snarled a bit and clamped on his favorite strangle. Lopez, wrought up over such an outrage, swung from the floor and Wild George began a seemingly unending series of swan dives through the ropes.

In the semifinal struggle-tussle Kansas City Joe Cox required 16½ minutes to disposed of Jim Wright with a combination uppercut and body press. Jim had things his own way until he threw Kansas City Joe out of the ring. That must have been where he made his mistake.

The customers were treated to a mighty struggle when Dapper Dean Detton and Chief Little Wold wahooed to a bristling 30-minute draw. Getting in and out of Indian deathlocks, the men kept the fans cheering throughout.

Pirates Beat Bees, 7-5; Suhr Wallops Home Run

Pittsburgh, June 4 (AP).—Cy Blanton again failed to go the route, but received credit for his second victory of the season today as the Pirates defeated the Boston Bees, 7-5. Gus Suhr hit a home run for the Bucs and Arky Vaughan batted safely in his sixteenth consecutive game.

Wiffy Cox Shoots 74 to Lead Four District Entrants in National Open Golf Tourney

By a Staff Correspondent.

Baltusrol Golf Club, Springfield, N. J., June 4.—Although cracking up on the final hole after playing 17 holes in even par, Wiffy Cox, Kenwood Golf and Country Club's famous professional, shot a 74 today to lead the quartet of District golfers battling for gold and glory in the National Open championship.

Standing on the eighteenth tee, Cox needed his four for a par 72, but unfortunately wound up with a six, result of a hooked tee shot smack into the rough, a trapped second and three putts.

Bob Barnett, red-haired Chevy Chase professional, was one stroke behind Cox, going out in 36, and returning in 39 for a 75.

Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range professor, scored a 41-37-78, after playing the last 10 holes in only one over par, with a three-putt green on the home hole.

Only District challenger who failed to break 80 was Mel Shorey, little East Potomac pro, whose eight fives and one six cost him a 39-41-80.

Cox Five Shots from Lead.

Cox is five shots from the co-sharers of the lead, Paul Runyan Ray Mangrum and Clarence Clarke, while Barnett is in a good position to strike back at the pace setters tomorrow.

Only a rebellious putter, which Cox never could control, upped his score today. The Kenwood tutor, opening with a birdie 4 and canning a 3-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the fourth, was 2 under par until he 3-putted the sixth for a 5.

Barnett Out in 36.

This Barnett had only one bad hole on the outgoing nine, the eighth, a 538-yarder, where the Chevy Chase pro knocked his drive into a trap, failed to get out with his seven iron, reached the green in 5 and putted carefully for his seven, which put him 2 over par.

Barnett birdied the first, and had a good break on the 186-yard third, where his tee shot scooted through the trap to within a foot of the pin, where Bob bagged his putt for a deuce. Perfect golf for the next four holes and perfect four at the ninth sent him out in 36.

Walper got his par 5 on the first despite three putts, and was even par for five holes. His bad hole was the eighth, where he was in the rough from the tee, trapped on his second, and took seven shots, just as Barnett did. From that point it was perfect golf until three putts from 20 feet forced him to imbibe a 5 on the last green.

Miss Hemphill Out in Links Tourney

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, June 4.—Slim, sun-tanned Miss Edna Saenger, of Shreveport, La., took the spotlight in the twenty-fifth annual Southern Women's golf tournament today with a startling 3-and-2 victory over an outstanding favorite, Miss Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., in the quarter-finals.

Miss Saenger was joined in the semifinals by Mrs. Mark McGarry, of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Miss Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., and Mrs. Leon Solomon, of Memphis, Tenn.

Mrs. McGarry shot her way to a 6-and-5 victory over Miss Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C.; Miss Jameson won over Miss Deane Van Landingham, of Charlotte, N. C., 5 and 4, and Mrs. Solomon eliminated Miss Jenny Grout, of Oklahoma City, 4 and 3.

Tigers Open Series With Nats Today

Minus the services of Manager Mickey Cochrane, the Tigers moved into Washington last night for a three-game series with the Nats, starting today.

Cochrane, who collapsed in the dugout yesterday at Philadelphia after beating out an inside-the-park home run with the bases full, was advised to rest for several days.

The Tigers' manager was treated for an hour by the Athletics' club physician who ascribed his illness to exertion and the strain and excitement of his recent play. He may go to the coaching lines during the series here, but will not appear behind the bat.

The Tigers will also be minus the services of Outfielder Al Simmons, who sprained his ankle in Philadelphia and is out of the line-up for a week.

Earl Whitehill will go to the mound for the Nats today. He will be opposed by Clarence Phillips, the Tigers' rookie right-hander who has made one previous start on the mound.

Detroit Ruins Athletics, 18 to 9

Philadelphia, June 4 (AP).—Scoring 10 runs in the third inning and 6 in the fifth, the Detroit Tigers walloped the Athletics, 18 to 9, today and took the series two games to one.

Fourteen Tigers batted in the third inning and, excepting Jack Burns, each score da run or more.

Mickey Cochrane, who with Pete Fox scored two runs in the third inning, gave the finishing touch to the batting spree by hitting a home run with the bases filled. Detroit batted around again in scoring six runs in the fifth.

Chicago Gives Yanks Worst Beating

White Sox Drub Leaders by 16 to 3; Bombard Four Hurlers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—The Chicago White Sox beat the Yankees at their own slugging game today, handing the league leaders their worst drubbing of the year by banging out 16 hits for a 16 to 3 victory.

They walloped four Yankee hurlers, including Monte Pearson, the league leader, while Johnny Whitehead was setting the vaunted New York sluggers down with four hits, one of which was Red Rolfe's homer in the third.

The defeat, suffered at the same time the Boston Red Sox were winning over the Cleveland Indians, cut the Yanks' first place margin to two and a half games, and gave the White Sox the current series 2-1 the first team to beat the New Yorkers in a series on their home grounds this year.

Zeke Bonura, with a double and two singles, batting in four runs Rip Radcliff, with a homer and a pair of singles and Luke Sewell, also with a homer, paced the White Sox batting attack.

Red Sox Rally, Again Down Tribe, 4-3

Grove Wins Eighth Game of Year as Boston Comes From Behind.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 4.—Bob (Lefty) Grove gained his eighth victory in nine pitching starts today when the Red Sox came from behind and turned back the Cleveland Indians, 4 to 3, for the third straight day.

The ace southpaw gave the Indians nine hits, passed four and hit Roy Hughes with a pitched ball, but managed to hold them scoreless until the seventh inning.

Two bases on balls and singles by Hughes and Billy Knickerbocker gave the Indians two runs in that frame and they pulled into a 3-2 lead in the eighth when Earl Averill tripled and scored on Pinch Hitter Ralph Winehamer's scratch single.

Mrs. Meckley, Helen Dettweiler Reach Finals in District Golf

Victors Meet For Crown Today

Mrs. Mackenzie, Mrs. Rhyne Defeated in Semifinals.

By Helen Dettweiler.

Early leads that they held throughout the play yesterday established Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring Club ace, and Miss Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional Club, as the finalists in the District women's golf championship.

Mrs. Meckley reached the title round by eliminating Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, 5 up and 4, in the semifinals. Congressional lost another of its title hopes when Mrs. J. O. Rhyne was beaten in the semifinals by Miss Dettweiler, 3 and 2.

The feature match of the day was between Mrs. Mackenzie and Mrs. Meckley, Maryland State and Middle Atlantic titleholder.

Mrs. Meckley won the first two holes to take a 2-up advantage right away, but Mrs. Mackenzie, always a tough match player and grand competitor, won the third and fourth to square it up again. Mrs. Meckley won the fifth, but only was able to halve the sixth when she failed to negotiate a stymie. When they rounded the turn, Mrs. Meckley was 3 up.

Mrs. Meckley Wins 13th, 14th.

They halved the tenth, eleventh and twelfth, both taking fine 3s on the long twelfth hole, and then Mrs. Meckley won the thirteenth and fourteenth to end the match. At that time the Indian Spring star was 2 over 4s for the back nine.

The other match in the championship flight was a battle all the way between Mrs. Rhyne and Miss Dettweiler. Miss Dettweiler won the first three holes with pars, but that lead was decreased on five when Mrs. Rhyne made a beautiful trap shot, and got herself a well-executed par in the face of a wind.

At the turn Miss Dettweiled was three up, but lost the twelfth to a fine three. Mrs. Rhyne was on the green with her tee shot while her opponent's ball found the rough to the right of the green. The next hole was won by Miss Dettweiler when her opponenet three-putted, and the remaining holes were halved until the match ended on the sixteenth green.

Mrs. Cooper Is Beaten.

Minor upsets occurred in two of the other flights when Mrs. Harvey Cooper, of Manor, lost to Mrs. E. L. Reed by the count of 2 and 1, and Mrs. C. D. Bills lost to Mrs. C. F. Rhodes, 3 and 1.

The final match for the title gives every indication of being an exciting one, for it is a recurrence of the Middle Atlantic championship. It will be fought on the same course, and the same contestants will be vying for supremacy.

In the fall match Mrs. Meckley flashed a brand of golf that left no doubt of the outcome, thrashing her opponent by the deciding majority of 6 and 4.

In this final match of the present tournament Mrs. Meckley has a chance to gain for herself the great distinction of holding three major titles at once, a feat never before accomplished.

First flight—Miss Helen Dettweiler defeated Mrs. J. O. Rhyne 3 and 2; Mrs. Betty Meckley defeated Mrs. Roland MacKenzie, 5 and 4.

Third flight—Mrs. K. S. Giles defeated Mrs. F. R. Keefer, 6 and 5.

Consolations.

First flight—Mrs. J. J. McCarthy defeated Mrs. A. A. McEntee, 2 and 1; Mrs. J. O. Scott defeated Mrs. Ora Emge, 4 and 3.

Third flight—Mrs. E. M. Amick defeated Mrs. H. A. Knox, 4 and 3.

Fifth flight—Mrs. A. C. Minnix defeated Mrs. O. R. Folsom-Jones, 1 up.

Sixth flight—Mrs. G. F. Goetzman defeated Mrs. W. C. Geleng, 7 and 5.

Seventh flight—Mrs. J. Y. York defeated Mrs. W. W. Hoad, 4 and 2.

Pairings.

Mrs. Jack Scott vs. Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, 9:35 (consolations).

D. C. Schoolboy Net Finals Is Brotherly Affair

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

IF, perchance, one has five minutes and ten seconds of reading time, one may partake of a thrilling preview of the Max Schmeling-Joe Louis fight as visioned by Herr Schmeling himself.

In the current issue of Liberty, Der Schlager graphically pictures himself eliminating the Black Menace from the championship scene and even calls the punch with which he will send Louis kicking.

It's all so exciting this department can hardly wait to relay it to you. So, without further ado, I quote Herr Schmeling:

"At the first bell we will spar cautiously. I don't promise any of the reckless, wild slugging attacks Max Baer promised and failed to deliver. Louis will shoot out lefts. He uses those to measure his men. They are purposely slow and purposely short to trap the stupid.

POVICH.

"I will carry the fight close. I always work better in close. My arms are short, and I punch fast. I believe I will beat Louis to many exchanges in the first round.

"In the second and third the pace will step up. A brisk tattoo to the stomach, one or two telling blows to the heart and a clever 'picture' boxer immediately comes loose at the seams. Then that right fist of mine will start to whistle.

"I don't want anyone to think I am cocky. I will not predict any particular round for an ending, but I am certain that I will not only beat Louis, I will knock him out. And with a right to the chin, crossed over his left lead."

My guess is that it must have been something that Schmeling et.

Herr Maxie builds himself up quite a case in his preamble before he gets around to telling exactly how he will knock Louis stiff. He is convinced, he says, that Louis won most of his fights before he entered the ring, with his opponents trembling at the elaborate ballyhoo which acclaimed the Negro as a killer.

Louis' killing qualities are strictly the bunk to hear Schmeling tell it to his readers. He asks who Joe ever knocked out in one punch, a la Dempsey. And he points out that he rained a thousand blows on Carnera and Carnera finished on his feet. There was Maxie Baer, says Maxie, who finished on one knee, got up quickly and then walked out. He says he can name a half-dozen cases where Louis grew arm weary trying to flatten a washed-up trial horse or a fading ex-champ.

A good right hand will beat Louis, and Maxie modestly goes on to say that he has that good right hand. "It's faster than Dempsey's and shorter," Herr Max asserts.

He has studied Louis and he knows how to fight him, Schmeling says. He has slow-motion pictures of the Negro in action and points out that the clumsy Carnera scored repeatedly with lefts to Louis' face. And with his ponderous slow arms straight out at his sides in scarecrow fashion. You cannot come in wide open like that against a clever boxer, says Schmeling, accepting the nomination.

It is a nice picture that Schmeling is drawing of his engagement with the Brown Bomber on the evening of June 18. There can be only one hitch. Louis might forget to follow the script. In that case, Schmeling would be in no condition for a retake, methinks.

In Short—

Don't underestimate this Schmeling . . . he's the only fighter in history who ever won the heavyweight championship of the world sitting down . . . they dropped the title in his lap when he claimed that Jack Sharkey had fouled him . . . fans who have been marveling at Red Kress' side-arm throws across the diamond of late would like to know, perhaps, that a painful stiff neck prevents Kress from throwing overhand . . . Pete Appleton is the only pitcher in the big leagues who winds up empty-handed . . . the last thing he does before each pitch is to take the ball out of his glove . . . he thinks it adds to the deceptiveness of his delivery . . . in attempting to swing a deal for Pitcher Jack Knott, of the Browns, Clark Griffith offered Outfielder Dee Miles to Manager Hornsby . . . but Hornsby insisted on a pitcher in addition . . . when Hank Greenberg permitted physicians to remove the cast from his broken wrist, he was greeted with the news that it would have to be reapplied for three more weeks . . . Joe Cronin is showing signs of panic at Boston . . . the Red Sox have presented a different line-up every day this week.

Irish, Swiss Davis Cup Play Is Deadlocked

Dublin, June 4 (AP).—G. Lyttleton Rogers sent Ireland away to a winning start in its third-round European Zone Davis Cup tennis test against Switzerland today by defeating the young Bulgarian-Swiss, Boris Maneff, 6—2, 6—3, 3—6, 3—6, 6—0.

Hector Fisher gave Switzerland an even break for the first day, however, by defeating T. G. McVeagh, 6—1, 3—6, 6—8, 6—0, 6—2.

Knight, Light Heavy Announces Retirement

Richmond, Va., June 4 (AP).—Joe Knight, Cairo, Ga., light heavyweight boxer, announced here today that he had retired from the ring and would accept a position at Daytona Beach, Fla.

The handsome, soft-spoken Georgian had worked in the professional ring for 11 years, reaching his peak when he fought Maxie Rosenbloom to a 15-round draw for the world's light heavyweight title.

Knight has been training at a local gymnasium for the past few weeks. Chris Dundee, his manager, commented, "he felt he was slowing down, and that loss to Al Gainer, at Pittsburgh the other night hurt his pride.

2 Ritzenbergs Win in School Net Play

Those racquet-swinging Ritzenberg brothers, Nate and Allie, succeeded in getting a monopoly on the final round of the Washington Interscholastic Tennis Tournament yesterday at Georgetown University. Nate subdued Zan Carver, of St. Alban's, 6—2, 11—9, while the younger Ritzenberg turned back Charlie Channing, of Central, 6—3, 6—1.

Repeating their performance of the District Playground Tournament last year, the Devitt Prep duo also took over a place in the finals of the doubles tournament.

Before meeting today to decide the singles championship, the Ritzenbergs must first encounter Charlie Channing and Ralph Adair, of Central, at 1:30 p. m. The singles commence at 3:30 p. m.

Allie, the younger Ritzenberg, met with considerable difficulty in turning back Carver, long the prep school champion of the Washington area. The versatile St. Alban's All-prep quarterback had set-point four times in the second chapter before dropping it.

He was within a point of evening the match at 5—4, again at 7—6 and twice at 9—8, three times failing on overhead shots.

Channing was vanquished with consummate ease by the older Ritzenberg. The Middle Atlantic champion was complete master of the situation with the exception of the early part of the first set.

Today's match between the Ritzenbergs will be more or less a re-enactment of the match between the two for the playground title last year in which Nate staggered through to win eventually.

Semifinals—Nathan Ritzenberg (Devitt) defeated Charles Channing (Central), 6—3, 6—1; Albert Ritzenberg (Devitt) defeated Alexander Carver (St. Alban's), 6—2, 11—9.

Three Get 69s; Tie for Lead In Open

Thirteen fired 73s. Mac Smith, one of seven who played in the 1915 open here, was in this group, thanks to a couple of deuces on the tough back nine. And there were Herman Barron, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., only Jewish top-flight golfer in America; Torchy Toda, from dear old Japan; Willie Hunter, former British amateur champion, and Ralph Guldahl, the lumbering Texan, who missed winning the 1933 open at North Shore by blowing a 4-footer on the seventy-second hole, and who today folded after being 2 under for 14 holes.

Famous figures in golf were bracketed at 74. Two of 'em were former Open champions—Tommy Armour, the dour Scot, 1927 winner, whose four fives on the back side spoiled a perfect outgoing nine of 36, and Olin Dutra, the Gay Caballero from California, who surprised with his victory at Merion two years ago.

Gene Sarazen, always a favorite, famous for his fighting finishes, started off as expected, shooting a 75. Sarazen, badly in need of a big title, three-putted the first three, and took four fives on the incoming side.

Cruickshank Gets 75.

But there were lots of big shots in the former British and American Open champion's class. Johnny Farrell, the host pro, golfdom's dapper Dan, was on fire for nine holes, scoring a 34, only to fold up for a 41 on the stretch.

Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, recurrent bombshell of National Opens, kept Farrell and Sarazen company. Some old timer gave Wee Bobby the golf ball Jerry Travers used in winning the 1915 open, telling him it was an omen of good luck. But the charm didn't work; his best was 75.

The National Open champion—Sam Parks, of Pittsburgh—was in there today, the fightingest guy you ever saw, battling to keep in the running. And he did nobly. His 76 wasn't bad. Playing with Revolta, he was thoroughly neglected by the gallery gods, the first defending champion in history who didn't have a gallery.

Even Walter Hagen, who also played here in 1915, had seven times as large a gallery, and The Haig did well by himself with a 74.

Runyan, 1934 National P. G. A. champion, not even close in his last four open trys, owed his sensational round today to an eagle three on the 602-yard eleventh that followed a birdie deuce on the tenth hole.

Cheers rent the air as the half-pint former Arkansas dairy boy holed out with a seven iron from 140 yards after he had planted two terrific woods shots down the heart of the fairway.

Out of nowhere came the big blonde Clarke. Late in the afternoon he popped out six fours and three 3's for a 33. He wiped out a 6 on the eleventh with a birdie on the thirteenth, and played the remaining five holes in even par for his tying 69.

Handlers Afraid Tow May Go Stale for Bout

By Bill McCormick.

Headaches have popped out all over the training camp of Bob Tow as it has become quite apparent that the Alexandria Adonis is faced with the possibility of going stale before the time to clamber into the ring for his 15-round battle with Marty Gallagher at Griffith Stadium next Monday night.

To increase the woes of those pulling the strings on the handsome bus navigator from across the Potomac, Gallagher gives every indication of rounding into the best condition of his entire ring career without too much trouble.

The commission medical authorities may have something to say about the entire matter after they examine both gladiators some time this afternoon, although it is generally conceded that they will find both athletes in perfect physical condition, as overtraining is not apparent upon the ordinary examination.

To avoid the bugaboo of overtraining, Tow rested Wednesday and did only seven rounds of gymnasium work yesterday. His work yesterday was closely supervised by Trainer Harry Groves who kept a watchful eye on his charge and called a halt at just the exact moment he felt Robert had done enough. Today Tow will work harder, unless Groves makes a last-minute change in his plans.

Gallagher, who, despite having achieved the low poundage of less than 210, seemed slow earlier in the week, yesterday showed that he was going to reach his absolute peak just at ring time—and not one minute before. He worked 12 rounds altogether yesterday, boxing eight and hammering the bags the other four.

The first sparmate to taste his wrath was one Jim McDougall, a colored heavy from Baltimore. Marty practically dismantled McDougall for two rounds, then called for a fresh punching bag. His next victim was Battling Mimms, also a colored heavyweight, who had been instructed to fight or lose his job of catching punches. Mimms did his best, which was pretty good for one round, but Gallagher's superior strength told the tale in the second, in which poor Mimmsy was considerably belted about.

Eric Lawson, a shifty light-heavyweight, ducked and dodged around Marty, annoying him considerably with a straight left for one round, but he, too, went the way of all flesh in the second. Tom Pontecarvo, the former Western Maryland heavyweight star, was the last to work with Marty. Big, strong and a good puncher, he was no match for Gallagher.

The advance sale for the bout, which has aroused perhaps the greatest local interest since Al Foreman and Goldie Ahearn had it out, continued good throughout yesterday, presaging perhaps a record crowd.

Sports Writers Claim They Play Fine Ball Game

High school baseball writers turned in one fine game yesterday at Roosevelt Stadium against the coaches' club. Flashing midseason form, the Scribes pounded many hits off opposing pitching and pulled off an epochal triple play.

Seldom if ever has such unusual, not to say unique, pitching been revealed as the sports writers unveiled yesterday. George Watt, the starting pitcher, hurled a first inning which will probably remain unequalled hitting the coaches' bats almost at will. The Mentors generously accepted seven runs in that first inning.

That triple play is worth mentioning. There was a member of the coaches' team on third and another on first when Rusty Thompson flied to right field. The right-fielder's throw home doubled the man on third at the plate and then Al Costello made it a triple play by stopping the game, taking the ball and stepping on first base which he claimed had been left by the runner before the fly was caught.

Rolland Lund, former University of Illinois athlete, now attached to Anacostia Senior and Junior High, pitched for the coaches. The score: well, the coaches eked out a 17-15 victory.

800 to Compete For City Track Laurels

The twenty-fifth annual Department of Playgrounds' elementary school field and track city championships will be held tomorrow morning at Central Stadium. More than 800 boys will compete for individual and school honors.

Each youngster who will run or jump tomorrow won his way to the finals by placing in one of the eight individual meets that have been held during the past two weeks. Medals and ribbons will be awarded the first five boys in each event and a cup will go to the winning team.

Adams School, the defending champion, qualified another strong team during the week for tomorrow's championships. However, the Nineteenth street school will have stronger opposition than last year. Of the 65 schools that have vied for honors in the eight divisional meets, at least 20 have squads strong enough to give Adams a tussle.

Wheatley, always a contender, has a large squad eligible and several star performers in both the running and field events. Peabody-Hilton has one of its best teams in years available for the finals. Bowen, Garfield division winner and a newcomer in the championship ranks will be heard from.

The first event will start at 9:30 o'clock and playground officials who conduct the meet expect the last event to be run at 1 o'clock. Presentation of the championship trophy will take place immediately after the meet.

G-Men Defeat Treasury by 3 to 2

Investigation Rallies in 8th to Capture Post League Game.

This Bureau of Investigation ball team is about as tough a problem to its colleagues in the United States Government League as it is to kidnapers. Yesterday the G-Men squeezed out a 3-to-2 victory over Treasury Department on the North Ellipse and then staved off a ninth-inning rally with the tying and winning runs on base.

The G-Men rally, which accounted for what proved to be the winning run, opened in the eighth with Morris' second triple of the game. Fisher lifted a long fly to the outfield to score Morris and give Investigation a 2-1 lead. Taylor followed with a single and Everett Russell beat out a scratch infield hit.

Roger Leverton, former Central High and University of North Carolina star athlete, batted for Thompson and shelled a Texas League double to center, scoring Taylor. Russell was nipped at the plate to end the rally.

Miss Fern Easily Wins Charles Town Feature by 10 Lengths

Dun Mist Pays $23 Mutuel In First

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 4.—Miss Fern, a miniature gray filly which had won only one other race in her career, made a show of her field in the feature race here today. With Apprentice Jockey L. Garrett confining his work to guiding alone, Miss Fern threw her hooves into the sticky, holding track and won by 10 lengths.

Small Change, from the Bond Stable, was played as if the race had already been run and won by the veteran gelding. However, he could only account for second money, far back and driving at that, to save the award from Topsie H.

Five others competed in the contest over the Charles Town course, slightly more than six furlongs.

Miss Fern, through her breeding, which shows Dunlin and Royal Fern, a pair of mudders, drew a substantial play in the mutuel machines and after her winning performance paid a $11.60 mutuel. There was little to the race from a competitive standpoint. Garrett had Miss Fern in front going into the first turn, and the farther the field went the greater was her margin until the boy decided to take in a few wraps.

Some 4,000 witnessed the day's sport. The track was left muddy and soggy by last night's rains and as it dried it became a tough, rough and cut up oval. However, a bright summer sun shone.

For the second straight day, the get of Flying Ebony won the daily double. Today, a pay-off of $37 was in order on Our Rose and Flying Dervish.

Dun Mist Returns $23.30

Dun Mist, with a $23.30 mutuel, upset the dope in the first race, leading the favored Justa Jimmie to the wire. Little Percy was third in the field of seven maiden juveniles. Justa Jimmie set a brisk pace, but was soon joined by Dun Mist. Turning into the stretch, Justa Jimmie ran out and it was a mere formality for Dun Mist to take the race.

Our Rose, a Havana campaigner during the winter, triumphed at the first asking here. Finding racing room along the rail in the stretch, Jockey G. Terhune, a rider from Cuba, sent the Flying Ebony mare through and then scored in a blanket finish that the judges had to separate. Mains Wander was second, beaten a nose, and Dixie Bee was third a head away. It was the most thrilling finish of the meeting to date. Our Rose paid a $10.20 mutuel.

Flying Dervish, which ran second here yesterday, came back today with a winning effort in the role of a $4.40 favorite. Sammy Palumbo did the riding and he was taking the big colt in hand at the end. Fools Folly closed a lot of ground to be second ahead of Cantide.

The fourth race went to Idle Worker with the greatest of ease. At the start Idle Worker was bolting through the gate and had a length the best of the getaway. Jockey L. Pikor held the Strolling Player gelding off the pace of Tell It until the back stretch was reached and from that point to the finish the winner was never in doubt. Peggy Can closed some ground to be third. The winner paid $7.60.

Lady Buck, an even money favorite, won the fifth race, a substitute affair over the five-furlong course. She scored a head decision over June G., in a finish that saw both horses "all out." Gagne took third money in the field of eight.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUN MIST, $23.20, $10.40, $5.20; JUSTA JIMMIE, $3.60, $2.80; LITTLE PERCY (entry), $4.00.

DUN MIST, off in a tangle, went to the inside for racing room, challenged JUSTA JIMMIE swinging for the stretch, rallied when put to drive and won going away. JUSTA JIMMIE, first away from the gate, set a brisk pace, but went wide entering the stretch or probably would have won. LITTLE PERCY, running forwardly all the way, could not threaten. LITTLE WHISK went evenly, but weil back. SUN BELLE was through early. The other two were outrun.

SECOND RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:02. Winner, S. B. Webb's b. m. (5), by Flying Ebony—Azalea. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:03 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR ROSE, $10.20, $5.20, $3.20; MAINS WANDER, $7.80, $3.80; DIXIE BEE, $2.40.

OUR ROSE, fortunate to find racing room along the rail at the head of the stretch, came through under severe punishment to be up in the concluding strides. MAINS WANDER ran TWENTY THREE into defeat leaving the backstretch, but could not resist the winner. DIXIE BEE, close to the pace throughout, took a brief lead inside the eighth pole, but faltered slightly nearing the end. CANOPIA closed a gap, but was cut down in the running. TWENTY THREE quit suddenly. MONOCACY was carried very wide entering the stretch after showing a good effort to that point. TITLE McGEE was a distant trailer.

THIRD RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:32½. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Bond's br. c. (3), by Flying Ebony—Belphrizonia. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:04 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING DERVISH, $4.40, $3.00, $2.80; FOOL'S FOLLY, $8.40, $5.80; CANTIDE, $3.60.

FLYING DERVISH, at home in the going and within striking distance of the leaders from the start, circled LOCH LONDON leaving the backstretch to take command and was being taken in hand in the final sixteenth. FOOL'S FOLLY was troubled by LOCH LONDON at the break, came through on the rail entering the stretch, and closed willingly. CANTIDE went forwardly all the way and had no mishaps. RIVER QUEEN improved position in the final eighth. LOCH LONDON crossed in front of horses leaving the gate, set the pace, but faltered in the stretch. BROWN HAT was poorly handled. OH ALBY went to the outside fence entering the stretch.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $37.00.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 3:59½. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Elliott's ch. g. (4), by Strolling Player—Dunworkin. Trained by L. Taylor. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDLE WORKER, $7.60, $3.40, $2.80; TELL IT, $3.40, $3.00; PEGGY CAN, $3.40.

IDLE WORKER, going out in front of the gate at the start, was eased along off the pace of TELL IT until reaching the backstretch, began drawing away approaching the far turn and was being taken in hand through the stretch. PEGGY CAN came with a closing rush after being outrun. GNOMNIE closed willingly from a slow beginning. MINT BUD, dropped back gradually after being in the first quarters leaving the first turn. MISS PATCHES was dully ridden and trailed after the first quarter.

FIFTH RACE (Substitute)—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:29. Off at 4:32. Winner, W. E. Elliott's ch. m. (5), by Buck—Lady Fanshawe. Trained by L. Taylor. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:04 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY BUCK, $4.00, $3.00, $2.60; JUNE G., $10.80, $6.80; GAGNE, $3.60.

LADY BUCK sprinted to the front at once, was hustled all the way while saving ground and had to be punished in the last eighth and just lasted. JUNE G., rushed into contention in the opening furlong, gained steadily on the outside and was wearing the winner down at the end. GAGNE went to LADY BUCK at the far turn with a bold move on the inside, but could not stay in the final drive. GEE SHARP went evenly. The others were outrun.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:58½. Off at 5:00. Winner, E. A. Nicodemus' gr. f. (3), by Dunlin—Royal Fern. Trained by H. Erickson. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
MISS FERN	(Garrett)	105	2	3	1²	1¹	1¹	1¹⁰	$4.60
SMALL CHANGE	(Palumbo)	116	1	2	5½	6²	2¹½	2¹	1.60

THE GEN	(Berg)	113	6	5	3¹	2ʰ	6²	6³	20.90
ADA CRUZ	(Tryon)	107	5	4	6²	4ʰ	7	7	14.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS FERN, $11.60, $4.20, $3.60; SMALL CHANGE, $3.20, $2.80; TOPSIE H., $6.60.

MISS FERN had speed to take command going to the first turn, opened a long lead without urging, and was taken in hand from the turn into the stretch. SMALL CHANGE, shuffled back leaving the gate, moved up wide, rushed to the inside entering the far turn and held TOPSIE H. safe in the final drive. TOPSIE H. went forwardly, but could not better her position after breaking on top. AUFOIN had to be on the outside all the way. JOLLY KING closed a gap from a slow beginning. THE GEN went forwardly for three furlongs. ADA CRUZ was forced very wide at the first turn and failed to rally.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, HEAVY.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:28. Off at 5:29. Winner, Mrs. D. G. Herring's br. m. (6), by Brown Bud—Bignonia. Trained by M. J. Hanton. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:56 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight

MOST ALWAYS	(Garrett)	113	4	1	1ʰ	3²	5	5	5	13.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROWN WREN, $5.60, $2.80, $2.40; BRIGHT SPIRITS, $3.00, $2.80; ARAB, $3.40.

BROWN WREN, excellently ridden, was taken in along the rail to save ground when outrun by MOST ALWAYS and BRIGHT SPIRITS in the first half, was sent to the outside for room and BRIGHT SPIRITS swinging for the stretch and closed courageously. BRIGHT SPIRITS ran MOST ALWAYS into defeat and continued gamely in the late stages to come again under punishment. ARAB closed a gap from a slow beginning and should improve. MORE PEP, running in tape, did not threaten. MOST ALWAYS quit.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Channel bass are now doing their stuff at Wachapreague, Va. Boats going to sea are returning with an average of eight, including a large number of sea bass, porgies, large trout (weakfish). The latter are being caught at the rate of 40 to 50 per hour—some fishing!

Many trout, croakers, kings, etc., are being taken on the inside, but average 25 to 60 per boat, which is considerably less than the ocean catches. Trout are weighing up to 8 pounds, a few larger. There are almost no bluefish being caught in this area. This column will announce the first run at Wachapreague.

With rain and continued hot weather, anglers can count on the blues leaving Oregon Inlet, Cape Hatteras, Beaufort and other North Carolina areas in a short time, because summer must arrive soon. Better get the white feathers out, sharpen up the hooks attached and get set—because if Ol' Sol continues to burn down his rays upon us we are going to see some of the best fishing in a decade, provided moderate winds prevail accompanied by much-needed rain.

Quinby, Va.—L. S. Corbin telephones that channel bass are becoming so destructive to the clam beds that it is necessary to fence in all of the commercial beds. One owner already has lost 40,000 choice clams. Anglers may be assured of a welcome from boatmen in these waters. Surf and boat casting are all that is necessary to catch the big red drum—up to 45 pounds. There is no limit to possibilities. If you want the channel bass, by all means visit Quinby.

Trout of the speckled variety, big ones, and many other species of salt water fish abound. Ocean fishing is also available from Quinby. The boats and rates are in keeping with good management, fair charge and excellent board and room.

Messick, Va., reports good croaker fishing, with everyone trying daily yet for boatmen going over to for the expected bluefish. No luck Buckroe Beach or York Spit Light. However, it won't be long before the bonito and bluefish will be taken by the same method—chumming.

Deal Island comes through with an astounding report. Quoting Capt. George M. Knachel:

"The party you saw aboard my boat on May 30 caught 570 croakers and 40 trout, some of the latter weighing 4 pounds. On the same day another party fishing from daylight until dark landed nearly 900 hardheads, medium size during the day but running large during the early morning and late sundown."

The writer refuses to comment on such large catches, not knowing their disposition. If distributed to the needy—OK; otherwise it deserves a check-up. We'll let you know about it in a day or two.

N. W. Middles, Solomons Island, and Benedict are only three of the hundreds of fishing grounds landing croakers in profusion. There is not much choice—the hardheads are here and it's merely a matter of how many you care to catch and donate to those that can use them. If you do not, call G. C. Ellis, Municipal Fish Wharf. Mr. Ellis will take care of your fish, gratis, if intended for charitable organizations.

If anglers follow the "Out Fishin'" tide table published herein every Friday they will be assured, weather permitting, of accurate tidal times and successful fishing trips.

The tide table will give times on the largest tidal area covered by any newspaper in the country.

Fishing for croakers is not expensive. The charge per day is approximately $10—ice, 75 cents, bait (peeler crabs) four dozen at 50 cents per dozen, ten sandwiches, $1—total, $13.75. Divided among five or more fishermen catching from one to several hundred croakers, an average for six anglers would be $2.30 per day.

Cubs Take 8 to 5 Game From Giants

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—The Cubs collected 18 hits off four New York Giant pitchers today for an 8-to-5 win and an even break in the short series.

Lon Warneke, chalking up his fifth pitching victory of the season, had little difficulty with any of the Giants except Mel Ott, who hammered out his eighth and ninth homers of the season, driving in three of the New York runs.

Dodgers Beat Cards; Daffy Is Loser

Eighth Inning Brooklyn Rally Accounts for 4-to-3 Verdict.

St. Louis, June 4.—Paul Dean failed in a relief-pitching role today and gave up the tying and winning runs as the Brooklyn Dodgers snapped the Cardinals' four-game winning streak with a 4-to-3 setback.

The Dodgers' eighth-inning uprising, good for 2 runs, resulted in the defeat being charged against the younger of the Dean brothers, his fourth of the season. Up to the eighth, Rookie Jim Winford had held the Brooklyns in check, yielding two runs and five hits before he was taken out for a pinch hitter.

Boom in Chesapeake Fishing In Prospect for This Week-End

According to late flashes received from boatmen operating in the Chesapeake and its tidal waters, this week-end should provide anglers with all the fish they have so patiently waited for.

From Solomons Island, Capt. Dick Lore phones "Mr. B. G. Storey, 1636 Kenyon street northwest, and party of four yesterday landed 67 large croakers near Cedar Point." Other boats in the same waters did equally well, indicating that Solomons Island fishing has arrived for the summer.

Fishing in these waters is apparently better in the afternoon, between 1 o'clock and sundown. Occasionally certain waters give to an angler the unexpected. Lloyd Parks, Crisfield, Md., landed a 9½-pound black bonito while fishing with Capt. Lore 1½ miles below Cedar Point—the first caught in these waters since 1930.

Capt. Harry Woodburn advises that he can accommodate anglers with good fishing for hardheads but says there are comparatively few trout being taken. His report should prove of great interest to local anglers who enjoy fishing around Solomons.

"Four of us," he says, "landed 125 large hardheads and one trout in 4 hours. A. F. Higdon and party of three caught 69 hardheads and 2 trout in the same time. With a northeast wind blowing Mr. H. E. Chase, wife and son landed 17 rockfish trolling with Junebug spinners and bloodworms, all were small—2 pounds."

South and along the western shore (reading down) Galesville, Chesapeake Beach, Plum Point, Solomons Island, Ridge, Point Lookout (Cornfield Harbor is not indicated, but any boatman at Ridge or Point Lookout can direct or take you to these delightful and exceptionally good fishing grounds for trout and croakers), continuing south, to any place as far as Buckroe Beach. Crossing over in either direction, North, either the bay side to Tilghman Island or the ocean side to Wachapreague. The latter named place is producing some excellent sea fishing.

Garnett Upsets Latona in City Net Play

Yelverton Garnett, 20-year-old sensation of the eighth annual City of Washington tennis tournament, pulled another startling upset yesterday when he trounced Tony Latona, fourth seeded player, 6—3, 6—1, to adance to the semifinal round.

In disposing of Latona the former District junior champion played a smooth, methodical game, hitting his shots with painstaking precision but not too much speed. Latona aided in his downfall by stroking erratically especially off the backhand.

Dooly Mitchell, defending champion, was given little more than a workout by the veteran Tom Mangan, who bowed in a quarter-final match, 6—3, 6—4. Garnett will be pitted against Mitchell today for the right to play in the title round.

In another upset, Bill Buchanan, the unseeded star of the event, added another seeded entrant to his list of victims by subduing Allen Blade, 4—6, 6—0, 6—2.

Today's matches indicate three other promising battles besides the Mitchell-Garnett fracas at 4:30 p. m. The match between Barney Welsh and Hugh Lynch, former Princeton tennis captain, will go on half an hour earlier. Welsh and Ralph McElvenny, National Public Parks doubles champions, will meet Garnett and Moorhead in the semifinals today.

Nats Lose, 6-2, Drop to 5th Position

to end their six straight defeats by the Nats as early as the first inning when, with two out, Moose Solters banged a Marberry pitch high into the left field seats for a home run.

The first of three St. Louis double plays choked off a Washington rally in the first, and singles by Reynolds and Kuhel netted 'em nothing in the second, but they tied the score in the third when the first of Ossie Bluege's three consecutive singles scored Jesse Hill, who had singled to left with one out.

The Browns bounced back into a 2-to-1 lead in the fourth, when Clift walked, stole second and scored on Bell's single to left that was only the second hit off Marberry, but Red Kress rammed a triple to centerfield in the Nats' half of the inning, and Walter Millies scored him with a single to center that made it 2 to 2.

Then the Nats lagged, but the Browns didn't. The pesky Harlan Clift smacked a double to right center to lead off the third and scored on Bottomley's single to right to put the team in a 3-2 lead.

With Appleton on the mound in the eighth, they made it 5-2 after two were out.

They made it 6-2 in the ninth when Carey tripled to right center and scored on Lary's fly to Hill, but like the runs in the eighth, that, too, was superfluous, because Hogsett gave the Nats exactly four hits in those last five innings and no runs at all.

With Buddy Myer reporting ill, Ossie Bluege was sent to second base by Manager Harris. Bluege showed the effects of his long layoff by going hitless in his first time at bat. He recovered to the extent of banging three sharp singles in his other appearances.

First Bluefish Arrive In Chesapeake Area

The vanguard of the hordes of elusive bluefish which each summer tantalize Chesapeake Bay has arrived.

Lem Orm, 820 E street southeast, last night informed The Post he caught 24 blues ranging from four to six pounds each while fishing on the Southwest Middles with Capt. Bill Drury yesterday. It was the first report of a catch of the fish in this area this season.

Orm also returned with a 45-pound channel bass.

Job and Wages Gains Are Led By Steel Mills

Employment Rises 4.7% in 25 Industries in April.

New York, June 4.—Manufacturing activity in the combined 25 industries that are included in the monthly surveys of the National Industrial Conference Board increased in April as compared with March. The number of workers employed was 0.8 per cent larger in April than in March; total man-hours, 2.7 per cent, and pay rolls, 3.2 per cent. Improvement was particularly noticeable in the iron and steel and allied industries. On the other hand, the textile, leather, and boot and shoe industries showed declines in total man-hours worked.

Average hourly earnings rose from 61.0 cents in March to 61.2 cents in April, or 0.3 per cent. Average hours of work per wage earner increased from 38.1 in March to 38.8 in April, or 1.8 per cent. The increases in hourly earnings and hours advanced average weekly earnings from $23.20 in March to $23.76 in April, or 2.4 per cent. Since the increase in the cost of living during this month-interval was considerably less than the rise in normal weekly earnings, there was a distinct gain in real weekly earnings, amounting to 2.1 per cent.

The conference board's survey shows that during the year-interval from April, 1935, to April, 1936, employment in the 25 manufacturing industries has risen 4.7 per cent; total man-hours, 10.7 per cent; pay rolls, 13.3 per cent; average hourly earnings, 2.3 per cent; average hours, 5.7 per cent; nominal weekly earnings, 8.3 per cent, and real earnings, 6.8 per cent.

Brokers' Loans Rise $208,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $1,176,000,000 for the week ended yesterday, an increase of $208,0000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $833,000,000.

Gold Payment Sought For Cotton Belt Bonds

New York, June 4.—The Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as corporate trustee under the first terminal and unifying mortgage bonds of the St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) Railway Company announced yesterday its intention of filing on behalf of all bondholders in the reorganization proceedings a claim for payment in Netherlands guilders, amounting to 2,490 guilders, or the equivalent of nearly $1,700 for each $1,000 bond.

The trust company is communicating with the bondholders to call their attention to a situation which, it says, may substantially affect their rights in any possible reorganization.

Pound Sterling Rises 1⅞ Cents to $5.03⅞

New York, June 4 (AP)—Demand for the pound sterling, reflecting the flight of capital from Paris on strikes and a further gold loss by The Bank of France, today lifted that currency 1⅞ cents to $5.03⅞, the highest since August, 1934.

The French Franc for immediate delivery declined .00⅛ of a cent to 6.58¼ cents, while Francs tenderable in 90 days sold at a discount of .52½ of a cent under the immediate rate.

Dividend Resumed By Allis-Chalmers

New York, June 4. (AP)—Directors of Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co., today declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock. This is the first payment since May 16, 1932, when 12½ cents was disbursed. The company is a large manufacturer of industrial and farm machinery and electrical equipment.

The latest dividend, which places the stock on a $1 annual basis, will be paid June 30 to stock of record June 15.

Railroad Net 2.18 Per Cent In Four Months

Earnings of 140 Class I Carriers Were 1.81% in 1935 Period.

Class I railroads of the United States for the first four months of this year had a net railway operating income of $146,112,621, which was at the annual rate of return of 2.18 per cent on their property investmen, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the bureau of railway economics of the Association of American Railroads and made public yesterday. In the first four months of 1935 their net railway operating income was $121,075,241, or 1.81 per cent on their property investment.

This compilation as to earnings for the first four months of 1936 is based on reports from 140 Class I railroads representing a total of 237,085 miles.

Gross Up 13.6 per cent.

Gross operating revenues for the first four months of 1936 totaled $1,221,270,856, compared with $1,074,680,303 for the same period in 1935, an increase of 13.6 per cent. Operating expenses for the first four months of 1936 amounted to $939,336,262, compared with $834,135,279 for the same period in 1935, an increase of 12.6 per cent.

Class I railroads in the first four months of 1936 paid $94,398,547 in taxes, compared with $80,104,823 in the same period in 1935, or an increase of 17.8 per cent. For the month of April alone, the tax bill of the Class I railroads amounted to $25,751,082, an increase of $5,361,242, or 26.3 per cent above the same month in 1935.

Twenty-nine Class I railroads failed to earn expenses and taxes in the first four months of 1936, of which 9 were in the Eastern district, 5 in the Southern and 15 in the Western district.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Drift Lower in Dull Trading; Government Bonds Yield; Wheat Strong.

New York, June 4.—Sales of stocks were only slightly higher than yesterday's total, but did not total 800,000 shares. Prices were irregularly lower throughout, the closing quotations being near the worst. Bonds also were slack. Government issues weakened a little. September wheat closed 1½ cents higher at 86¼ cents a bushel.

Stock markets these early June days are alike as the peas in a can of soup, and about as tasteless. Opening prices today were changed mighty little from the closing quotations yesterday and in the first half-hour or so the tone was mildly firm. Then as interest slackened and as the news multiplied of labor and currency disorders abroad and political campaigns at home, both prices and the volume of dealings suffered. No rush to sell developed, but neither was enough interest taken to develop a rally on the background of good business news.

Speculation in stocks at the moment, for account of floor traders, outside profesisonals and the brokerage house boardroom habitues is decidedly slim. The market may be, as some of the opponents of speculation suggest, on a strictly investment basis, but it is a basis which, because of the absence of speculation, provides a thin market for buyer and seller, no matter what his motive. It scarcely is a market which could absorb fresh capital issues on a considerable scale.

Scattered Movements.

Stocks were anything but clannish. Such movements as took place were scattered over many groups. U. S. Steel slipped below 60 for the first time this week. Rails were lower, but loses were small. Central's range was half a point. Wheeling & Lake Erie, which gained 9 points last week, dropped 10 points on one sale. Chesapeake & Ohio continued to move against the trend.

Allis Chalmers sold off a little on dividend resumption, the first since May, 1932. Air Reduction, which has a dividend meeting set for next week, continued into new high ground. Certain-teed Products made a new low in the early trading, but rallied. Reynolds Spring brought its decline since the stock dividend announcement to 3 points. Motors were easier. Oils were steady. Du Pont was a weak feature of the chemical group. Mail orders and rail equipments sagged. Amusements, with the exception of Radio, held favor.

Schulte issues, including bonds, went down further on bankruptcy proceedings. Dunhill sank to a new low. Park & Tilford stayed out of the market. Huylers' preferred, stamped, broke badly to the lowest price on record. Metals were uncertain, but Cerro de Pasco climbed again.

Preparing for Action.

The new French ministry, headed by a man with strong communistic leanings, for all his reported conservatism, will take office tomorrow. In some quarters here the possibility was discussed of an early decree placing restrictions on the further export of capital from France, along with the licensing of gold for export. This would in effect be abandonment of the gold standard, leaving the matter of devaluation of the franc for the future. Such a measure scarcely would bring repatriation of French and other foreign funds, but would encourage through various channels the emigration of capital from Paris.

Meanwhile, the news from other countries is not calculated to allay the fears of those who fear a fresh outbreak of communism in various parts of the world. Travelers returning from Spain are amazed by the seemingly widespread popularity of communism in that politically torn country. Every hamlet is said to have its Karl Marx street, and strikes have brought the country's life to a standstill. Looking abroad, this country still seems to be mighty well off, but that is mainly because its stomach can hold the most bad medicine.

Brokers' Loans.

The drop of $94,000,000 in loans to Stock Exchange members last month was according to the pattern of the stock market's performance, partly in response to the higher margin requirements. Brokers' loans now are necessarily smaller for the carrying of the same amount of stock as formerly, as the customer must put up more of his own cash. Margin accounts doubtless were trimmed to some extent in May and few new ones were opened. Much of the new buying was for large investment account, involving cash, which tended to put down brokers' loans. If the Federal Reserve Board's rules are softened to permit brokers to borrow more than 60 per cent on stock collateral at the banks, the result might in a long run stimulate trading. To increase the brokers' borrowing power would mean mainly that the broker would have to call on his own capital to a lesser extent; he would therefore have more money for operating on his own account. What the brokers really want is authority to lend more to customers than the present 55 per cent.

Reorganization.

Thanks to the squawks of labor and a few communities that would have been affected by dismemberment of the Minneapolis & St. Louis, Congress is taking a hand in reorganization plans for the road. The result is some of the best unconscious humor of recent months. Senator Shipstead suggests ways of "keeping control of the railroad in the hands of its owners," whoever they might be when bond interest has been in default for 13 years. He refers to "the now established credit" of the road, and suggests that employe organizations might co-operate in raising $1,200,000 of operating capital. Not the smallest surprise is the promise of the RFC chairman, heretofore champion of stockholders in reorganization, to give the bondholders "sympathetic treatment."

Helping Traffic.

"Lowering passenger fares to 2 cents a mile is just another step in the campaign of the railroads to increase traffic," the Erie Railroad Magazine says editorially. "It has been in effect on the Western railroads for a long time and has resulted in increased business, and it should have the same effect in the East, where the density of population is greater." The Eastern railroads have, indeed, had a hard time to persuade the I. C. C. to let them reduce fares to increase traffic. Investors hope the foresight of the Eastern railroads in that respect will be rewarded by the predicted increase in revenues, which doubtless will be set out at length in the court proceedings to enjoin the I. C. C. from enforcing the lower rates.

Puts and Calls.

After a lapse of interest for two weeks a renewal of activity in options was reported this morning. Demand was chiefly for puts and straddles, the put bids being readily accepted by writers. General Motors puts for 30 days were offered 1 point down, A. T. & T. 7 down, United States Steel 2¼ down, Chrysler 4 down, and a put on Case for eight days was sold 8 points down. On the call side the only demand seemed to be for Radio with some options for 90 days being sold at market for $175.

Bank Clearings In 22 Cities Increase 17.3%

Local Volume Is 12.5% Higher Than Same Week Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—After touching the lowest point in 15 weeks, bank clearings for the five-day week ended Wednesday, June 3, rose again. First-of-the-month payments were included both this year and last.

The total for 22 leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, inc., was $5,541,939,000, against $4,725,460,000 for the same week of last year, an increase of 17.3 per cent.

This contrasted with a gain of 0.6 per cent in the previous week. Clearings at New York City amounted to $3,704,025,000 and were 17.8 per cent above the 1935 comparative, while at outside centers, the aggregate was $1,837,914,000, or 16.3 per cent in excess of the 1935 figure.

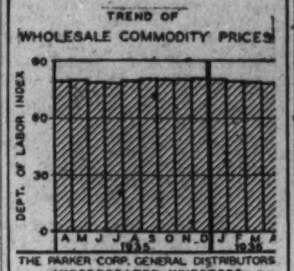
Commodity Prices Down 2½% in Year



Boston, Mass., June 4.—Wholesale commodity prices, as measured by the Department of Labor Index of 784 different commodities, remained relatively stable during the past year, but were just about 2½ per cent lower than a year ago. The largest declines were in farm and food products, while semi-manufactured goods increased slightly.

Wheat Is Strong On Drought Havoc

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Sharply higher wheat prices today resulted largely from reports 40 per cent of spring crop acreage is now deteriorating from drought, with considerable damage irreparable. One tentative suggestion was that instead of recent unofficial estimates of 236,000,000 bushels for 1936 domestic spring wheat production a nearer correct immediate forecast would be 150,000,000 bushels.

Woolworth May Sales Set Five-Year Record

New York, June 4, (AP)—F. W. Woolworth Co., reported today May sales of $22,621,875, a gain of 7.4 per cent over the $21,052,337 for the like month of 1935 and the largest sales for any May since 1931.

In the five months ended May, sales of $101,369,940 represented a 2.1 per cent gain over the corresponding 1935 period.

$1,575,000 in Cars For Pere Marquette

By the Associated Press.

The Pere Marquette Railway asked Interstate Commerce Authority yesterday to issue $1,260,000 of 2½ per cent Equipment Trust certificates, proceeds from which would be used to aid in financing the purchase of new equipment estimated to cost $1,575,000.

The equipment consists of 400 40-ton steel automobile cars equipped with auto-loaders and 100 40-ton steel automobile-furniture cars.

April Issues, $751,012,738, Set SEC Peak

More Than 75 Per Cent of Proceeds to Be Used for Refunding.

The monthly analysis of statements registered under the securities act shows that in April securities with estimated gross proceeds of $751,012,738 became fully effective, setting a new high figure for a single monthly period. This compares with $583,391,363—the previous record—for March, 1936, and $154,596,548 for April, 1935.

More than 75 per cent of the net cash proceeds from the sale of the registered securities are intended to be used for repayment of indebtedness; about 4.5 per cent for additional working capital, and somewhat more than 6.2 per cent—the highest amount yet reported by registrants for any single month—for plant, equipment and other assets. In addition, 10.2 per cent was to be used for purchase of securities by investment companies; 3.8 per cent for retirement of preferred stock issues; and 0.3 per cent for various other purposes.

3 Per Cent by New Companies.

Almost 97 per cent of the securities to be offered for the account of the registrants represented flotations by already established enterprises and slightly more than 3 per cent represented initial public offerings of newly organized companies.

Manufacturing companies, with 35.1 per cent of the total gross amount of registrations, were the chief registrants—largely as a result of 4 large registrations for steel companies aggregating more than $154,000,000. The utilities accounted for 27.2 per cent of the total registrations and the transportation and communication companies, the total for which included the $110,000,000 Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit issues, amounted to 20.7 per cent.

About 66 per cent of the total of the April registrations was for secured bonds and debentures; more than 22 per cent was for common stock issues—reflecting the increased use, recently, of equity stock financed by non-promotional companies—about 7 per cent for preferred stock issues; the remainder, about 5 per cent, represented certificates of participation, beneficial interest, warrants and other miscellaneous types of securities.

Circulation Gains $51,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve banks last night showed that demands for month-end cash caused money in circulation to jump $51,000,000 during the week ended June 3, bringing total circulation to $5,953,000,000.

Member bank reserve balances decreased $34,000,000 to a total of $5,713,000,000, an amount still $2,840,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Treasury cash with reserve banks slumped $32,00,000 during the week, representing transfers to commercial institutions.

The inflow of gold, which began several weeks ago with a fresh weakness of the French franc, continued during the week, resulting in an increase of $21,000,000 in American stocks, bringing the total to $10,409,000,000.

Marcel, First To Give Lasting Hair Wave, Dies

Frenchman, 84, Once Poor Barber, Was Wealthy at His Death.

By the Associated Press.

Berney, France, June 4.—Marcel Grateau, inventor of the marcel wave, was buried here today. He died at his Chateau Sunday.

Grateau, who was 84, invented the popular method of waving women's hair in 1887 after he had once been discharged from a large hair-dressing shop for being clumsy and awkward.

He first tried the wave on his mother. His success made him one of the richest hair dressers in the world within ten years after he introduced his invention.

He retired in 1897.

Marcel, the famous Parisian hairdresse, began his career as a poor barber.

Friends say that when he went to Paris at 17 from the provinces, he damaged the coiffure of his first customer, and was discharged.

Then, the story goes, he earned a living for a while polishing the windows and glass cases of hairdressing shops. When he finally opened his own little shop, he charged the modest price of 20 centimes for a shave and 50 for a coiffure.

Success came when he discovered that by holding the curling tongs reversed he could wave straight hair so that it looked like his mother's natural curls.

At first, the women in his quarter called his new wave a "poodle style." For months, he begged his women customers to let him try his method. The first woman who consented found that her wave lasted five weeks.

"Fashions may come and go, but every woman yearns in her heart for wavy hair," Marcel said.

His fame grew as actresses and continental beauties adopted the new "poodle" coiffure. He opened a luxurious shop in Paris. Melba, the opera singer, became one of his patrons.

Marcel, who dropped his family name of Grateau, was often called Francois and also Henry Marcel. He said that by making a hair wave "lasting" he became "a benefactor to all womankind."

That Vital First Play.

The number of times that a contract is won or lost by the first play of declarer is amazing.

Apparently a great many players go on the theory (if such tomfoolery can be dignified by the term "theory") that the first play is in the nature of a preliminary, a sort of quick "warm up." They reach more or less automatically for a card in the dummy before they give the situation in general, or the special problem created by the opening lead, more than a cursory thought.

Obviously, the sensible method is to leave the card led in the middle of the table while the dummy is being spread, and only after a tentative plan of attack has been formulated to play from the dummy. In today's hand the declarer never could recover the error made on his first play.

SOUTH

♦ K 7 2
♣ J 10 6 5

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 dimd.	Double	Pass	1 heart
2 dimds.	4 hearts [final bid]

West opened the queen of diamonds and no sooner was the dummy spread than declarer reached for the five of diamonds, winning the trick with the king from his own hand. He then let the singleton spade up to dummy, intending to establish a spade trick for a diamond discard, or if West had the spade ace and didn't put it up, to "steal" a spade trick. But West hopped up with the ace and led the jack of diamonds. Now (too late) declarer saw his error. He had to play dummy's ace or concede the trick. In fear and trembling, the ace was put up and East ruffed. Since the only immediate entry to West's hand could be in the trump suit itself, East properly returned a trump. West won with the ace and cashed his good ten of diamonds for the setting trick.

Consideration of the bidding by declarer would have indicated clearly the correct first play. Since West had rebid his diamonds when vulnerable, missing the two top honors and with comparatively little compensation in other high honors (North's hand was testimony to this fact), it was likely that he held a six card suit. Declarer could afford to lose one diamond trick, but not two. In other words, he could not afford to have a diamond honor ruffed away in addition to losing the small diamond in each hand. That being the case, dummy's ace should have been played on the first trick. Next, to establish an entry to the South hand for a lead up to dummy's trump tenace, the king of spades should have been laid down. West would win and might give the partner a ruff in diamonds, but note that in this case South merely would drop his losing diamond on the trick. Now East could not put West on lead except by leading his one remaining trump, and therefore East could not ruff away South's king of diamonds.

Thus, declarer, by proper play to the first trick, would have held his losses to three tricks: one in trump, one in diamonds (East's ruff), and one in spades.
